Boko Haram terrorists are currently on a killing spree in Garkida town in Adamawa State. ×
Multiple sources from the town, who managed to escape to nearby bushes, told SaharaReporters that Garkida was on fire.

Andrawus Tarfa, one source, told our correspondent that the town was covered with thick black smoke. He said, "Boko Haram terrorists have invaded our town, all we hear is rattling gunfire, just as thick bellowing smoke has covered the sky."

It is not clear what damage the attack may have caused to human life and property, as the raid is still ongoing.

Spokesperson for the 23 Brigade of Nigeria Army in Yola, the state capital, could not confirm the attack, saying, "You have just given me the clue, I will get back to you soon."

Garkida?

Is that a Christian town?

Remi → Iskacountryman • 2 months ago

Yes, it is . It has been described as an “ancient missionary town” and the latest report on this incident indicate that 2 Churches along with the residence of a prominent Christian son of the town was burnt down, along with other buildings, none of which include a Mosque. BTW Garkida, along with several towns in the North East, can boast of over 100 years of Christian witness, borne by, among others, the Sudan Interior Mission (S.I.M).

Boko Haram (BH) have, ab initio, been very clear about their objectives, to wit, the establishment of a Caliphate and the annihilation of every religion, other than Islam, from the north, in the first instance. Their words, actions , ideology and body language say it loud and clear; and I wonder why complicit BH supporters, like you and this government, will not take them seriously and address them.
