Consul Campbell to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 5.)

My Lord,

Lagos, February 18, 1856.

I HAVE hitherto omitted, from various pressing matters requiring my attention, to bring to your Lordship's notice the subject of which the inclosed letter treats, namely, the purchase of slaves, ostensibly for domestic purposes, by the Sierra Leone emigrants residing in Lagos. This practice has long been a source of deep regret and sorrow to the missionaries, and the Rev. Mr. Crowther, as well as the Rev. Mr. Gardiner, under the impression that these people were British subjects, some time since applied to me to interpose my authority and put a stop to it. I was obliged to inform them that I had no legal control over the Sierra Leone people, unless they were born in the Colony, which circumstance constituted them British subjects. The reverend gentlemen, however, do not fail from the pulpit, and in their private intercourse with the Sierra Leone people, to denounce the purchase of their fellow-beings as a heinous sin; the Rev. Mr. Crowther in particular, himself a liberated African, in the most earnest terms, every Sabbath, exhorts his congregation against committing so great an iniquity, and evincing such gross ingratitude for the immense benefits conferred on them by the English Government, and the enlightened and philanthropic people of England who send missionaries among them. It is to be hoped that the efforts made by Messrs. Crowther and Gardiner will check the evil practice by the members of their different congregations.

With regard to the Sierra Leone people who emigrated to Abbeokuta before Kosoko's expulsion from Lagos, numbering, as the late Dr. Irving estimated, some 3,000, their moral retrogression has been lamentably greater: but it must be borne in mind that at least one-third of that number called themselves Mahometans; that another third had probably never professed Christianity, or even entered a Christian place of worship while at Sierra Leone; and that of the remaining third, excepting the comparatively few who attached themselves to and are employed by the Missionary Societies, many yielded to the pressure of the partial state of civilization existing in the Colony, and though there professing Christianity, took the earliest opportunity of returning home to free themselves from what they felt to be its trammels. Most of these people are residing in the neighbourhood of Abbeokuta on their farms, surrounded by their many wives and slaves, and have returned to their former idolatrous and superstitious practices.

This circumstance must have been a source of much pain and regret to the faithful missionaries stationed in the interior, and would have led them to despair of their work, had they not been cheered on to hope by the many converts they have made among the primitive natives, numbering in all, I am now well informed, more than a thousand; upon the fidelity of these converts every just expectation may be founded, as they have joined the Christian churches under every adverse influence—the fierce opposition of their families, the sneers and ridicule of their companions, and the bitter persecution and even painful torture inflicted on them by their priests and priestesses, with, in many instances, the sanction of their relatives. It is to be hoped, by the influences which are now at work, that less of this persecution will be met with in future by those natives who join the Christian churches in the interior, at Abbeokuta in particular. It is a gratifying fact that these converts cease to traffic in slaves.

It is right that I should inform your Lordship that, in the strict sense of the term, there is no such thing as free labour in Lagos, except what is imported, and even much that passes for free labour, that of the Gold coast canoe-men, is in reality slavery, for very few of them, excepting the head men, are really free men. I must also inform your Lordship that in consequence of the existing state of peace and security, all classes of the population of Lagos, native, Sierra Leone, and Brazilian emigrants, are now farming as well as trading; and that by adding the former occupation to the latter, the Sierra Leone people will, as well as the others, purchase slaves to cultivate their farms, for no native of free condition will hire himself to another to do farm work, such being regarded as exclusively the labour of slaves.

I have, &c.

The Rev. E. A. Gardiner to Consul Campbell.

My dear Sir,

I HAVE received your note, and am much obliged for the interest and very great trouble you have taken in the two cases about which I wrote you—Nancy Randle's and Mr. Johnson's.

I have always found the same difficulty with yourself, in obtaining from the people here an intelligible statement of their grievances, which, of course, occasions much trouble, and renders it difficult to pronounce a decision upon the matter in hand.

I will, if possible, get from Mr. Johnson a fair and open statement of the case, and hand it over to you. I have sent him out on business this morning, but perhaps by to-morrow morning I shall be able to let you have it.

I am truly grieved to hear of all the atrocities and outrages these Egbas are continually perpetrating, and fear it will lead, ere long, to something very serious.

There is one thing I have often thought of naming to you. I fear the Sierra Leone people are becoming very lax as to the question of domestic slavery. I have heard of many buying people, and saying that they have redeemed them. This redemption work ought certainly to be put a stop to. If the Sierra Leone people, when they redeem these persons, had, after a certain period, say when their redemption money had been paid in serving the family, to give them their liberty, the case would be different, but I never knew of any such case having occurred. The fact is, these poor creatures are got into the families of many of these Sierra Leone people, under the pretext of redeeming them, and they thus become slaves for life. It is even whispered that in some quarters they are obtained in this deceptive way, and then sold when opportunity or convenience serves their purpose to do so.

I shall certainly not fail to warn our people from the pulpit, plainly and faithfully, of these crying sins and abominations. I fear the Sierra Leone people are becoming, many of them at least, very degenerate. I see they will require by-and-bye to be held in check with a strong hand, or they will become undistinguishable from the common heathens by whom they are surrounded.

I remain, &c.
(Signed) E. A. GARDINER.

My Lord,

I HAVE received information, and from the source by which it has indirectly reached me I fear it is but too true, that a cargo of slaves, which had been shipped from some place on the south coast, had been successfully landed at Cape Frio, near Rio Janeiro, a few months since, and that another cargo, shipped from the Bight of Benin, had also been successfully landed about the same time at Camamou, between Bahia and Pernambuco.

Your Lordship may doubtless have already received information of these events from Her Majesty's Consuls in Brazil; I think it nevertheless my duty to report them, my information coming from a quarter likely to be well informed on such matters.

Consul Campbell to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 5.)

My Lord,

Lagos, February 26, 1856.

WHEN at Abbeokuta some of the leading Chiefs, as is their custom, paid me private visits late in the evening; I did not fail on these occasions to impress on them the impropriety of waging war against their neighbours.

Shumoi, the principal Chief after the Alake, and who holds the title of Basherun, or leader of the forces, on occasion of one of these visits, promised me that the Abbeokutans should not in future carry war towards the sea-shore.

Not long after my return to Lagos I learnt that he had started at the head of a considerable force to attack the inhabitants of a country called Esharbay, situate between the Mahi country and the River Niger.

Several weeks elapsing, and the traders of Abbeokuta not making their appearance at Lagos (in fact, they had been but twice in the previous ten months), considerable inconvenience and loss was thereby sustained by the commercial community, more particularly those who had vessels waiting in the roadstead for cargoes.

Thinking that a remonstrance from the Sierra Leone and other traders to the Chiefs generally, accompanied by one from me to the Alake, might have a moral effect upon them, I summoned the traders to the Consulate to confer with them on the matter; and, at my suggestion, they sent messengers with a letter to the Chiefs of Abbeokuta, deprecating their wars or forays against their neighbours, and pointing out how much they, the traders, were sufferers by the stagnation of trade caused by those forays; as the peaceful Abbeokutan traders, who take no part in them, are not allowed to leave their town while these marauding expeditions are absent. I also sent a letter by the same messengers to the Alake, reminding him that in a letter he sent to Her Majesty some four years since, and of which the Rev. Mr. Townsend was the bearer, he had expressed, on the part of his Chiefs and people, the most anxious desire that the River Ogun should be opened for their trade to Lagos; that the river had been so opened, and with perfect safety and security, for now upwards of two years; but that instead of availing themselves of it for purposes of legal commerce, the Chiefs and people were engaging in slave-hunts and plundering their neighbours.

These letters, I am happy to inform your Lordship, had the immediate effect of setting free the trade to Lagos, and the answers sent to the letters are most satisfactory as to the future; that of the Alake to me in particular: he declares that this last expedition of the Basherun's was undertaken contrary to the wishes of himself and the leading Chiefs, none of whom accompanied the Basherun, or allowed their followers to do so (this was really the case); that for himself he disapproves of these war expeditions, but that his authority alone is not sufficient to prevent them; he thanked me for sending the letter disapproving of these wars, and he had summoned the Basheruns to hear the letter read. The Alake further begged me, on any future occasion that I heard of any hostile expedition being in contemplation from Abbeokuta, to send and remonstrate with the Basherun, who, he states, will be sensible to any reproof from me.

I certainly shall not fail to comply with the Alake's wish in this respect; and as the Yorubas in general, and the Egbas in particular, appear to be a very malleable and impressionable people, sensible of the good already done to and being done for them; above all, of the utter absence of any sinister views in the endeavours now making to improve their moral and social well-being; I am not without the hope that they will abandon their marauding attacks on their neighbours, and devote themselves in future to legitimate trade and to agriculture. There is some prospect of their paying attention to the latter most humanising occupation; some of the leading Chiefs are already cultivating cotton to a hopeful extent, and others are following the example.

The Basherun and some other Chiefs have applied to me to obtain them the machinery for cleaning the cotton they have grown this last season; and as I am assured by a respectable person to whom they showed the fruits of their last crop, that they really have a quantity of that useful staple on hand, with which they will pay for the machines, I shall take on myself the responsibility of ordering by this packet several of the cleaning machines from England to be sent out forthwith, and for which I have no doubt those wanting them will gladly pay.

Consul Campbell to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 5.)

My Lord,

Lagos, March 24, 1856.

HAVING been urgently requested by the mercantile agents trading in the Benin river to visit them in a ship of war, in order to strengthen their position in the eyes of the natives, I applied to Commander Hickley, of Her Majesty's ship "Childers," the senior officer of this station, for a suitable vessel, and Lieutenant Williams, commanding Her Majesty's steam-vessel "Bloodhound," was directed to convey me to the Benin river; I accordingly embarked on board that vessel on the 2nd instant, and disembarked at this place on the 21st instant.

There are two extensive establishments situated some six miles from the entrance or bar of this river, one, belonging to Messrs. Horsfall and Co., the other, to Messrs. Harrison and Co., of Liverpool. The capital employed by these two firms in the trade of Benin, must fall little short of a quarter of a million sterling; a large portion of this amount is in merchandize, deposited in buildings on shore, to meet the wants of the trade, and certainly offers a great temptation to the natives. Another large portion, at least 30,000*l.*, is already in the hands of the trading natives in the shape of trust, that is, goods given to them on credit to trade with.

After I had been some days in the river, Mr. Henry, the agent of Messrs. Harrison and Co., arrived from the town of Warree, and he sent me a letter, of which I beg to transmit your Lordship a copy, requesting I would proceed up the river to the haunts of a set of piratical people, called Ejoe, or D'joemen, many of whom live altogether by plundering the canoes proceeding to the factories with palm oil, and do not abstain even from plundering the boats belonging to the establishments, almost in sight of them.

The agents of the other establishments concurring in Mr. Henry's request, I consulted with Lieutenant-Commander Williams, and it was determined to proceed with the "Bloodhound" to the towns inhabited by these piratical people, Mr. Henry undertaking to procure a proper pilot. We accordingly proceeded to Warree, once a town of great importance when the Slave Trade was flourishing, but now, in appearance, a deserted village; here a person was received on board the "Bloodhound," who, it was stated, from having been in captivity among these people, could direct us to their towns, and we left Warree early in the morning, under the pilotage of this person; after threading our way through numerous creeks, we came to a fine large open lagoon, with ample depth of water, along which we steamed rapidly till 5 o'clock in the afternoon, when we grounded. On our progress up the lagoon, which certainly leads from or into the Niger, we passed many villages and towns inhabited by E'joe men, but whom our guide declared to be peaceful traders. This might be the case with some of the villages, as the women and children all flocked to the water-side, expressing their astonishment and surprise; but at others which we passed, no women or children were to be seen, only armed men, looking stealthily from behind trees and the corners of houses, ready for attack or defence. It appeared, from inquiries we made, that we ascended the lagoon by which the late Mr. Consul Beecroft penetrated from the Benin river to the Niger.

Every effort was made to heave off the "Bloodhound," from the time she struck, 5 o'clock P.M., till 1 o'clock past midnight, without success. On renewing those efforts at daybreak, the vessel floated off with comparative ease, in consequence of the water having risen a few inches towards the morning. It was ascertained that the "Bloodhound" had received no injury. On pressing our guide, or pilot, as to the distance of the towns we were proceeding to, he evidently could give no account to be depended on, nor whether there was a sufficient depth of water for the vessel to proceed. On starting from Warree soon after daylight in the morning, we were led to expect that we should reach these towns in three hours, whereas, at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, we were still at an unknown distance from them.

Under these circumstances, and taking into consideration the great risk run of injuring the "Bloodhound" if we proceeded further without a competent pilot; that we were, at least, 200 miles from the mouth of the Benin river; and that frequent groundings of the "Bloodhound" would, by causing heavy labour and exposure to the crew to get her off, certainly lead to sickness, and so incapacitate the vessel for some time for further service; I informed the agents, Messrs. Henry, Cheetham, and Bryden, who were all on board the "Bloodhound," that I considered it most imprudent to proceed further without more correct information and a better pilot. We therefore steamed back to Warree the same day. On the following day, I had an interview with the principal people in the town, there being at present neither King nor Chiefs appointed to it. Being disappointed in obtaining firewood for the "Bloodhound," we, on the next morning, left Warree, arriving off the factories by 8 o'clock the same evening.

It is certainly desirable, if it can be done without running too great a risk with the vessel employed for the purpose, to make a people sensible of our power, who with impunity murdered the late Mr. Carr, when proceeding to take charge of the model-farm connected with Captain Trotter's Niger expedition, who also, without having been punished for the same, murdered two officers of Her Majesty's ship "Ayon" while peaceably and usefully employed in surveying the River Escardos, and whose piratical pursuits have been the cause of preventing the great commercial resources of the Benin river being gradually developed, the extent of the trade having been, as positively stated by the agents, stationary for some years at 2,500 to 2,600 tons of palm oil per annum.

Sir,

Fort Harrison, Benin River, March 12, 1856.

I HAVE to inform you that the lawful commerce of this river is very much impeded by a class of piratical natives, "the Ejoe men," who seize and plunder canoes coming down from Warree laden with our property; through this the native traders are prevented coming as often to the river as they otherwise would come, and none can come unless under convoy.

I am of opinion that you should make at once some hostile demonstration against this piratical horde to prevent our trade being thus injured. Her Britannic Majesty's ship "Bloodhound" is suited for the lagoon.

If you will consult other Europeans in this matter I think they will bear out my opinion.

Consul Campbell to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 5.)

My Lord,

Lagos, March 26, 1856.

ON my return to this place from a visit to the Benin river, I learnt that the woman Tinnaboo, assisted by the war-captains Ashambong, and others, all followers of the late King Akitoye, and who, with him, were reinstated at Lagos through the instrumentality of Her Majesty's Government, had, taking advantage of my absence and of there being at the time no man-of-war off Lagos, conspired to drive away the Sierra Leone and Brazilian emigrants, and the merchants, English and foreign, and to plunder them.

It appears they were so confident of success, and so close on carrying their intentions into effect, that they were discovered by some of Tinnaboo's men talking the matter over in the public streets.

Mr. Savage, a leading man among the Sierra Leone people, at once apprised Mr. McCoskry, who acted for me in my absence; an investigation took place shortly after at the Consulate, King Docemo himself being present, when the intentions of these people were ascertained beyond all doubt, and such measures of precaution and security taken as were in the reach of the merchants and the Sierra Leone and Brazilian emigrants; and four persons who had been heard to talk openly of the intended rising, were sent to the King's jail.

Her Majesty's ship "Childers," Commander Hickey, the senior officer of the Bights division, arriving a few days after, damped the views of the insurgent party, and gave a feeling of security to the other. Mr. McCoskry at once addressed a letter to Commander Hickey, acquainting him with what had occurred; copy of this letter I have the honour to transmit.

After hearing the statement of the merchants, and allowing the excitement of the moment to pass away, I summoned the leading men of the Sierra Leone and Brazilian emigrants, and urged upon them the necessity of exercising the utmost vigilance, and of preparing themselves for an attempt which, it was evident, sooner or later, will be made to drive them away.

Her Majesty's ship "Childers" having been since joined by the "Bloodhound" and the "Hecate," a feeling of security has returned, for the present; but, as these vessels cannot, with their other duties to perform, be expected to remain here much longer, I have addressed a letter to Commander Hickey for the information of Commodore Adams. This letter explaining the cause of the hostile feeling towards the merchants and the Sierra Leone and Brazilian emigrants, I beg to transmit a copy of the same for your Lordship's information.

From further information obtained, it is very evident that King Docemo knew of the intentions of his war-captains and the woman Tinnaboo, but that he is absolutely powerless to prevent them; for, 'tis certain that they actually sent for him to attend one of their meetings, when they, after having reproached his father for having concluded the Treaty with the English Government, which had been the cause of the suppression of the Slave Trade at Lagos, and of the very people (Sierra Leone and Brazil emigrants) who, as they state, had formerly passed through their hands as slaves, and been sold by them to the Portuguese and Spaniards, returning back to Lagos, and assuming a position of superiority which lessens them, the war people, in the estimation of their neighbours, told him they were now determined to expel them and the merchants, particularly the English. Docemo, after listening to them, remarked that they must act as they please.

On his return home he called together his immediate attendants, informed them of what had passed, and directed them to take no part with the insurgents, and on the outbreak of hostilities to put his valuables into a canoe and convey them to the British Consulate.

Acting Consul Mc Coskry to Commander Hickey.

Sir,

Lagos, March 18, 1856.

WITHIN the last few days there has been considerable excitement amongst the Sierra Leone and other emigrants resident here, in consequence of a report that obtained circulation, to the effect that a large portion of the native inhabitants seeing the growing influence these emigrants were daily gaining, and fearing the native influence would ultimately be lost, had determined to seize the first favourable opportunity to expel them, and at the same time plunder the "European" merchants. From investigations that have been made, I am satisfied the King did not approve of the measure, but his power would be unable to prevent it being carried out, if the Chiefs and Caboceers had decided to do so.

From what has already been done to prevent the break-out of the natives, there is now less danger than a day or two ago; but in case they should persist in the attempt to carry out their intention, the presence of your brig in the roads for a few days, or until the arrival of the Consul, will be sufficient to deter them, and will also reassure the immigrants and allay an excitement that has kept them under arms several nights in succession.

Consul Campbell to Commander Hickey.

Sir,

Lagos, March 26, 1856.

THE result of my interview, yesterday, with the leading Sierra Leone people, and the African emigrants from Brazil, as well as the information I have collected from various quarters, tend to confirm the statements in Mr. McCoskry's letter to you of the 18th instant. It is not the growing influence of the Sierra Leones and Brazilians alone which has led to the native population of Lagos, headed by the war-captains, seeking to obtain their expulsion; there is another cause which prompts this movement—the utter prostration of the Slave Trade, and the hopeless prospect of its being revived at Lagos.

The leaders of this movement, the war-captains, finding their occupation gone, and with their numerous followers being disinclined, or unable, to accommodate themselves to the new order of things, will most assuredly make an effort to rid Lagos of those whose presence, as they think, prevents a return of Slave Trade, and lowers their position with the natives.

I have therefore to request of you to make known to Commodore Adams, as early as possible, the present state of things at this place.

I wish the Commodore to be informed that Kosoko and his followers are in no way mixed up with this movement; it emanates altogether from the very people, the late Akitoye's followers, who, by the instrumentality of the Government, were reinstated at Lagos after the expulsion of Kosoko.

Although these Africans may not be British subjects, I have to desire that you will, nevertheless, take every suitable opportunity of informing them that Her Majesty's Government must, of course, cease to take any interest in the safety or welfare of persons who make such an ungrateful return for the asylum afforded to them at Sierra Leone, and for the freedom which they have acquired through British intervention; and you will say that if it shall be proved that any persons residing at Lagos have bought slaves for the purpose of selling them again, it will be your duty to require the King to expel them from Lagos, under Article V of the Treaty of January 1852.

THE first annual payment to Kosoko, agreeably to the Treaty engagement made with him by myself and Captain Miller, of Her Majesty's ship "Crane," having become due on the 31st December last, I notified to him that I was prepared to pay the amount he was entitled to receive, either in cowries or hard dollars.

I had no definite reply from him till a few days since, when on Mr. Peter Diederichsen visiting Epé, Kosoko requested him to inform me that the annual stipend to be paid by the Treaty would be of no service to him if paid in specie or cowries, as he would be obliged to distribute the greater portion of it among his Cabooceers; but that he would gladly receive the stipend in articles of ornament and utility, which he enumerated to Mr. Diederichsen.

As Kosoko has kept his engagement most faithfully, I hope your Lordship will approve of my gratifying his wish in this respect. Some of the articles he wishes to obtain are to be procured here; others it will be necessary for me to order from England.

It has long ago appeared to me very desirable to give the Africans, and particularly their Chiefs, a taste for articles of utility as well as ornament.

Under the sole influence of the Slave Trade they have sought to appear grand, not only in the eyes of their people, but of Europeans also, by dressing themselves up in the most grotesque costumes, such as were formerly to be seen in the theatricals at country fairs in England. It is hoped that a better taste and feeling will now prevail, and that, instead of investing their profits as heretofore in the purchase of slaves, they will be devoted to erecting more comfortable dwellings, and furnishing them with articles of comfort and utility; but the lead in this improvement must be taken by the Kings and Chiefs—it would not be safe for any subordinate person to show the example.

Lagos, May 2, 1856.

ON my way to the Benin river in Her Majesty's steam-vessel "Blood-hound," I looked into Palma, Kosoko's port of trade.

I found laying there four vessels loading with palm oil, one under English, one under French, one under Dutch, and one under Hamburg colours.

On landing I was gratified in seeing the extent of trade that was being carried on, and that the French mercantile house of Rigis, at Marseilles, which has a large establishment at Whydah, and factories at Accra and other parts of the Gold Coast, had, with great spirit and confidence erected, at an expense exceeding 2,000*l.*, very substantial stores, with a commodious dwelling for their factor and clerks, the materials for which had been sent out, with mechanics, from France.

The Hamburg house of O'Swald and Co., in connection with Mr. Diedrichsen, have also an establishment at Palma; and they intend, I am informed, sending out the frames of stores and a dwelling-house from Hamburg, to be erected at Palma.

This feeling of security on the part of the mercantile houses engaged in the commerce of these parts, will, I trust, be regarded by your Lordship as an indication of a new and better order of things than that which I found existing on my arrival at Lagos; and, together with the great improvement that is taking place in this town, the superior dwellings that are being erected, and the general security of person and property, will, I hope, go far to disprove the complaints that "my measures tended to impede native civilization."

In addition to the great change that has taken place for the better along the seaboard, it is stated by the Rev. Mr. Bowen, an American missionary, who has been for the last three years in different provinces in the north-west of Yoruba, and who is now here with Mrs. Bowen, waiting a passage by the packet to England, that a considerable degree of security exists along the roads between the various large towns in the interior; and that the traders are not now necessitated, as formerly, to wait the accumulation of large caravans for mutual protection, but that they proceed from one town to another, at their convenience, in small parties, with their articles of traffic, in security.

I felt sensible some time ago that a state of comparative security had superseded one of total insecurity in that part of the interior alluded to by the Rev. Mr. Bowen, from the circumstance of the large quantities of ivory which have reached Lagos during the last twelve months from the interior.

I am sensible that much of this improvement is owing to the present great diminution in the export Slave Trade from the Bight of Benin; still, if peace had not been established at all the large trading towns on the seaboard, as well as security for person and property there, and on the road from such large towns as Abbeokuta, the interior people would have found no market for the productions of their country.

To attain the present desirable change, I have devoted, in spite of great opposition from persons to whom I had a right to look for assistance and cooperation, much of my time and attention.

Consul Campbell to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received July 5.)

My Lord,

Lagos, May 26, 1856.

IN my despatch dated 26th March, I reported to your Lordship that, during my temporary absence on a visit to the Benin river, the woman Tinnaboo, joined by some of King Docemo's war Cabooceers, had formed a conspiracy to drive away and plunder the English merchants and the Sierra Leone people, but that their intentions had been discovered and thwarted.

Tinnaboo having been connected with a previous attempt of the same kind, and her conduct being overlooked by King Docemo, and relying on the impunity which had attended her from similar acts, proceeded to the extreme length of sending a party of her people to dispossess some men belonging to the King of a house their master, the King, had given to them; a severe struggle ensued, but Tinnaboo's people being more numerous, and going on this errand well armed, some of the King's men were severely hurt, and the lives of three of them were for several days in great danger.

By many of the old residents in Lagos, who have witnessed similar acts in former days, it is stated that this violent attack on King Docemo's people was made with the expectation that it would be resisted, as in times past, with fire-arms, and so lead to a general fight or civil war among the inhabitants.

King Docemo, on hearing of the outrage, roused himself from his usual state of apathy, and sent a party of men to apprehend the rioters; and the leaders, including Tinnaboo's husband, named Badda, were thrown into jail. Upon hearing this, Tinnaboo went to King Docemo's Council-room, where, by that time, all the Cabooceers had assembled, and demanded of the King, in the most insolent manner, why he had imprisoned her husband and people (her husband is a Mahometan, and an old slave of the late Akitoye). Her conduct was so unbearable that the King, backed by his Chiefs, desired her to leave Lagos in five days, as, belonging to Abbeokuta, she was in Lagos only on sufferance. She insolently replied that she would leave only when it pleased her. Upon this Docemo, unable to bear the woman's insolence any longer, retired to an inner room, and sent me an account of what had occurred, assuring me of his determination to expel the woman if I would obtain him the support of some gun-boats from the senior officer, then off Lagos.

On making King Docemo's wish known to Commander Hickley, of Her Majesty's ship "Childers," on the morning of the fifth day, he crossed the bar with five boats; their arrival was notified to the King, who sent messengers to Tinnaboo desiring her to quit the island before 4 o'clock P.M. Under this pressure, the woman would quietly have retired had she not been advised by one of the merchants to conceal herself until night, when he, with others, hoped, by presenting the vacillating King Docemo with a large quantity of cowries, to prevail on him to allow her to remain, and to conceal her on his premises until the gun-boats had left the river.

The evening having arrived, the King sent to me to say that Tinnaboo was nowhere to be found; on my recommendation he sent out a proclamation forthwith, threatening, with a heavy penalty, the party who concealed the woman; she was then compelled to leave her hiding-place, the house of a Sierra Leone man named Turner, and surrender herself to the King.

It being evident there was some tampering going on, not by ordinary persons, to induce King Docemo, through the prospect of obtaining a large quantity of cowries, to allow the woman, after all that had occurred, to remain, I sent him word that the gun-boats would not leave the river until Tinnaboo was fairly out of Lagos. On the following morning she was escorted across the lagoon by the King's people to the Abbeokuta-road, where she was met by several of her own people who had been previously crossed over; after waiting on her yam plantation, about five miles from Lagos, on the road to Abbeokuta, for several days, in the hope she would be allowed to return to Lagos, she proceeded, escorted by her numerous followers, to Abbeokuta, where she now is.

Just prior to Tinnaboo's expulsion the Egba traders arrived from Abbeokuta with the largest quantity of palm oil ever brought by them, at one time, to market. This woman's departure gave the greatest satisfaction to these traders, who, before commencing their trade, sent a deputation of their leading men, begging me to use my utmost influence to prevent the woman's return, as she was the cause of so many of their number losing money, and of their irregular visits to Lagos market; and I have also received a written message from six of the leading traders in Abbeokuta, who direct the operations and movements of their numerous body, thanking me for having assisted King Docemo to expel the woman, and entreating me on no account to listen to any propositions for her return to Lagos. It is the numerous body of traders belonging to Abbeokuta who, of its large population, have the greatest interest in the peace and tranquillity of Lagos.

It appears, from an estimate that has been made, that the quantity of palm oil owing by this woman to various merchants and traders exceeds in value 5,000*l.*; yet, with but very few exceptions, the merchants and traders to whom she is indebted, are only too willing to sacrifice their claims, by her expulsion from the town: indeed, her largest creditors have long given up all hope of obtaining any portion of their claims from her.

I have, &c.

Consul Campbell to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received July 5.)

My Lord,

Lagos, May 27, 1856.

I LATELY learnt with pain and surprise, that the cruel and barbarous custom which exists in the Benin and other rivers between this and the Cameroons, of destroying twin children, as well as the mother that bears them, prevails also in this town.

I came to the knowledge of this fact from being told by a person in whom I place great confidence, that a young man in whose welfare I take an interest, had narrowly escaped being put to death in consequence of his wife having given birth to twins. It appears that from some symptom or suspicion prior to the birth, the woman's accouchement was kept a secret, and that on her giving birth to two infants, they, with the mother, were immediately put to death, and the bodies doubtless sunk in the river; and in answer to inquiries that were made by the friends of the woman and her husband, the answer given was, that the woman died in childbirth. The husband of the woman was compelled to be a party to this to him most painful proceeding; for had he not assented to it, according to the barbarous custom of these people, his own life would also have been sacrificed.

From inquiries I have made of the Rev. Mr. Crowther, and some intelligent Sierra Leone people, I learn with pleasure that the barbarous practice of sacrificing twin children and their mother does not prevail in any part of Yoruba country; but, on the contrary, such an event as the birth of twin children is hailed with great satisfaction.

The inhabitants of Lagos are descendants of a Benin army, sent by a former King of that once powerful town and kingdom, some eighty years since, to subdue the inhabitants of the Island of Eshali, situated opposite to Lagos. Failing in accomplishing that object, and not daring to return, the army settled on the island on which the town of Lagos is built; the Captain, or leader of the army, constituting himself King. The barbarous practice of destroying twins has therefore its origin from Benin, where this and other frightful and barbarous customs, such as human sacrifices on the full and change of the moon, exist, and will continue so to do, until civilization and Christianity have made some progress in that town and country.

Although this barbarous custom may be an infraction of that Article of the Treaty concluded with the late King Akitoye, abolishing human sacrifices, it will, I fear, be very difficult to get the Chiefs of Lagos, men whose minds are sunk in the grossest superstition, to admit of it. I therefore respectfully suggest to your Lordship, that the abolition for the future of the cruel custom of destroying twin children in Lagos (it appears that here the custom extends to the mother, and even to the father of the twins), should, in a formal and special manner, be abolished by a Supplemental Treaty with the King and Chiefs of Lagos.

I was quite taken by surprise when I heard of the circumstance above reported to your Lordship; and I can only attribute to its rare occurrence, that the missionaries in Lagos were ignorant of the frightful custom existing in this town, in which so great a change has taken place within the last few years, that it may be safely said, that here at least the groans of the unchained slave have been exchanged for the cheerful song of the free and unshackled labourer as he proceeds on the river, bearing to or from market the fruit of man's innocent and lawful labour, not the victims of his avarice and oppression; that the large buildings still called barracoons (a name unpleasing to English ears) are now filled with an article of legitimate commerce, instead of unhappy captives, the clank of whose chains have happily been superseded by "the sound of the church-going bell."

Consul Campbell to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received July 31.)

My Lord,

Lagos, June 14, 1856.

IT will, I feel sure, be satisfactory to Her Majesty's Government to learn that its energetic and successful interference on behalf of the late King Akitoye, which led to the complete breaking up of this once great Slave Trade mart, is now, I may say, fast fulfilling the hopes and expectations which were anticipated would follow so decisive a measure.

From Cape Formosa to Porto Novo the Slave Trade may confidently be said to be extinct; at Whydah, and the small ports east and west of it, nearly so; and if the Chiefs of those small ports, Aghwey, Great and Little Popoe, &c., who are all under Treaty engagements with Her Majesty's Government, were threatened with its severe displeasure if they again permitted the embarkation of slaves from their districts, they would, I am well informed, use that as an excuse for refusing permission to the slave-dealers to embark slaves from within their jurisdictions. Whydah would then be the only point from which the embarkation of slaves could take place.

The trade in palm oil is increasing at all the ports in the Bight of Benin, and, if the revenues derived from it do not satisfy all the old slave-trading Chiefs, the profits of the lawful traffic amply compensate the masses of the populations who are now engaged in it; moreover, this legitimate and peaceful trade is working its beneficial influence in gradually ameliorating the condition of that large proportion of the population held in a state of bondage which is gradually becoming nominal. It is also making it the interest of the large bodies of people to whom it affords employment and profit, that the roads from and to the interior should be free from the brigandage which infested them in the days of the Slave Trade, and, happily, they can now be traversed in safety by small parties, and to a distance which has surprised me.

I have, in a previous despatch, in reporting to your Lordship the great improvement that has taken place of late in the internal communications of this part of Africa, mentioned that my passports ensured the safety of the bearers of them as far as the town of Illorin. I now learn that some Houssa and Nuffi people (self-emancipated emigrants from the Brazils) who some months' since applied to me for passports, stating that they were proceeding to Illorin, have actually reached their homes in those countries in safety, and have sent word to their countrymen living here, and who have been waiting some years for an opportunity to return to their homes, to obtain passports from me, and to venture to reach those countries. I accordingly complied with the request of a native of Houssa and a native of the Nuffi country, and gave them each a passport, with which they appeared confident of being able to reach those countries, and they have promised, on their safe arrival, to return the passports to me, with a notification in Arabic to that effect.

On mentioning this circumstance in the course of conversation with the Rev. Mr. Crowther, he informed me that Dr. Barth, the traveller, had taken with him to England two natives of Houssa, who are now in the care of the Committee of the Church Missionary Society, but that great anxiety was felt as to the possibility of these two men being got back in safety to their country. I entertain no doubt, my Lord, that, if sent here and provided with passports, and put under the especial safeguard of the Chiefs of the large towns, to be passed from one to the other without molestation, the two Houssa men would reach their country in safety.

No. 23.

Consul Campbell to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received July 31.)

My Lord,

Lagos, June 24, 1856.

THE late Commander-in-chief, Rear-Admiral Bruce, in a letter to the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty dated November 24, 1853,* recommended that their Lordships should cause to be built two or three small iron steam-vessels, not drawing more than four feet water, for service in the Bight of Benin and its lagoons and rivers.

The hostilities with Russia taking place shortly after, has probably been the cause of this judicious recommendation of the Rear-Admiral's not being carried out.

Several vessels of the description recommended by Admiral Bruce having since been built for service in the Baltic, and the peace having left them available for any other service, I beg leave most earnestly to submit to your Lordship the great advantages which will attend the following up of Admiral Bruce's recommendation.

Intercourse with the English is, comparatively, quite new to the Chiefs and people inhabiting the shores of the far-spreading lagoons of the Bight of Benin, as well as to those inhabiting the interior countries, and nothing has impressed them with an idea of our great power so much as a steam-vessel; and the taking the "Minx" steamer to Epé, a distance of at least forty miles along the lagoon leading from Lagos into the Benin river, was followed with all the results I expected. It made a great impression on the people of the interior, and, I have no doubt, materially assisted in giving weight to my urgent remonstrances against warring and kidnapping, and, assisted by other influences, has led to the present greatly-improved facilities and security to the trading people travelling in the Yoruba country.

Some change and improvement having taken place since the date of Admiral Bruce's letter to the Board of Admiralty, I venture to depart so far from the Admiral's recommendation as to suggest that one vessel of the description mentioned would suffice for the lagoon-service of the whole Bight of Benin, and that, instead of her being employed as a cruizer outside, that she should be anchored inside the bar (there is no better and more airy anchorage than off the Consulate), and that, instead of being wholly manned, that she should be in charge of an officer of the rank of second master, with one engineer, one stoker, and some fourteen or fifteen kroomen, and if an assistant surgeon could be added, a boon would be conferred on the European community of this place and the neighbouring trading establishments, at present without any medical man. There would, therefore, be only four Europeans constantly exposed to the malaria of the river and lagoons, who, in case of sickness, could be changed or replaced from the ships outside. The kroomen, when having no other employment, could cut mangrove wood for fuel.

The whole lagoon from Godomey (within fifteen miles of Whydah) to the Benin river is navigable for such a vessel as I recommend, and the lagoons and creeks from that river into that part of the Niger running through the Iboo country, are also navigable; the late Mr. Consul Beecroft having, in the "Ethiope," some years since entered the Niger from the Benin river by the same route taken by Her Majesty's steam-vessel "Bloodhound" in March last, the "Bloodhound" drawing nine feet of water.

I would with all deference recommend that the steamer should once a year proceed as far as Godomey, and twice a year, through the lagoon, visit the Benin river, and the lagoons from which the trade of that river are drawn, and in the event of some of the Iboo people at Sierra Leone desiring to return to their country, and of the Church Missionary Society carrying out its wish to form stations in the Iboo and other countries on the Niger, to accomplish their benevolent and Christian views, the steamer could, from this place, periodically convoy the Iboo people in their canoes and boats to their country, and keep up a communication between the agents of the Society here, and those that may be sent to the countries on the Niger, and by her visits and presence impart a feeling of security to the establishments that may there be formed.

When the steamer's services are required for these expeditions, the necessary complement of officers and men can be furnished from the senior officer's ship or others attached to the Bights division, who would rejoin their ship on the return to Lagos of the steamer.

A light draught of water being a great desideratum, I beg to suggest that the armament recommended by Admiral Bruce can be reduced to a medium 32-pounder on a pivot or traverse, two 24 brass howitzers, furnished with shrapnell as well as the ordinary shell, and a rocket-gun; I also beg to suggest that the steamer should not much exceed 100 feet in length, and that the accommodations for officers and crew should be made as airy as possible.

It is the universal opinion of all residents here and at the other towns and trading establishments in the Bight of Benin, that a vessel of the above description, anchored in this river, and devoted to the service of protecting the European establishments, giving security to the lawful commerce of all classes, would put an end to the concoction of schemes for the expulsion of British people and lawful commerce from Lagos, would impart a feeling of general security and give confidence to enterprises for the extension of the great trade of which this country is susceptible.

The success which attended the judicious and regular use of quinine by Mr. Consul Hutchinson, when serving in the "Pleiad" on the late Niger expedition, leads to the confident hope that if a similar plan is followed on board other vessels engaged on similar expeditions, mortality amongst the Europeans would be in a great measure avoided; and the malaria fever, if not altogether escaped, be reduced in virulence, and made more manageable under professional treatment.

The value of quinine underwent a good test on board Her Majesty's steam-vessel "Bloodhound" during the last season; Mr. Ryan, the assistant surgeon of that vessel, having administered it regularly to the officers and crew during the visits of the "Bloodhound" to the rivers in the Bight of Biafra and to the Benin river, when the crew (sixty-five white men) were exposed some forty days and nights to malaria, the only results of fever being five slight cases which yielded readily to medical treatment.

My Lord,

Lagos, June 26, 1856.

SOME few weeks ago it began to be rumoured here that Gezo, King of Dahomey and Whydah, was contemplating another attack on Abbeokuta, this time a combined one; that he had sent one of his own daughters (with a large present of coral and silks) to Kosoko for a wife, with a view to obtain his influence with the Jaboos to join in the attack on Abbeokuta; and that he had also sent large presents to the Chiefs of Ibadda and Ijaye, to obtain their co-operation also.

The population of Ibadda, which town is stated to be much larger than Abbeokuta, is mixed, and composed partly of people from Yoruba proper, partly of Egbas and of Jaboos; that of the town of Ijaye, which is stated to be smaller than Abbeokuta, is wholly so of Yorubas proper, and is governed by a Chief who revolted from his Sovereign the King of Yoruba, and who, it is stated, governs the population he has gathered around him, estimated at 70,000, with a rigour truly Draconic: he is Sovereign and sole judge; secondary punishments, not even that of being sold into slavery, are never resorted to ; death, and that inflicted with his own hand, is the sole punishment for all offences. Yet, and it may be thought strange, this man's authority and person is respected, and his mode of government approved of by a large population. Kidnapping, robbery, and other crimes, are said to be rare at Ijaye. Those who speak with horror of this Chief's severity, admit that his decisions are founded on justice, and that he is patient and impartial when presiding as sole judge and arbiter. If this be the case, and it is generally represented to be so, the moral to be drawn is, that the only method to well govern an uncivilized population (in Africa at least) is by impartiality and justice, untempered with mercy.

It is from this Chief and people that the Abbeokutans most fear Gezo will obtain co-operation. In Ibadda the Egba portion of the population, it is said, can oppose Gezo's views.

I did not fail to acquaint the Alake and Chiefs of Abbeokuta of the reports of Gezo's intention, current in Lagos, which obtained general credence, and which have since received confirmation as mentioned in the Chief's letter to me of the 18th instant, copy of which I have the honour to inclose.

From a private and intelligent source, I learn that the Chiefs of Illorin, after receiving Gezo's letter, sent messengers to Abbeokuta to inform the Chiefs, and that the Illorin messengers met those of Gezo in the town, and immediately informed the Alake of the circumstance, when they were apprehended. The fact of these messengers (selected probably to avoid suspicion) having traversed so great a distance without molestation, confirms my report to your Lordship of the great improvement that has taken place, and the security with which persons can now travel through the greater part of the Yoruba country.

Illorin being inhabited principally by Mahometans, and the Felatah or Foulah influence being great there, it is satisfactory to learn that they appreciate the position of Abbeokuta, as the town leading directly to communication with European traders near the sea, and are desirous to be at peace with its Chiefs and people.

I shall not fail to communicate with the senior officer and the Commodore (who I believe is on the south coast) on the subject of Gezo's intentions, and devise with them some means of thwarting them. It is evident from the great loss of income, power, and influence, through the very low state to which the export Slave Trade is reduced in the Bight of Benin, that the King of Dahomey is getting desperate.

Inclosure in No. 24.

The Alake of Abbeokuta to Consul Campbell.

Ake, Abbeokuta, June 18, 1856.

THE Alake sends his best respects to Her Majesty's Consul.

The Alake desires to inform the Consul of what he has recently seen of Gezo's intention of raising his expedition against Abbeokuta the second time.

What the Consul has heard is, without doubt, the fact ; it is evident to be so, by having seized four messengers, people from Ketu, whom the King of Dahomey employed for that purpose, and by whom he circulated a letter of invitation to the different Chiefs of the interior, the Chiefs of Ijaye and Ibadda, of Jaboo, and of other places, and as far as Illorin, with presents, to seek their assistance to carry out his intentions ; whom the Alake put into stock at Ake. These inhabitants of Ketu, whom Gezo employed as messengers, are four in number, two aged men, a woman, and a boy. One of the aged, named Aronu, he sent with the Arabic letter to a Mahometan, by the name of Amodu, at Illorin, who, after reading the letter, forwarded it to the King, who read it also ; and not desiring to break the friendship that exists between him and the Egbas, dispatched a speedy message to inform the Alake and the Chiefs of the Egbas of what he had learnt, without the knowledge of these messengers. Therefore, when they were returning home, were seized and bound as they had to pass through Abbeokuta. It is related by the messengers of the King of Illorin, that the King of Dahomey promised that if he would only assist him to destroy Abbeokuta, that Gezo will be satisfied, and will not care what will be done to himself and his town Abomey; he may afterwards, perhaps, be burnt, or taken captive, and the like; and that he is compelled, by the inability of his force, to seek his aid, of joining his force to annihilate Abbeokuta, because he (Gezo) imagines it to be a larger and populous town, more than he could destroy alone. The messengers of this Gezo are still in the stock. Of course the Egbas cannot do them anything without having a full information from the Ketu King, to know of him whether he has any knowledge of it, as they are his people. The Alake and Chiefs have, therefore, sent a message to him, who have not yet returned. But it is a pity to say that this town Ketu is divided against itself; a part of the inhabitants are friends of the King of Dahomey, to which, without doubt, these captured people belong; and the other part are, doubtless, the friends of the Egbas. It is also said that Gezo intends to attack Abbeokuta earlier, just at the close of the rainy season.

Consequently, the Alake and Chiefs beg Her Majesty's Consul not to be slack in his promise of duly reporting the present circumstance to the British Government; also to entreat them for some more ammunitions, and also one or two officers who would come to show them the way for using the cannons that are at Abbeokuta.

Lagos, June 26, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to inclose copy of a letter I have just received from the commercial agents in the Benin river.

I have sent off, this morning, to the senior officer, a copy of Messrs. Cheetham and Henry's letter, with a request that he will be good enough to render such assistance as is in his power for the protection of the agents, and the property of the firms they represent.

The only vessel attached to the Bights division at all available for this service, is the "Minx;" her draught of water is light, but her steam-power, only ten-horse high-pressure, is quite inadequate to her tonnage, 300 tons, and is unable to propel her against a current of two and a-half or three knots. Great difficulty was experienced on returning from a visit to Epé, the wind and current being both adverse; some of the tubes of the boiler gave way when it became necessary to increase the pressure of steam. The "Minx" is, in other respects, a most objectionable vessel for service on the coast of Africa; she has only four feet eight inches height between decks, far too little for persons below the common stature; but for persons who, like myself, have the misfortune to be above the common stature, it necessitates living altogether on deck, which I was obliged to do when I visited the Benin river in this vessel last year. She will, however, serve to protect the factories in the Benin river from attack and plunder.

With respect to the surmise of Messrs. Cheetham and Henry, that there may be a slave-vessel in the Forcados or Dodo rivers, situate between the Benin and the Nun river, and connected by innumerable creeks with the Benin, such a circumstance cannot remain long unknown to the traders who do business with the English factories.

The movements of Don Domingo Mustich, in the Spanish barque "Conchita," are suspicious and unknown; and it is not known here what has become of the Spanish brig which carried a number of passengers from Spain to Fernando Po, and whose fitments would be serviceable to her as a slaver.

With reference to the observation of Messrs. Cheetham and Henry, that punishment of the piratical Ejoemen failed, on the "Bloodhound's" visit to their haunts, through the incompetence of the pilot, I must differ with them in this respect. The pilot having, I believe, a good knowledge of the lagoons, had taken us in the deep water during the whole day; but when evening approached, and we neared the towns it was intended to punish, he had some misgivings, arising from fear or superstition, and took us from the four-fathom channel on the starboard hand, in which we were proceeding, to cross over to the other side, where there was no depth of water; we consequently grounded, and on sending boats to sound, we found that the deep channel we had left went a considerable distance.

One of the inducements which led me to consider it, under all circumstances, prudent to return, was, on learning from Lieutenant-Commander Williams, while the "Bloodhound" was aground, that there were on board but six rounds of grape and canister for each gun. Now, as there were several towns to punish, all with a thick jungle immediately in the rear of them, it would have required the whole of this supply to cover the landing-party at one town, while destroying the canoes and other property of the piratical Ejoemen.

On our return to the factories, it was stated that we had taken a pilot from the wrong town, Warree, many of whose inhabitants are suspected of complicity with the Ejoemen in their piracies on the trading canoes; and that we should have taken a pilot from the town of Battaree, whose inhabitants, having been slaves of the old King of Warree, and employed by him in punishing these same Ejoemen, had no friendly feeling for them, and were well acquainted with the lagoons.

As this was a matter on which we depended on the local experience of the commercial agents, they must be considered partly to blame for the "Bloodhound" returning without having accomplished the object for which she proceeded so great a distance.

Inclosure in No. 25.

Messrs. Cheetham and Henry to Consul Campbell.

Sir,

Benin River, June 16, 1856.

SINCE our last petition to you, on the visit of Her Majesty's ship "Bloodhound," for assistance to punish the piratical Ejoemen who infest the creeks around the palm-oil markets of this country, to the serious obstruction of lawful trade, we are sorry to have to report to you a great increase in their depredations. The creeks between this place and Warree swarm with them, and it is their avowed intention to attack Mr. Henry on his way to that place, in revenge, they say, for the visit paid them by you in Her Majesty's steamer "Bloodhound."

They say that your return on that occasion without punishing them was owing to the potency of their jew-jews; and relying upon such protection more implicitly than ever, they are becoming outrageous, and cause a serious loss to the British merchants trading here. Within the last few days they have captured three river canoes, having shot four men, and made about eighteen prisoners, who will be sold as slaves; to say nothing of the serious loss of property in these canoes besides.

Unless these pirates are put down, Sir, we believe it must result in the ruin of the lawful trade of this river, and thereby a great loss to our respective houses.

These Ejoemen are now so anxious to make captives, that it seems to us there must be some market within a short distance of Warree, where they can sell them, or they would not appear in such numerous bands; unless it is, as they state, with the intention to capture Mr. Henry while on his way to Warree. Can there be any slaver secreted in the Forcados or Dodo rivers?

When Her Majesty's steamer "Bloodhound" went up before to punish them, she failed through the incompetence of the pilot, and shallowness of the water; but they impute it to other reasons as above mentioned, and it makes them bolder than ever.

At the present time she could easily go up, as there is more water in the creeks, and will be during the rainy season.

We most humbly, but earnestly, beg your assistance in this case, as the bulk of the property thus seized in these canoes belongs to us; and further, Sir, we would state as our opinion, that such grave obstructions to the lawful trade can only have the result of driving those men now engaged in it to their old practices of continual warfare, for the captives they can make and sell to slavery.

We would beg an early answer, as much so as possible; our interests involved being so great, that it is necessary we should know what assistance we may depend upon, and take our measures accordingly.

We are, &c.

Sir,

Foreign Office, August 30, 1856.

HER Majesty's Government learn with much satisfaction, from your despatch of the 14th of June last, the great improvement that has taken place at Lagos and in the neighbouring countries, consequent upon the expulsion of Kosoko, and the measures adopted by Her Majesty's Government to put an end to the Slave Trade which was carried on from Lagos and the adjacent coasts; and with reference to that part of your despatch in which you state that if the Chiefs of the small ports of Aghwey, Great and Little Popoe, &c., who are all under Treaty engagements with Her Majesty's Government, were threatened with its severe displeasure if they again permitted the embarkation of slaves from their districts, I have to instruct you to make a communication to the Chiefs in question to the effect suggested by you, in such a manner as you may think best calculated to carry with it most weight.

Foreign Office, August 30, 1856.

I TRANSMIT to you herewith a copy of a letter addressed by Major Ord, who has lately been employed as Commissioner on the Gold Coast, to Mr. Labouchere, the Secretary of State for the Colonial Department, suggesting that a small annual stipend in the shape of presents should be granted to the King of Dahomey, in consideration of the losses which he has sustained by the Agreement which he concluded with Lieutenant Forbes in March 1852, for the abolition of the Slave Trade from the ports of his dominions.

I also inclose a copy of the answer which I have caused to be returned to a letter from the Colonial Department, in which Mr. Labouchere requests to be made acquainted with my opinion regarding Major Orr's suggestion; and in conformity with what is stated in the letter to the Colonial Office, I have to instruct you, if you should think it useful and expedient to do so, to found upon Major Ord's letter a communication to the King of Dahomey, stating that when he concludes a satisfactory Treaty with Her Majesty's Government, and faithfully observes its stipulations, his claim to an annuity from Her Majesty's Government will be favourably considered.

Inclosure 1 in No. 27.

Major Ord to Mr. Labouchere.

Sir,

The Hague, July 26, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to bring under your notice the subject of a communication I have received from the Rev. T. B. Freeman, of Cape Coast, having for its object the favourable recognition of the King of Dahomey by Her Majesty's Government.

2. Mr. Freeman, who is already known to the Colonial Department as the head of the Wesleyan Mission on the Gold Coast, has devoted himself for many years to the cause of humanity and civilization, and has great experience of the character of the natives, over many of whom he possesses considerable influence.

3. During one of his recent tours of inspection of the missionary establishments, Mr. Freeman received a summons from the King of Dahomey to visit him at his capital, Abomey; and on his return from this interview he communicated to me an outline of the subject to which it had referred; but as I was then on the eve of leaving the coast, and he was compelled to resume his mission labours without delay, the details were necessarily deferred until a later period, and I have only now received them.

4. It appears from Mr. Freeman's statement, that the King had been much affected by the purport of a letter received not very long before from Lord Clarendon; and that, being desirous of making a communication to Her Majesty's Government, he had selected Mr. Freeman as his agent for the purpose. This gentleman urged the propriety of his causing a letter to be written to make known his wishes to the Government, and offered, if he thought fit, to write one for him, as he had done in 1854. The King replied, that the missionaries could not be always visiting him to read and write letters for him; and he should much prefer, on the present occasion, placing him in possession of his views, and leaving him to make them known to the Government in the form that might seem most desirable. Mr. Freeman then acquainted him that I was on the coast engaged in inquiring into certain matters affecting the condition of the British Settlements, and suggested that he should request me to convey to Her Majesty's Government such communications as he might desire to make—a proposal to which the King at once assented, and which is the occasion of my now addressing you on the subject.

5. In substance, the King seems to have expressed himself to Mr. Freeman as follows:

6. Down to the time of Captain Forbes' first visit to him, he had personally engaged in the Slave Trade, that being the Trade by which, for many ages past, the Kingdom of Dahomey had been chiefly sustained; but from the time of Captain Forbes' visit, he (the King) had entirely ceased from taking any personal share therein. He had taken that step at great pecuniary disadvantage to himself, solely to gratify and meet the wishes of Her Majesty the Queen; and a hope had been held out to him by Captain Forbes that Her Majesty, in consideration of the sacrifice he was making in foregoing those pecuniary advantages, would kindly make him some small return annually, by sending him a supply of cloth, cowries, &c., by way of aiding him in keeping up, under his disadvantageous circumstances, the old and time-honoured customs of his ancestors, on which occasions he is obliged to make large donations to his Chiefs and people.

7. He had waited year after year to hear something from Her Majesty in regard to this subject, and had continued to suffer disappointment; but he had, nevertheless, extended his restrictions, bearing on the suppression of the Slave Trade, by prohibiting his people from engaging in the foreign Traffic in Slaves, and that his latest step had been to prohibit their being shipped from any of the ports in his dominions.

8. He declared that these had been his own voluntary acts, which he still feels disposed to sustain; and he now repeats his entreaties to Her Majesty kindly to consider his case, and the case of his comparatively impoverished country, and render him some little annual assistance of the kind he has mentioned.

9. He further said that he cannot interfere with the internal Slave Trade, that being carried on in all parts of Africa, but repeated that all shipping of slaves from the ports of Dahomey is prohibited.

10. He begs that Her Majesty will at once forget all past differences and misunderstandings arising out of the Slave Trade, and allow this communication to be considered on his part as an entire reopening of friendly intercourse with England.

11. He entreats Her Majesty to take such steps in favour of himself and Dahomey as may lead to an immediate influx of English traders into the ports of his kingdom, where palm oil can now be purchased to a large extent, and which trade he is anxious to encourage and promote by every means within his power.

12. Mr. Freeman further adds, in reference to this latter point, that since I left the coast, he has travelled along the whole seaboard to Porto Novo, which is considerably to the eastward of Whydah, and that all he has seen tends to impress his mind with the positive certainty that a great commercial change is passing over and through Dahomey. The manufacture of palm oil is increasing to an enormous extent; and at two small ports (the easternmost of Dahomey), Godomey and Contonea, two slave-merchants had converted their factories into palm-oil stores, and had shipped several hundred thousand gallons since the commencement of the season; whilst the thousands upon thousands of gallons which he saw at the quondam slave-ports proved the increase of the trade, and left no doubt but that it was being rapidly substituted for the ancient and illegitimate Traffic.

13. I would venture to observe upon the foregoing, that the information I obtained leads me to the conviction that the growing demand for palm-oil is fostering a trade which, whilst it exists, must be utterly destructive of the Slave Trade. We have no instance of the Slave Trade being supplanted by the spontaneous springing up of a legitimate commerce, and at once suppressed by external agency, and a profitable trade introduced calling for the manual labour of the slave; and its self-extinction becomes a mere question of time, depending upon the rate at which circumstances permit the trade to be developed.

14. It is the duty, as it is the desire, of the Government to aid this by every means in their power; and although the King of Dahomey may be mistaken in attributing to his own measures results which are properly due to our intervention, it may be a subject for consideration whether it would not be politic to encourage him in the course he has adopted, and whether substantial benefits to commerce might not result from the payment to him of a small annual stipend (in the shape of presents), as a reward for the sacrifice which the abandonment of the Slave Trade has certainly occasioned him.

15. The subject appears to be one not undeserving the attention of Government, and I have therefore not hesitated to comply with the King of Dahomey's request, and bring it under your notice.

I have, &c.

Inclosure 2 in No. 27.

The Earl of Shelburne to Mr. Merivale.

Sir,

Foreign Office, August 28, 1856.

I HAVE laid before the Earl of Clarendon your letter of the 9th instant, inclosing a copy of a letter from Major Ord, who has been lately employed as Commissioner on the Gold Coast, reporting the substance of a communication which the King of Dahomey wished him to convey to Her Majesty's Government, and suggesting that a small annual stipend, in the shape of presents, should be granted to that Chief in consideration of the losses which he has sustained by the abolition of the Slave Trade from his ports.

And in reply to Mr. Secretary Labouchere's request to be favoured with Lord Clarendon's opinion with regard to Major Ord's suggestion, I am to state to you that the King of Dahomey has already been informed by Mr. Campbell, Her Majesty's Consul at Lagos, that it is useless for him to think of entering into amicable relations with Her Majesty's Government until he shall have given proof of his sincerity by a faithful observance of the agreement which he concluded with Lieutenant Forbes in March 1852, for the abolition of the Slave Trade from his dominions, and by signing a Treaty similar to those concluded with other African Chiefs, which contain among other stipulations an Article for the abolition of human sacrifices.

I am to add that the reports which have recently been received from Her Majesty's Consul at Lagos, tend to show that the King of Dahomey has not acted with good faith in the engagements which he has already contracted with Her Majesty's Government, for in February last Mr. Campbell reported that an active revival of the Slave Trade had taken place at Whydah, the port of Dahomey, and it appears by despatches which have recently been received from Her Majesty's Consul, that in spite of the remonstrances of Her Majesty's Government the King of Dahomey has been making preparations for a renewed attack on a large scale on Abbeokuta.

Lord Clarendon directs me to inclose for the information of Mr. Secretary Labouchere, a copy of a despatch received by the last mail from Mr. Campbell,* showing the great improvement that has taken place in the countries round Lagos in consequence of the cessation of the Slave Trade; and I am at the same time to state to you that his Lordship proposes to transmit to Mr. Campbell a copy of Major Ord's letter, and to instruct him, if he should think it useful and expedient to do so, to found upon it a communication to the King of Dahomey, stating that when he concludes a satisfactory Treaty with Her Majesty's Government and faithfully observes its stipulations, his claim to an annuity will be favourably considered.

Consul Campbell to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received September 5.)

My Lord,

Lagos, July 14, 1856.

IN Mr. Consul Hutchinson's narrative of the Niger, Tshadda, and Binue Exploration, made in the "Pleiad" steamer, occurs, at page 254, the following observation:—

"But if the Government do not step in to put an end to the lawlessness of the 'Felatahs,' all ideas of a successful trade with the Niger, Tshadda, and Binue countries, may be given up."

Having had extensive commercial, and frequent personal, intercourse with the three large sections of the extensive tribe of Foulahs who have, at various epochs, during the last two centuries, emigrated from Massina near to Timbuctoo, and taken possession of the countries they now inhabit and rule over, viz., the country called Boondoo, situate at the head of the Gambia river; that called Footah Toro, situate on the left bank of the Senegal; and that called Footah Jallon, situate at the head or sources of the Rivers Nunez and Pongo; I beg, with every respect, my Lord, to submit my opinion, that any representation or appeal to the Felatah (Foulah) Chiefs and people to abandon their cruel predatory expeditions against the pagan inhabitants of the Soudan countries, would be of no avail, unless at the same time commercial operations were commenced for legitimate trade at points accessible to these troublesome and formidable people; and that it could at the same time be explained to them, that the countries ravaged by their fanatical energy possessed various articles of European value, for which the commercial establishments were ready to give in exchange those articles of European manufacture they (the Felatahs) are in want of, and which they highly prize.

It must be remembered that the accounts of Clapperton, Lander, &c., represent a numerous portion of the Felatah tribe inhabiting Soudan, as a peaceful, pastoral, and agricultural people; and if a large and mischievous portion of the tribe have been for more than thirty years past the great feeders of the former extensive Slave Trade in the Bights of Benin and Biafra, it was because they really found no other commerce existing in Soudan but that in slaves; the comparatively small quantities of ivory carried from the countries of Soudan by the Moorish traders of Tripoli, Tunis, &c., on the backs of camels across the Desert, representing but a minute portion of the valuable commerce the vast interior regions of Africa are capable of yielding.

To develop this large neglected commerce of the interior, the power of steam, and the highways of the Niger, the Tshadda, and their tributaries, must be made available.

The influences which generated the virulent fever that attacked the Niger Expedition under Captain Trotter, and which caused its failure, are now known; and the result of the last expedition up the Niger and Tshadda in the "Pleiad," proves that those influences fatal to health and life can be avoided.

There offer now but few and trifling obstacles for the profitable employment of capital in those parts of the Rivers Niger and Tshadda which, while affording some security to property, are yet within reach of the Felatah and other interior people; and, should some enterprising merchants be willing to embark in a commerce offering every prospect of success, and Her Majesty's Government be induced to support such enterprise by its countenance and influence, in sending a representative to treat with the Felatah Chiefs, and to point out to them the advantages of occupying themselves with peaceful, legitimate trade, instead of their predatory excursions against the unoffending Pagan tribes, I beg leave, my Lord, to tender myself for such service.

Experience has proved that the Mahometan Foulahs in all those countries before mentioned, of which they dispossessed the original occupiers, have, after a time, settled down to the peaceful pursuits of lawful commerce. Those of Boondoo have long since felt the influence and enjoyed the benefits of legitimate commerce with the Settlements on the Gambia; those of Footah Toro have had the advantage and reaped the profits of an extensive commerce with the French Settlements on the Senegal; and those of Footah Jallon have shown how highly they esteem a free commercial intercourse with Sierra Leone, and with the commercial establishments of the English and other merchants at Kykandy, on the Rio Nunez, and at the Rio Pongo and other points accessible to their enterprise. Gradually, in all the countries above named, they have abandoned marauding expeditions. As the Chiefs, the leaders of them, became rich, they felt disinclined to risk themselves again in slave-hunts, for such is really their warfare, and preferred the more safe and peaceful gains arising from legitimate commerce with the white man.

My Lord,

Lagos, July 16, 1856.

I HAD the honour to receive your Lordship's despatch dated 29th March, 1856,* transmitting copy of your Lordship's despatch to Mr. Howard, Her Majesty's Minister at Lisbon, and to Mr. Jerningham, Her Majesty's Minister at Rio de Janeiro, relative to the forcible debarkation at Whydah of several emancipated Africans from Bahia, instead of landing them, as these unfortunate people had stipulated for, at this place; in consequence of which act they fell into the power of the King of Dahomey, who put to death all the adults of the party, and retained their children as slaves.

I have also had the honour to receive your Lordship's further despatches dated 17th and 20th May, inclosing copy of correspondence between Mr. Howard and the Portuguese Government relative to this painful and, on the part of the Portuguese captain and supercargo of the brig "General Rego," disgraceful affair.

All doubt as to the fate of these poor people has long ceased to exist. Information of the occurrence came here from Whydah; and the Abbeokuta traders meeting those of Abomey periodically at the market of Ketu, a large town situate about equi-distant from the two towns, are too well informed of what passes at Abomey affecting their interest or security.

The masters and supercargoes of Portuguese vessels bringing African passengers from Bahia are loth to land them at this place, because I always urge upon them the necessity of their landing or destroying all the extra equipments put on board for the use of the passengers, and inform them they will compromise the safety of their vessels by not doing so. In the case of a three-masted Portuguese vessel, called the "Linda Flor," which brought across from Bahia the large number of 230 African passengers, I was very urgent that her extra equipment should be landed; and it transpired that the supercargo (under whose unders and directions these vessels mostly navigate, the master being what they call the "piloto" or navigator) had landed the large copper cooking utensils belonging to the passengers at Whydah. His object in so doing cannot be mistaken. The supercargo, however, had to pay their value to the Africans.

A small Portuguese schooner, the "Aguia," lately landed here 14 Africans from Bahia. The master, before leaving for that place, was solicitous to know from me whether his passengers had made any complaint. In this case the Africans had met with no difficulty, and they were landed with every particle of their baggage.

My Lord,

RUMOURS have been for some weeks past in circulation of the death of Gezo, King of Dahomey.

In speaking of the occurrence to one of the minor Chiefs of Abbeokuta lately on a visit to this place, he informs me that the circumstance has been known in that town for some months; also, that Gezo's son, who has succeeded to the Throne of Abomey, was urged by the father on his death-bed to follow up his intentions against Abbeokuta.

The son of Mr. Hutton, who has an establishment at Aghwey, some few miles west of Whydah, also informs me that about three months since the Yervogar, or Viceroy of Whydah, was suddenly summoned to Abomey, where he remained until lately. It is now generally stated that Gezo is dead.

A custom exists among most of the Pagan tribes of Africa of concealing for some months the death of their Kings, or important Chiefs, until certain, I fear, most barbarous customs have been observed before his successor can be proclaimed, and although the death of the King or Chief is well known to every person in the country, no one is allowed to speak of it.

Wawu and Possoo, two of the leading Chiefs of Badagry, have also died within the last four months; they will be succeeded, it is to be hoped, by younger men, not thoroughly wedded from childhood to the Slave Trade.

My Lord,

Lagos, August 18, 1856.

SINCE the month of January last, reports have from time to time reached me of the embarkation of cargoes of slaves at some of the westernmost ports of the Bight of Benin, Aghwey and Little Popoe in particular; the information I had received not being of a decisive character, I did not, at the time, bring the cases to your Lordship's notice.

I now, however, feel myself justified in reporting to your Lordship that I have good foundation for believing that no less than four shipments of slaves have taken place from Aghwey and Little Popoe since November last; these places are about six miles apart, and the embarkations take place about midway between them; the Chiefs supposing that by not permitting the shipment of slaves in front of their towns, they commit no infraction of their Treaty engagements.

The vessels that have carried away cargoes of slaves, are, I have every reason to believe,—one of the three vessels brought from Barcelona by Domingo Mustich; a schooner under American colours, sent out by Mr. J. A. Machado, of New York, and named the "David," or the "Alexander Mitchel;" a barque, also under American colours, sent by Mr. Machado from New York, and named "Hermitage;" and lastly, a brig direct from Havana, long expected, and supposed to have no nationality; she was consigned to Senhor Byetta of Aghwey, but loaded by himself and co-slave dealers.

I had received positive information respecting the two American vessels; the schooner, I am told, kept herself from observation at the Island of St. Thomas until preparations were completed for loading her; the barque, on the contrary, took in a ground tier of palm oil, and paraded up and down the coast with it; she anchored twice at Lagos for some days, apparently without a business object. She at length went, as I am credibly informed, to the Dutch Settlement at Elmina, sold the palm oil on board of her, took in a ground tier of water, and then proceeded to Little Popoe, where, in one afternoon and night, she received from the shore the remainder of her water, provisions, fire-wood, and slaves.

Lagos, August 19, 1856.

THE successful shipments, from time to time, of cargoes of slaves from some of the ports in the Bight of Benin (from Aghwey and Little Popoe, in particular), tend to keep alive the hopes of the slave-traders, and of their chief agents in this Traffic, the Kings and ruling Chiefs of the countries around, that there will be a revival of the Slave Trade in these parts; and the impunity which has followed the infraction of their Treaty engagements by the Chiefs of Aghwey and Little Popoe also tends to confirm the representations of the slave-dealers to their friends, the Chiefs, that England is tired of the struggle; that she has her war with Russia to occupy her attention (it is not yet generally known among the natives that peace has been made with that Power); and that Cuba and Brazils must have a supply of slaves, at any cost.

The evil influence of these successful shipments of slaves, and the representations of the slave-dealers, is felt even in this town.

I shall call upon King Docemo to exercise a proper vigilance, and to put his authority in force to prevent the shipment of slaves from this to Domingo Martins at Porto Novo; but I do not expect any energetic action from him in this matter, for, until some rigorous measures are taken with those Chiefs who have prominently and repeatedly broken their Treaty engagements with Her Majesty's Government, for the suppression of the Slave Trade, my representations to King Docemo, or any other native Chiefs, on Slave Trade, will have little or no weight.

My Lord,

Lagos, August 30, 1856.

I BEG to transmit to your Lordship a letter which the Supreme Civil Chief and the Supreme Military Chief of Abbeokuta have addressed to Her Majesty, and requested me to forward, together with the articles mentioned therein as presents.

I wrote to the Chiefs to ask them in what light the war drum sent by them as a present, was to be considered; that if they sent it to Her Majesty as a sign or assurance that they had abandoned their aggressive attacks on their neighbours, I could, in that case, forward it to England, sure of its being graciously received; that without such assurance, a war drum could not be accepted with pleasure by Her Majesty, who, anxious for the welfare of the Abbeokutans, above all things wished them to abandon predatory warfare, and to turn their attention to innocent commerce and the cultivation of the fruitful soil of their country.

To my letter no satisfactory answer has been received; I shall therefore forward by the first of Her Majesty's vessels leaving this part of the coast for England, the two leather cushions, which are most ingeniously worked, and the cloth, a specimen of the cotton manufacture of the country, but of average quality.

The rumoured attack of the King of Dahomey on their town early next dry season has, no doubt, called forth this letter from the Chiefs of Abbeokuta to Her Majesty, with the hope of obtaining aid; and there is no doubt that the King of Dahomey has (taking advantage of the ill feeling existing among the Chiefs of the other large and populous towns of Yoruba towards the Egbas, for having introduced the anti-Slave Trade English into the country, and for the assumption of superiority by the Egbas over the other tribes, the position of their town at the head of the navigable portion of the River Ogun commanding the trade from the interior to Lagos) been tampering with the Chiefs of Ijaye, Ibadda, Illorin, and Jaboo, to obtain their co-operation; as, without assisted by the people of some of these populous places, the King of Dahomey is aware his attack on Abbeokuta will be attended with defeat. It is believed he has met with no great encouragement from the Chiefs of the above towns; indeed, the Chiefs of Illorin, a town greatly under Felatah influence, at once sent to apprise the Chiefs of Abbeokuta of the King of Dahomey's proposals.

As the rainy season draws to a close, the King of Dahomey's movements will be closely watched by the Egbas, and his intentions become better known.

The Alake and the Basherun of Abbeokuta to Her Majesty the Queen of England.

Madam,

Abbeokuta, July 4, 1856.

THE Alake, or King, and the Basherun, or Field-Marshal, of the Egba nation and next in rank to the King, present their compliments to Her Majesty:

They congratulate the Queen of England and her Government for the conquest of Sebastopol, as well as for the Treaty which the Russian had signed with England; they hope and trust that it will be a lasting one to many generations.

Their object in writing to the Queen is to thank Her Majesty for many a past favours done to them; for the emancipation of their children and countrymen from the bitterest bondage of slavery, and put them in Sierra Leone; and not only so, but for allowing them to return to their native land; most of the fathers and mothers who had been deprived of their children, and who never dreamed of seeing them again, have had the pleasure of meeting their lost children once more in the land of the living.

All these had taken place, and still going on, during the reign of Her Most Gracious Sovereign Queen Victoria: May it please God to bestow his choicest blessing upon Her Majesty, and to bless the Prince Albert, Albert Prince of Wales, and all the Royal Family.

The Alake, or the King of Egba, and the Basherun, beg to suggest to the Queen and her Government, that they Egbas were agricultural race; their forefathers were not slave-dealers, but always paid attention to their farms, which occupation they, their children, were following, till the Ijebus, Iffeh, and other surrounding tribes, combined together and brought a large force or army, and captured most of them in their farms, sold some, and reserved others for men-servants and maidens.

Through the combination of other Powers, the Egbas' towns and territories have all been broken up, and they were made slaves under their conquerors, who taught them to war; but soon as they began to understand the art of war themselves, their conquerors, fearing lest they would rebel against them, killed the Egbas' war-chief, whose name is Lah-mud-dee. When they saw this they fled away from them, and came to Abbeokuta for refuge, where they are inhabiting now. And when they were here for some while, their former enemies, who had taken them for clients before, collected another large army against them at a place called Okay-owi-wi, or Oke-owi-wi, which war lasted for three months, ere they were enabled, by God's help, to defeat their enemies.

When few years elapsed, they were attacked again by another army, a very great force, from their common enemy. It was a bloody war indeed, but they gained a complete victory over their antagonist.

The last attack was that of the King of Dahomey, which was fought on Monday, A.M., 3rd of March, 1850; although it was of short duration, yet it was the hottest they ever fought.

And now they heard and saw that the King of Dahomey is sending presents to all other Powers to unite him to destroy their town, and introduce that abominable Traffic, the Slave Trade, which God and the British nation abhorred.

They beg to add, that were it only the King of Dahomey's power alone, they would not send to molest their greatest benefactor and the greatest friend they have under heaven.

They therefore entreat Her Most Excellent Majesty earnestly to assist them against those who mean to come and annihilate them and their children, and even those whom the Queen and her Government had set free from Sierra Leone and other places.

They have nothing to send to Her Majesty, for the frequent wars, which not only have destroyed their country, but all their property and wealth also, and they know that Her Majesty did not require anything from them.

However, the Basherun sent one gong-gong, or war-drum, two cushions, and a cloth, as a specimen of some of the production of their country, to Her Majesty, scarcely worth anything, and he begs Her Majesty will please to accept the offer.

Wishing Her Majesty long life, a good health, peace and happiness, and a long and prosperous reign, with these few lines your humble servants beg to conclude.

We beg, &c.

I TRANSMIT to you herewith an extract of a despatch which I have received from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Rio de Janeiro,* reporting that in July last a French vessel arrived at Bahia, with four Africans on board, forming part of the crew, and that the master stated that being short of his complement on the coast of Africa, he had shipped four free blacks, Her Majesty's Consul at Lagos making no objection to such shipment; and I have to desire that you will inform me whether the master of the French vessel has made a correct statement of the manner in which the four negroes in question came on board his ship.

Sir,

Foreign Office, October 20, 1856.

I HAVE referred to the Board of Trade your despatch of the 14th of July, in which you point out that commercial intercourse with Europeans might be made the means of inducing the Felatah tribes to abandon their slave-hunting and predatory habits, and that capital might be profitably employed in those parts of the rivers Niger and Tshadda which, while affording some security to property, are also within reach of the Felatah tribes and other nations of the interior of Africa; and I have to acquaint you that the Board of Trade has taken steps to bring the suggestions contained in your despatch under the notice of various associations and individuals connected with the African trade.

WITH reference to your despatches of the 18th and 19th of August, suggesting the adoption of measures of coercion against the Chiefs of Aghwey and Little Popoe, in consequence of their having allowed four cargoes of slaves to be shipped from their territories since November 1855, I transmit herewith, for your information and guidance, a copy of a letter which has been addressed by my direction to the Secretary of the Admiralty, requesting that Commodore Adams may be instructed to concert with you the adoption of such measures as you may jointly consider most advisable in order to make the Chiefs of Aghwey and Little Popoe answerable for having permitted their Treaty engagements towards Her Majesty's Government to be violated by the several embarkations of slaves reported in your despatch of the 18th August.

Sir,

Foreign Office, October 16, 1856.

I AM directed by the Earl of Clarendon to transmit to you the accompanying copies of two despatches from Mr. Campbell, Her Majesty's Consul at Lagos,* reporting that, since November 1855, several cargoes of slaves had been shipped from the territories of the Chiefs of Little Popoe and of Aghwey, in contravention of the Treaties for the suppression of the Slave Trade which were concluded by Commander Forbes, of Her Majesty's ship "Philomel," with the Chiefs of Little Popoe, on the 24th of January, 1852, and with the Chiefs of Aghwey on the 2nd of February, 1852.

I am to request that you will lay the inclosed papers before the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, and that you will move their Lordships to instruct Commodore Adams to confer with Mr. Campbell upon this subject, and to take such measures as they may consider most advisable, in order to make the Chiefs of Aghwey and Little Popoe answerable for the violation, in their territories, of the engagements by which they were bound to prevent the exportation of slaves.

Consul Campbell to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received November 8.)

My Lord,

Lagos, October 1, 1856.

I REGRET having to report to your Lordship that Kosoko, who has hitherto observed his Treaty engagement with scrupulous fidelity, is, by reports from various quarters which are entitled to credit, preparing to violate it.

It was always expected that he would render his assistance, covertly or openly, to the Dahomians, in their contemplated attack on Abbeokuta, which, at the earliest, cannot take place before January next; but this sudden move on his part has taken every one by surprise. His intention appears to be to remove to the town of Adu, within the territory of the King of Porto Novo, who is himself tributary to Dahomey; and in his progress thither, to effect a landing on Lagos, to devastate and destroy, and then proceed to his destination.

Immediately after concluding the Treaty with Captain Miller and myself, his trading port at Palma was visited by traders for palm oil. Three substantial and respectable establishments have been formed there, two belonging to French houses, one to a Hamburgh house; and the amount of business done at Palma nearly equals that at Lagos, from the export duties on which Kosoko must derive a good revenue. He is also a great trader, but he wishes to carry into this, to him, new legitimate trade, the same arbitrary and monopolizing policy that he pursued with the Slave Trade at Lagos, that of insisting that all cargoes should be delivered to him on credit, which he afterwards distributed, at monopolizing prizes; this has been resisted; however, credit to a considerable amount has been given to him, but as he fails to pay his debts, further credit has been refused by the French houses. The Hamburgh house, after resisting his importunities, have just at this time credited him largely.

Kosoko's position at Epé, the territory of the King of Jaboo, exercising, as he does, despotic sway there, must be regarded by the King of that country with jealousy and uneasiness; and it doubtless requires considerable presents from Kosoko to reconcile the King of Jaboo to Kosoko's imperium in imperio, which, however, does not diminish the jealousy of the inhabitants of that country against Kosoko's monopolizing sway over their trading operations with the factories at Palma. These considerations, with old recollections of the Slave Trade, and the influences of that Trade from Whydah and the Dahomian territory, together with a restless disposition, and, for an African, an unusual but ill-directed energy, have, doubtless, urged him to remove to a town where he is assured of a good reception, and will be, as he supposes, beyond the reach of English hostilities.

Commodore Adams has just arrived with a respectable force, and he will, doubtless, see to the security of Lagos being maintained against Kosoko's contemplated attacks.

My Lord,

Lagos, November 4, 1856.

SINCE I forwarded my last despatch dated October 1, Kosoko has made no movement, his intentions having been paralyzed by the presence of the steamer "Minx" in the river, and a steam-sloop at anchor in the roadstead. It is probable he will remain quiet until the rivers running from the interior into the lagoons become fordable, when the Dahomians will be enabled to move towards Abbeokuta, should they not, in the meantime, be deterred by the strong letter of remonstrance sent to the King by Commodore Adams.

It is the impression of persons here, of great experience, whose opinions are entitled to some weight, that Kosoko has been incited to attack Lagos by persons resident in the town. His movements are closely watched by the Chiefs of Abbeokuta, who appear to entertain a greater dread of Kosoko's machinations than of any attack from the Dahomians; a long-conceived plan of Kosoko's being, to occupy the town and country of Ottah, so as to cut off the communication between Abbeokuta and Lagos; but steps have been taken to prevent this, by pointing out to the Chiefs of Ottah how much better it is for them to be on friendly terms with their two powerful neighbours, Abbeokuta and Lagos; and they have sent messengers to the Kings and Chiefs of both towns, assuring them of their fidelity.

Consul Campbell to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received January 8, 1857.)

My Lord,

Lagos, December 4, 1856.

I HAD the honour to receive your Lordship's despatch dated the 14th of October last, transmitting extract of a despatch received by your Lordship from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Rio Janeiro, reporting that a French vessel had arrived at Bahia with four Africans on board, forming part of the crew, shipped within the jurisdiction of this Consulate with my sanction, and requesting me to communicate to your Lordship whether the master of the French vessel had made a correct statement of the manner in which the four negroes in question came on board his ship.

I have to report to your Lordship, that the statement of M. Bowyer, the master of the French vessel, "La Jeune Elise," alluded to, is perfectly correct.

The vessel belongs to the house of Regis and Co., of Marseilles, and is usually employed in voyages between their establishments on the coast and Bahia, bringing cargoes of roll tobacco and aguardiente from that port for the supply of the establishments.

On his last voyage to Bahia, M. Bowyer called at this Consulate and informed me that, in consequence of the death of some of his crew, and others being obliged to return to France on account of ill-health, he had been obliged to embark four kroomen on board "La Jeune Elise" as "matelots auxiliaires," to enable him to proceed on his voyage to Bahia, and he requested me to furnish him with a passport or permission to embark these four men. From the high commercial standing of the firm of Regis and Co., and the general respectability of the numerous agents they employ, I did not hesitate to comply with M. Bowyer's request, being well aware that a number of that useful tribe of African labourers, kroomen, are employed at the different establishments of Messrs. Regis.

M. Bowyer waited on me a few days since and complained of the trouble the authorities at Bahia had given him on account of these four kroomen, whom, on his return voyage to the coast, he had landed, at their earnest request, at Beribee, on the Kroo Coast, their native place, as he had re-formed a crew for "La Jeune Elise" with some Belgian seamen, whose vessel had been condemned at Bahia. I have not the slightest doubt of the truth of M. Bowyer's statement.

I must inform your Lordship that a Hamburg vessel, and, until lately, an English vessel, the "Coquette," of Liverpool, have made frequent voyages to Bahia from this; and that, in consequence of the casualties to seamen so frequent on the coast, they have, when occasion necessitated it, made up the complement of their crews with natives of Africa, and that I never heard of the masters of these vessels having met with any difficulty, in consequence of having African seamen on board these vessels, from the authorities at Bahia.

WITH reference to your despatch of the 24th of June last, I have to acquaint you that I recommended to the favourable consideration of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty the suggestions contained in that despatch, pointing out the advantages that might be derived from employing, for service in the Bight of Benin and its lagoons, steam-vessels of light draught; and I have to acquaint you that the Lords of the Admiralty have informed me that they have ordered the "Drake," a vessel of light draught and of 40 horse-power, to be appropriated for that service.

Consul Campbell to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received February 11.)

My Lord,

Lagos, January 5, 1857.

I HAVE the honour to transmit herewith my report of the trade of the Bight of Benin for the year 1856.

The whole of the ports in the Bight of Benin being under the rule of CLASS B.

uncivilised native Powers, and having, except at Lagos, no regulations by which the amount of produce exported from them can be ascertained, my estimate of the amount of exports from all other ports except Lagos must only be regarded as approximative; but I feel certain, after having extended my inquiries, that while I have, in the instance of Badagry, somewhat exceeded the actual quantity of palm oil shipped, my estimates of the quantities of oil shipped from the other ports to the westward must be considerably within the mark, as I have now been furnished with the names of twenty-one vessels, in the aggregate of 6,500 tons, from the single port of Bristol, which annually load almost wholly in the Bight of Benin; some four or five vessels from the port of London, of the average of 300 tons each, are also usually chartered for the Portuguese traders at Whydah, Porto Novo, &c., to load with palm oil for London, the proceeds of which cargoes are doubtless converted into Manchester and Glasgow fabrics, without which no foreigners can carry on the trade in palm oil. It further appears that some small vessels under Dutch, and, latterly, some under Spanish colours, have loaded cargoes for their respective countries, and one vessel under Sardinian colours, of about 150 tons, has lately laden a cargo of palm oil, ivory, and some cotton as a sample, for Genoa.

In my anxiety to avoid exaggeration, I find I have under-estimated the total quantity of palm oil exported to all parts from the Bight of Benin, which is this year little, if at all, short of 20,000 tons.

As the resources of the country are developed it is found that there are several oleaginous grains and matters from which good marketable oil can be extracted, samples of which are being sent to England and elsewhere; but the article of great interest and importance which is now attracting some attention, is cotton. The whole of the Yoruba and other countries south of the Niger, with the Houssa and Nuffee countries on the north side of that river, have been, from all time, cotton-growing countries, and notwithstanding the civil wars, ravages, disorders, and disruptions caused by the Slave Trade, more than sufficient cotton to clothe their populations has always been cultivated, and their fabrics have found markets and a ready sale in those countries where the cotton-plant is not cultivated, and into which the fabrics of Manchester and Glasgow have not yet penetrated. The cultivation of cotton, therefore, in the above-named countries is not new to the inhabitants; all that is required is, to offer them a market for the sale of as much as they can cultivate, and, by preventing the export of slaves from the seaboard, render some security to life, freedom, property, and labour.

The quantity of cotton exported from Lagos during the year past is only a portion of that cultivated by some of the leading Chiefs of the town of Abbeokuta who possess a few cleaning gins, and is but a fractional part of the quantity cultivated around the town of Abbeokuta. That grown throughout Yoruba, and the other countries bounded by the Niger, must be considerable, as not only their populations (at least 1,500,000) are clothed with their own cotton fabrics, but the quantities of these exported to other countries are considerable.

There appears, from the best information I have obtained, to be exported during the last year from the different ports on the coast to the Brazils:—

200,000 cotton cloths of native manufacture, each containing, on an average, $2\frac{1}{2}$ lbs. weight of cotton, which will give	500,000
200,000 it is estimated are sold into adjacent countries, as far as the Bonny and New Calabar eastward, and the Mahee and Borgoo countries westward. These are of a coarser and heavier description, to suit the tastes of the natives of those countries, and contain, at least, $3\frac{1}{2}$ lbs. weight of cotton each	700,000
And for clothing 1,500,000 of population, the weight of 4 lbs. of cotton each will not be an over-estimate of the quantity required, as woollen manufactures are unknown in these countries	6,000,000
Total	7,200,000

It may, therefore, be fairly estimated that the cultivation of cotton in Yoruba and the adjoining States is equal to 7,200,000 lbs. Whenever the cotton fabrics of Manchester and Glasgow are introduced, by way of the Niger, to the upper parts of the Yoruba and adjoining countries, the natives of those countries will find it cheaper and more advantageous to sell their cotton, and clothe themselves with the lighter, but infinitely cheaper, cloths of Manchester and Glasgow; and in order to obtain the many (to them) new and useful articles which English commerce will, for the first time, introduce to them, they will be induced to extend the cultivation of cotton, and the search after those natural productions of the country which they did not before know possessed a value.

If it were attempted to introduce the cultivation of coffee among the people of the interior, great difficulty would be met with. It would be to them a new thing, and the objection, universal with Africans, would be started, that their fathers before them never cultivated coffee. But the greatest obstacle to the cultivation of that berry would be, that it requires care, attention, and intelligence, and the native would have to wait three, four, and five years before he obtained any return for his labour. Possessing no capital but his own labour and that of his slaves, he will always prefer cultivating that which will give him a speedy return for his labour. We can, therefore, only look to cotton as an agricultural marketable production to be obtained from the interior.

In all the alluvial delta countries bordering on the long line of lagoons which run for so many miles close to the sea-shore, the cultivation of the ground nut might advantageously be encouraged, the soil being most favourably adapted for it, and the tranquil surface of the lagoons and creeks offering so easy and cheap a means of transport. The great obstacle to be encountered by the merchants in the shipment of ground-nuts will be the surf on the beach, but means could be found to overcome this, as cargoes of these nuts are now being shipped from places on the Gold Coast, on the shores of which the surf breaks heavily. The great obstacle to be met with by the cultivators, is the alarm and insecurity frequently occasioned by the threatened hostile movements of the old Slave Trade miscreant monarchs of these parts, the King of Dahomey and Kosoko, who, encouraged by the old slave-dealers remaining on the coast, do not abandon the hope of having the Slave Trade revived.

The importation of British cotton manufactures in this part of Africa has, as yet, been to an extent below the wants of commerce, yet their effect in supplanting the use of the native fabrics among the population of Abbeokuta is already felt by the numerous weavers in that large town, who begin to find that the primitive looms and shuttles used by them—the same as their forefathers brought with them from Egypt many ages since, time having wrought no change, no improvement in a people shut out from all intercourse with other peoples who have made gradual, and some rapid, advances in civilization, and who, until lately, never looked upon the face of the white man—cannot compete with the leviathan power of steam and the ingenious inventions of Europeans. Many years will, therefore, not elapse ere the natives will find it more advantageous to sell their cotton to the white man, receiving a portion of it back for their own wants in a better, and very much cheaper, manufactured state.

I have, &c.

Inclosure in No 43.

Report on the Trade of the Bight of Benin for the year 1856.

THE great staple of the commerce of the Bight of Benin is now palm oil; ivory is the next article in value exported; and cotton, which is now being extensively cultivated around Abbeokuta, forms the third. There have been exported from Lagos, during the year ending December 31, 1856, the following quantities of the above commodities:—

				Average Value in Europe during the Year 1856.
Palm oil	.. ..	3,884 tons	45l. per ton	£	174,780
Ivory	.. ..	16,057 lbs.	4s. per lb.		3,211
Cotton	.. ..	33,491 lbs.	6d. per lb.		837

In consequence of the dearth of shipping, and the tempestuous weather which has prevailed during so many months of the last year, rendering it impracticable to ship palm oil by the packets during their short stay off Lagos, about 300 tons of palm oil, of the purchase of 1856, remain to be shipped. The above quantity of ivory, on which duty has been paid, by no means correctly represents the quantity exported from Lagos, it being notorious that more than one-half the quantity exported is smuggled on board the ships in the roadstead, to avoid the duty.

The readiness with which the inhabitants of the large town of Abbeokuta have extended their cultivation of the cotton-plant, merits the favourable notice of the manufacturer, of the philanthropist, and, as a means of supplanting the Slave Trade, by its turning the attention of the native to the value of the soil and of human labour, of Her Majesty's Government. The same difficulty which attended its first cultivation in the United States, some seventy years since, is now experienced by the Abbeokutan cultivators—the want of machines to clean it, separate the seed from the fibre. In consequence of this difficulty, but a very small proportion of the cotton cultivated around Abbeokuta has as yet been prepared for shipment.

The quantities of palm oil shipped from other ports in the Bight of Benin during the year 1856, are, as nearly as can be ascertained, as follows:—

				Average Value in England during the Year.
		Tons.		£
From the Benin River	.. ..	2,500		112,500
From Palma and its neighbourhood	.. ..	2,250		101,250
From Badagry	.. ..	1,250		96,250
From Porto Novo and other ports between Badagry and Whydah		4,000		180,000
From Whydah	.. ..	2,500		112,500
From Aghwey and neighbouring ports	.. ..	1,500		67,500
From various ports to the United States	.. ..	300		13,500
Total (including Lagos, 178,828l.)				£862,328

The above trade is carried on under the English, Hamburgh, French, Sardinian, and Portuguese flags, and, to a small extent, under the American flag. The trade of the Benin river is wholly English; that at Palma is almost solely carried on under the French and Hamburgh flags; that at Lagos, under English, Hamburgh, French, Sardinian, and a small quantity under the flag of Portugal. The trade of the remainder of the Bight of Benin is carried on principally under the English, French, and Hamburgh flags; those of Holland, Sardinia, and Portugal, enjoying a small portion.

The European manufactures employed in this commerce, under all flags, are, principally, the cotton fabrics of Manchester and Glasgow; the hardware of Birmingham and other towns; gunpowder, earthenware, silks, with velvet—both silk and cotton,—coral, and a small quantity of beads, of Venetian and Bohemian manufacture. At Lagos, Palma, and Whydah, it is necessary to import the cowrie-shell, it being the currency of the country; and the inferior quality obtained at Zanzibar, which is, however, only current in the Yoruba and Dahoman countries, is imported, by the French and Hamburgh houses, to the extent of about 2,500 tons annually.

From Bahia, in the Brazils, are imported large quantities of roll-tobacco and aguardiente, principally in vessels under the flags of Sardinia and Portugal, the flag of Brazil being now rarely or never seen on this coast. Most of the Sardinian, and the larger class of Portuguese vessels employed in this trade, after disposing of their outward cargoes, load palm oil for Europe, and for England principally; the smaller class of Portuguese vessels usually return to Bahia ballasted with palm oil, and carrying some of the coarse native-manufactured cloths of the Yoruba and Houssa countries, which meet a ready sale among the Africans throughout the Brazils, on account of their durability, and probably, also, on account of imparting reminiscences of their former homes and country.

The French and Hamburgh houses having establishments at Whydah and Lagos, employ small vessels of their own to make the voyage from the coast to Brazil, and to bring them supplies of tobacco and aguardiente. It is difficult to ascertain the exact quantities of these two commodities sold in the Bight of Benin, as the Sardinian and Portuguese vessels laden with them usually strike the coast at the most windward or western fort on the Gold Coast, and then proceed eastward as far as Lagos; but it has been estimated that at least 35,000 rolls of tobacco, and 2,000 pipes of aguardiente, have been imported this year; the value of the former being six dollars the roll, and of the latter seventy dollars the pipe. Roll tobacco was formerly, and still is, the principal medium of payment for slaves; a large quantity is carried into the interior, and the ivory, now finding its way to the sea-coast, is mostly purchased with that article.

This important legitimate trade in the Bight of Benin is, comparatively, of modern date. Twenty years since it was a fact, established by respectable testimony in the Vice-Admiralty Court at Sierra Leone, that there was not one puncheon of palm oil shipped in the year in the Bight of Benin. Fifteen years since, the late Mr. Thomas Hutton, after incurring a loss of 800*l.* for demurrage, obtained about thirty tons of palm oil from Whydah, the powerful influence of the late Cha-cha, and other extensive slave-traders, having been used to obtain this quantity, in order to pay for Mr. Hutton's cargo (rum), which they greatly needed at the time. About the same time, small Liverpool trading-vessels entered the Benin river; and, after considerable detention and great efforts, obtained partial cargoes of oil, filling up with gum-copal and other commodities; and twelve years since, the Hamburgh house, engaged in the Lagos trade, had great difficulty in obtaining sufficient palm oil to ballast the small vessels they then employed.

The rapid development of the legitimate commercial resources of this part of Africa, demonstrates the enormous wrong done by the Slave Trade in staying, for so many years, the great natural resources of the country; and, tearing away, by violence and fraud, its inhabitants, to cultivate, under the pressure of the lash in foreign lands, those very productions which the climate and soil of his own country are equally capable of producing, by that natural incentive to labour, the prospect of reaping and enjoying its fruits.

Foreign Office, March 9, 1857.

I HAVE received your despatch of the 5th of January, transmitting a report upon the trade of the Bight of Benin for the year 1856. I have to inform you that I have perused the contents of that report with great interest and satisfaction, and I have to desire that after careful consideration on the subject, you will inform me whether there are any means which Her Majesty's Government could adopt in order to stimulate or assist the cultivation of cotton in the countries lying to the north and south of the Niger.

The deficiency in that most important article of manufacture and commerce now engages the anxious attention of Her Majesty's Government, and it would be a signal benefit to this country if a steady and increasing supply of cotton could be reckoned upon from Africa. If the matter is left solely in the hands of the natives, it is to be feared that the productive powers of the soil will be too slowly developed to satisfy the wants and impatience of the British manufacturer; but, on the other hand, it is possible that foreign interference might be resented by the native planter, and not lead to the desired result.

The native planters might, however, not be indisposed to receive instructions founded on experience as to the best modes of cultivating the plant, and a spirit of competition might be excited among them by the offer of prizes to the most successful cultivator.

I have also to observe that cotton seed, cotton gins, and agricultural implements might be supplied at cost price, for which payment might be made by instalments. In short, Her Majesty's Government are prepared to use their utmost efforts, and to incur experimentally a reasonable expense in order to turn to account the favourable state of things which you have described, and the disposition which appears to exist on the part of the natives to substitute productive labour for the detestable Traffic in Slaves, upon which they have hitherto depended for the acquisition of wealth.

But Her Majesty's Government would hesitate to embark in any such undertaking, unless they felt some security that they were taking steps in a right direction, and I have accordingly to desire that you will not only give your own best attention to the subject, but that you will consult the persons upon whose judgment or experience in such matters you can place reliance, and you will report the result with the least possible delay.

In all future returns of the exports of the Bight of Benin, you will supply those of the preceding year, in order that a comparison may be instituted.

Lagos, February 2, 1857.

AT the request of the mercantile agents trading in the Benin river, I visited that river in Her Majesty's steam-vessel "Bloodhound" after the departure of the last packet for England.

I found matters in a better state of peace and security than on my visit in March last year. The appearance of Her Majesty's steam-vessel "Bloodhound" at such a distance from the sea, on my last visit, had the effect of keeping the troublesome Ejoemen quiet for some months, until during the height of the rainy season, when they ventured in great force to within sight of the English factories and committed great depredations, capturing several canoes with cargoes of palm oil, making captives of their crews. Upon being informed of this circumstance, I requested the senior officer of the Bights division to send Her Majesty's steam-vessel "Minx," the only suitable vessel then at his disposal, to the protection of the factories in the Benin river. This vessel's presence for some days anchored off the factories had the desired effect of dispersing the piratical Ejoemen to their towns and villages near to the Niger.

I, at the same time, strongly recommended to the agents that the native trading canoes should proceed to the oil markets, in company and well armed for mutual protection. This advice has been followed; the Ejoemen finding they could not cope with the trading canoes when thus proceeding to and returning from the markets, have made overtures of peace through a Chief, a leading member of their tribe, unconnected with these outrages, and on friendly terms with the Benin traders. The agents expressed a wish for me to proceed to the residence of this Chief, with the object of encouraging him to bring matters to a speedy termination. As the proposal for peace came from the Ejoemen themselves, I thought it better not to interfere, as these matters are settled more securely and binding by the natives among themselves, through the observance of superstitious rites, of which they wish us to be in ignorance.

Whenever an active trade is established in the Niger, the Benin river will become of importance as the best entrance by which to reach the Niger and the Tshadda. There is no great depth of water on the bar; at spring tides there is fifteen feet: it is a comparatively safe bar, being broad in extent, the set of the currents well known, and not dangerously strong, and it is only in very bad weather that the bar breaks. On my visit in Her Majesty's steam-vessel "Bloodhound" in March last, when the waters of the lagoons and of the Niger were at the lowest, we carried ample depth at a draught of nine feet to within a short distance of Aboo, 100 miles from the mouth of the Nun river.

I embarked on board Her Majesty's steam-vessel "Bloodhound" on the 9th of January, disembarking on the 17th.

Lagos, February 4, 1857.

I HAVE heard, for several months past, of but two reports of successful embarkations of slaves from the Bight of Benin, which I fear have some foundation in truth: one from Appi Vista (Kootenoo of the natives), the same point from which the "Chatsworth" was to embark her cargo, and on which she was driven on shore by Her Majesty's steam-ship "Hecate;" the other, at Jaboo Vista, about ten miles below Palma, at which place M. Lamaignère (Don Luis) has an establishment in co-partnership with Senhor Jambo.

The native traders in the Benin river speak positively of this last embarkation having taken place at any rate in the neighbourhood of Jaboo Vista.

Both these embarkations it is stated were made on board vessels under the flag of Portugal.

The American barque "Hermitage," the property of Mr. J. A. Machado, of New York, is again in the Bight of Benin, with a very suspicious looking schooner, as a tender, called the "Gambriel." The protection afforded to these vessels by the American flag is not parted with until the moment of embarking the slaves, and not always then, when the embarkation is made on board such a vessel as the "Hermitage," which is a barque of apparently from 350 to 400 tons.

The Earl of Clarendon to Consul Hutchinson.

Sir,

Foreign Office, April 15, 1856.

I HAVE referred to the Lords of the Committee of Privy Council for Trade the Code of Bye-laws for the regulation of trade in the Cameroons, which accompanied your despatch of the 31st of January;* and I transmit herewith, for your information, a copy of the answer which I have received from that office, stating that under the peculiar circumstances of the case, the Board of Trade is of opinion that the regulations in question may be sanctioned by Her Majesty's Government.

I have, however, to state to you, with reference to the 2nd Article of those Regulations, by which it is proposed that a piece of ground shall be purchased for the erection of a Court-house, that Her Majesty's Government cannot undertake to guarantee the immunity and undisturbed possession of the piece of ground and building in question.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's despatch of the 5th of January,† instructing me to inform ex-King Pepple that, if he should quit Ascension, Her Majesty's Government recommends that he should remain quietly in any part of Africa where he can be in safety.

I shall take the first opportunity to acquaint him with this, as well as to impress upon him distinctly that Her Majesty's Government cannot sanction his proceeding to England, and that, if he persists in it, his passage thither, as well as the maintenance of his family, must be entirely incurred at his own expense.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's despatch of January 15,‡ instructing me to pay King Amacree, of New Calabar, the value of the third and last annual present due to him in silver dollars.

There are no accounts in the archives of this Consulate of the quantity paid to him, on two former occasions, of powder, guns, and flints, nor can I ascertain how much was the original amount by any records in the office here.

Sir,

Fernando Po, March 24, 1856.

I HAVE to inform you that a man, named Jamsee, arrived at Bassapoo, in this colony, a few days past, having come in a canoe from Princes Island. He reports himself to be one of four who escaped from that island in two canoes, another of whom, a woman, who was with him, died of hunger on the passage.

On examining him through an interpreter, he stated, that only a month past, he was purchased, with about forty others, by Mr. De Silva, of Princes Island, at Sangatanga, to the southward of Gaboon. He further informed me that he has known three cargoes of a like amount of slaves, having been bought lately by the same party from and to the before-mentioned localities.

I HAVE the honour to transmit, herewith, Additional Articles to the Commercial Treaties of the 3rd October, 1850, and 3rd January, 1854, at Bonny, which I sanctioned at the request of the supercargoes in the river.

Your Lordship will observe that they refer chiefly to the proper arrangement of ships in the mooring ground, so as to avoid as much as possible the communication of fire from one ship to another, which in the present arrangement is scarcely avoidable.

I trust your Lordship will approve of the plan for expending the fines in matters of local improvement.

Inclosure in No. 56.

Additional Articles to the Commercial Treaties concluded at Bonny on October 3, 1850, and January 3, 1854.

A CONFERENCE of the Court of Equity was held this day on board the ship "Princess Royal."

Present :

Thomas Joseph Hutchinson, Esquire, Her Britannic Majesty's Consul for the Bight of Biafra ;

Lieutenant Williams, commanding Her Majesty's steam-vessel "Bloodhound ;"

And the Chairman and members of the Court.

It was agreed to unanimously that the following Articles be appended to the Bonny Commercial Treaties of the 3rd October, 1850, and the 3rd January, 1854.

ARTICLE I.

That the Treaties before-mentioned be hereby ratified and confirmed.

ARTICLE II.

That, for the more effectual carrying out the laws and regulations of the Equity Court, these Treaties shall be considered as binding on those supercargoes who were not in the river at the time of their enactment as on those who made them ; and that all native traders be impressed with the necessity of respecting them so long as they constitute the law.

ARTICLE III.

That any native refusing to pay a fine that shall be inflicted by the Court be stopped from going on board any ship in the river either for trade or any other purpose, and any supercargo refusing to pay a fine shall be denied the privileges of the Equity Court.

ARTICLE IV.

That in the event of any native trader attempting to evade the penalty of the Court by non-appearance or otherwise, and notice of such defaulter being sent to all the masters, traders, or supercargoes, in the river, such masters, traders, or supercargoes are hereby bound, under the penalty of 100 crews, to forbid such defaulter coming to their vessels for trade, or under any pretence whatever, and, if necessary, the final settlement to await the arrival of Her Britannic Majesty's Consul.

ARTICLE V.

That the Chairman of the Court of Equity, for the time being, take upon himself to be harbour-master, and carry out the following regulations for the proper mooring of ships in the river in order to prevent the communication of fire from one ship to another.

ARTICLE VI.

That no ship-master attempt to moor his ship without first having instructions from the harbour-master.

ARTICLE VII.

That no ship shall be moored in the hawse or wake of another except at the distance of, at least, 200 fathoms.

ARTICLE VIII.

That no ship shall be allowed to moor so as to be nearer than seventy-five fathoms from any ship already moored in the harbour.

ARTICLE IX.

That every ship lying moored in the harbour shall have a spare anchor hanging to the cat-head, and cable attached ready for use in case of accident.

ARTICLE X.

That every ship have her moorings ready for slipping at the shortest possible notice.

ARTICLE XI.

That if it be found the master of the ship last arrived shall have his vessel moored nearer to the ships in the river than the distances above prescribed, he shall be obliged to have his anchor raised and his ship properly placed; and that in case of his non-compliance the harbour-master summon him before the Equity Court, to whom a power is given of inflicting on him a penalty not exceeding 10*l.*

ARTICLE XII.

That the harbour-master be required to furnish the sailing-master of each ship coming in the river with a copy of the above Regulations.

Given under our hands, on board the "Princess Royal," laying in the Bonny River, this 7th day of April, 1856.

Consul Hutchinson to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received June 26.)

My Lord,

Fernando Po, April 30, 1856.

DURING my stay in Bonny a complaint was made to me by Mr. Cahill, a supercargo, of sails having been stolen from his boat, on the shores at Bonny, and by Mr. Caine, another supercargo, of Manilla Pepple, one of the Regents, having one day drawn a knife at him, when he was demanding the payment of his debt. I deemed it my duty to summon a meeting at the Head Regent's house, to investigate these matters, all the supercargoes being present.

I was very glad to find that the Regents had already offered a reward of 400 manillas for the discovery of the felon in the first case, and had further decreed to impose a fine of 2,200 manillas on the thief if found out.

With reference to the second charge, Manilla Pepple expressed his regret for the act, adding, as his excuse, that Mr. Caine had spoken harshly and severely to him, and that he was a little intoxicated at the time—pleas which, of course, would not hold good in any civilised society, but which, after a severe reprimand, I deemed it expedient to allow, on his humbly apologising, and promising not to do the like again; this promise was further guaranteed by his brother Regents.

At the same time I deemed it my duty to urge upon the Regents that they ought to rebuild the white man's house destroyed in last year's émeute in Bonny, as there the supercargoes and traders had a place for meeting amicably to settle their trade disputes and such palavers as the present. Its existence I believe to be also likely to propagate and foster a feeling of goodwill between both parties. They promised to do something about it by the time of my next visit.

My Lord,

Fernando Po, April 30, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to report to your Lordship that I visited New Calabar on the morning of the 8th instant, having sent to King Amacree on the night before an intimation of my intention to do so; and requesting that he would come on board Her Majesty's steam-vessel "Bloodhound" at 12 o'clock.

He and all his Chiefs were punctual to the moment, and, whilst expressing my pleasure at his courtesy, I told him that I regretted to hear very serious complaints from the supercargoes then on board, of the manner in which he has lately been dealing in his commercial transactions with them. Their complaints were to the effect that he had given them orders for several thousand pounds worth of manillas of a particular pattern, and when these had arrived, he had put a prohibition against their sales in the interior markets, no doubt expecting the supercargoes would have to dispose of them to him at any price. Manillas, which constitute the currency of the country, are copper bars of a shape nearly approaching to a horse shoe, about three inches in circumference. As there are five different species of them, your Lordship will see how seriously a mark put upon one kind will affect the interests of the traders here.

I told Amacree that I should deem it my duty to acquaint your Lordship of his conduct in this matter, before I would pay him the last annual tribute due to him for the anti-Slave Trade guarantee, and that I expected before my next visit to his river, he would have all complaints of this kind done away with, as he would destroy all trade in his country, and oblige the supercargoes, in their own defence, to trade in other rivers.

Trusting these remarks will meet your Lordship's approbation, I have, &amp;c.

The Chairman of the Bonny Court of Equity to Consul Hutchinson.

Dear Sir,

Bonny River, April 10, 1856.

IN accordance with our feelings, we cannot think of your leaving us without bearing with you a record of our high esteem and admiration of your impartial conduct, and our appreciation of your valuable assistance, which was much enhanced by the manner in which it was rendered.

We take leave to state our opinion that the Government of our country have been singularly felicitous, and ourselves fortunate, in having a gentleman appointed so well qualified to support the dignity of the Consular office, and impress upon the minds of the native Chiefs and traders of this, and the New Calabar country, the fact that any infringement of the Treaty will be punished according to its enactments, and justice strictly administered to both white and black men.

We may at the same time acquaint you, that we shall take upon ourselves most respectfully to urge the necessity of your having a steam-vessel placed at your disposal; the exigencies and importance of this trade demanding more frequent visits than you can possibly favour us with under the present imperfect regulations.

Wishing you good health, and that we may soon have the pleasure of seeing you again, we remain, &c.

Consul Hutchinson to the Chairman and Members of the Bonny Court of Equity.

(Extract.)

Fernando Po, April 24, 1856.

YOUR kind and courteous letter, placed in my hands as I was about to leave Bonny in Her Majesty's steam-vessel "Bloodhound," on the 10th instant, I had not opportunity to reply to, and thank you for, till now.

Believe me, when I assure you, that although I cannot feel conscious of meriting in the slightest degree the high compliments paid to me in that letter, the reception of such an honour from the representatives of the "merchant princes" of Liverpool will ever be duly appreciated by me. My duty to my Government and my country cannot fail to be kept before my mind by such approbation, and when I remember the source whence it comes—from gentlemen who are "first amongst the first" of African traders, the pleasure and gratification of it are doubly enhanced.

Although yet but a neophyte in Consular duties, and much the junior in years of the majority of your Court, I trust you will not consider I am overstepping the bounds of my duty in giving you my opinion of some matters relative to your Equity Court.

I wish the Bonny Equity Court to be considered the model after which all institutions of its kind are formed in the Bight of Biafra. There are many reasons why this ought to be so, and which it is unnecessary for me to explain now. In order to have it worthy of imitation, it should be a Court of Justice in the amplest meaning of the word; and it ought to be an institution for the protection of your own interests as traders, for the generation and nurture of amity amongst your body, as well as for the endeavour to establish a feeling of confidence between the natives and yourselves in commercial matters. I say "commercial matters," because I believe that a great deal of injury may arise from the supercargoes meddling in any way in the social laws, prejudices, or customs of the natives.

When you remember that thirty years ago fairs were held in Bonny for the sale of slaves, once or twice a-week, and when you know that from July 1854 to July 1855 above 16,000 tons of palm oil were sent from this and New Calabar rivers to Liverpool, you will consider that in such a short space of time it is very hard to expect of the people the growth of their knowledge in the morale of civilization, to proceed by equal footsteps with that of their knowing how advantageous to their country's interests are becoming their commercial relations with Great Britain. This is their first acquired learning, and you know that civilization is in no part of the world the growth of a day. Moreover, you have seen, as I have recognised it on my late visit to Bonny, that the slaves—men of that class who were formerly the market commodity there—are coming up to know that they have got as much capacity to trade as the head-men. Knowledge, such as this, will, I have no doubt, eventually cause revolutions in the principal African kingdoms; and you will find it cannot be for your interests in the slightest degree, to interfere with any of the social struggles that such a changing condition of affairs is likely to lead to—mixed up, as they will doubtless be, with their ancient follies, superstitions, and brutalities.

I would not presume to write to you thus, but that I feel confident you will take my opinions as they are intended, not a presumption of advice, but as mere ground for your own cogitation and reflection.

Accept each of you individually my best wishes for your health, happiness, and prosperity, and believe me, &c.

Canary Islands, Teneriffe, March 3, 1856.

I BEG to report that a Government Roman Catholic Mission arrived here a few days ago, from Spain, under the charge of Don Miguel Martinez y Sanz, with the intention of proceeding to the Spanish islands of Fernando Po, Annabon, and Corisco. The mission consists of four priests, nine inferior ecclesiastics, fourteen sisters of charity, eight artisans, and three agriculturists.

After a stay of a few days they departed for their destination, on board the Spanish schooner "Leonor."

I have been informed that the Spanish Government have devoted 3,000,000 reals (about 30,000*l.*) for the purpose of re-establishing these colonies, and that three vessels of war are about proceeding there. The Senior Naval Officer commanding is to assume the Civil Government at Fernando Po, and is to exert himself in establishing a palm oil trade with the natives on the coast.

THE Ministerio de Estado acquaints me, under this date, with the following Royal order :

Excelentísimo Señor,

The English Minister Plenipotentiary at this Court, under date of the 5th instant, writes to this office as follows :

"I have to acquaint your Excellency, that in answer to the despatch I addressed to my Government, inclosing your Excellency's note of the 16th ultimo, which informed me that Her Majesty's Government had the intention of bringing from the coast of Africa a certain number of adult negroes, for education in Spain, I have received instructions which authorise me to acquaint you that the Earl of Clarendon has given, with reference to this request, the necessary orders to the Admiralty, to be communicated to the Commander-in-chief on the station of the West Coast of Africa. At the same time I ought to acquaint you that if, previous to these orders reaching their destination, the ship conveying these negro neophytes should meet with an English cruizer, it would be impossible for the Commander to distinguish between such a transaction and one having a Slave Trade object. Notwithstanding these observations I trust that no such occurrence will take place, as it is to be presumed, from the tenour of your Excellency's communication, the affair in question will not be carried into effect for some time to come."

By command of Her Majesty I transmit the above for your information and guidance.

My Lord,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's despatch of March 29,* referring to the Treaty signed on the 21st January last by me and the Chiefs of Old Town, Old Calabar, and requesting an explanation of two points in Article II of that Treaty.

With reference to the first, I beg leave to inform your Lordship that the Chiefs of Old Town and Duke Town could not be persuaded to sign an unconditional Treaty, but King Eyo, of Creek Town, who has abolished this practice in his territory, and who is the most influential man in Old Calabar, gave me to understand that he would never allow it to be done elsewhere with his sanction.

As to the second, touching the protest of the Rev. Mr. Anderson of the 18th January, 1856, against Acting Consul Lynslager's Treaty of 18th January, 1855, I cannot see why such a protest was made, unless because, to use the Rev. Mr. Anderson's own words, "it was done without their concurrence." All the missionary body were present at the ratification of my Treaty, and it was with their united assent the second part was added to the Article in question.

I trust this explanation will be satisfactory to your Lordship, and I have to return my thanks for your Lordship's conveying to me the satisfaction of Her Majesty's Government with reference to the other Articles of the Treaty.

I quite agree with their Lordships that the Bye-laws in question were "crude," and when I state to your Lordship that they were nearly copied from those ratified by my predecessor, Mr. Beecroft, who was well acquainted with the uncivilized nature of the people up all the rivers in the Bight of Biafra, amongst whom commerce is yet in its infancy, I trust your Lordship will approve of my not deviating from his plan, particularly as it was sanctioned by the supercargoes as well as the native traders.

I HAVE the honour to inform your Lordship that when Commodore Adams was about to depart hence, in Her Majesty's steam-ship "Scourge," on the 4th instant, I received, per boat from Old Calabar, two letters from the Rev. Wm. Anderson and Rev. Samuel Edgerley, with inclosure of a remonstrance addressed by the supercargoes of that river to Duke Ephraim, King of Duke Town.

My reason for not mentioning to your Lordship before the circumstance of this palaver, was because it had not been brought officially under my notice when I interfered, at the request of the Mission gentlemen, to leave these three innocents under their protection, after having taken refuge at the Mission premises.

As the boat returned the same evening, I wrote to King Duke, in the inclosed Anglo-African patois, which is the only form that can be understood by such Potentates. I deem it necessary to explain to your Lordship that the terms "blood-men" describes a class of persons who are commissioned to demand vengeance for the life of any one killed by "ifod" or witchcraft, the reputed cause of almost every person's death in Old Calabar ; " chop " signifies any kind of food ; " book " means a letter ; and " blowing Egbo " is the Calabar style of proclaiming martial law.

I immediately dispatched a letter to Commodore Adams, and he very kindly changed his previously intended route to Prince's Island, in order to return to Lagos, with the intention of sending Her Majesty's steam-ship " Alecto " down to me. Not finding the " Alecto " he returned hither, and accompanied me, in Her Majesty's steam-ship " Scourge," to the Old Calabar river, on the morning of the 13th instant. On arriving there I wrote to King Eyo, Duke Ephraim, and the Mission gentlemen, requesting their presence on board. As soon as they had arrived, I taxed Duke Ephraim with his breach of faith, as I had charged him, when signing the Treaty at Old Town, 21st January last, that I would hold him accountable for the due observation of its provisions in his own district. He is a stupid, sulky old man, and made no reply. King Eyo at once said, that the authorities at Duke Town being jealous of his influence, he could not interfere, but had the missionaries or Sierra Leone people applied to him, at Creek Town, he would have supplied them with any provisions they wanted, despite of the Duke Town Egbo law.

The Rev. Mr. Anderson reiterated the facts mentioned in his letter, and Rev. Mr. Waddell spoke at some length, to show that the Scottish missionaries had not come to Calabar uninvited, which he proved by reading documents, whereof I have the honour to transmit your Lordship true copies. The original of the grant of land to the missionary body is deposited at the Presbyterian Mission Office, 5, Queen Street, Edinburgh.

I rebuked Duke Ephraim on the wickedness of his conduct, more particularly as his name is one of those attached to the request for the missionaries to come out to Old Calabar ; and Commodore Adams had further to express his disapprobation at the discourtesy wherewith he treated our summons for him to come on board. The Commodore having threatened him that a man-of-war would be placed at my disposal to keep a watch on his ill-doings if he persisted in them, I drew up the Article which I have the honour to transmit, and which I trust will meet with your Lordship's approval.

I have, &c.

The Rev. W. Anderson to Consul Hutchinson.

*Mission House, Duke Town, Old Calabar,
May 30, 1856.*

Dear Sir,

I BEG leave to lay before you the following facts, in reference to the procedure of the authorities of Duke Town.

You will remember that when you were here on an official visit in January last, I showed you three individuals ; an old woman named Abasi Odiong, a young man named Okun Ya, and a young woman named Iqua Ya, who had fled to me for protection from the ordeal of the " esere," or poison bean, on the foolish and superstitious charge that they had killed a boy with " ifot " or " free-mason."

You were kind enough and humane enough to take these three persons under your protection, and to write a letter to the Duke apprizing him of the fact and holding him responsible for their safety.

I can certify, that with the exception of the young woman, who is staying pro tem. with Mrs. Sutherland at Old Town, your protégés have never been off the Mission premises at Duke Town. They have been afraid to leave them.

Well, some four or five weeks ago, a brother of the young man died in the plantations, ten or twelve, or, for aught I know, twenty miles from this. The name of the deceased was Oko Odiong. The refugees are charged with having killed him by " ifot ; " and the Duke sent to the plantation to call the blood people to come into the town with the view of compelling the refugees to take the ordeal of the " esere."

For this purpose, bands of the blood-men (as they are called) came into Duke Town on the 26th and 27th instant. I spent the greater part of the 28th at Old Town, and on my return home, I learned that the Duke and Duke Town gentlemen had sent for me three times.

On the morning of the 29th (yesterday), I was sent for again, went off at once to see what was wanted, found the Duke and his gentlemen in Parliament assembled, when the Duke announced to me that I was to bring down Okun Ya to town immediately, as all the gentlemen and blood people were in waiting to see him take the "esere."

Of course I demurred, chiefly on the ground that the young man was innocent of any crime, as he had been at my house since December last; that being there, he could not kill any person twelve or twenty miles distant, and that "ifot" was nonsense.

I also reminded the Duke that you had taken the young man as well as the two females under your protection, had also sent him a letter holding him responsible for their safety, and forbidding their being molested.

The Duke insisted on my giving up the young man, threatening that he would do this and that, drive me away from the country with all the Mission people, &c.

I left the meeting under the promise that I would be back soon. Thinking that it might be well to have the refugees beyond the possibility of capture, we got them quietly transferred to one of the ships. At the same time I dispatched a note to the gentlemen of the river, to which nearly all of them nobly responded.

I hastened back to the meeting, accompanied by Rev. Mr. Edgerley. We met Captain Davies in the market-place. He accompanied us to the Duke, and supported us manfully in our resolution not to deliver up the refugees.

I need not at present enter further into particular detail. Suffice it to say, that I told the Duke that I would not give up any of the refugees to death or to the ordeal of the "esere."

A number of the white gentlemen then held a meeting on board the "Africa," and we prepared a letter for the Duke, which I took to him and read, but which he refused to receive; so that having read it and explained it, I returned it to my pocket. I transmit it to you. (Inclosure No. 3.)

While we were on board the "Africa," the Duke was blowing Egbo on the Mission premises and on the Mission work.

The Egbo proclamation made, is as follows;—

1. No one to carry provisions to the Mission-houses for sale, or otherwise.
2. All gentlemen who have children or slaves residing with the missionaries, must take them away instantly.
3. No one must visit the missionaries.
4. No child or slave to be sent to school.
5. No one to attend Church or Sabbath meetings on the Lord's day, and no gentleman to allow God's word to be preached in his house.

Thus a total stop is attempted to be put to the work of the Mission, because I will not give up the innocent to risk of death; we are subjected to privation and annoyance for protecting those whom you have already taken under your care.

The Sierra Leone emigrants, who have nothing whatever to do with the matter, are put under the same ban as the Mission families. They, as well as the servants of Mrs. Goldie, Mrs. Anderson, and Rev. Mr. Edgerley, were turned back when on their way to market, were not allowed either to buy or to sell.

The case of the Sierra Leone emigrants is one of peculiar hardship. We, in the Mission, having supplies from home, can manage to get on for a short time without country provisions (vegetables, yams, plantains, fowls, &c.), but the poor Sierra Leone people cannot do so as yet. To prohibit all commercial intercourse between them and the Calabar people, is to sentence them to starve.

I need not add more at present; I can give you more of the minutiae of the affair when you come over.

I shall only add that I meant to lay the above-mentioned facts before you without note or comment, and I shall not depart from that purpose further than to say, that I think all the Europeans in the country, and a considerable proportion of the most intelligent natives themselves, seem pretty well satisfied that the old Duke is not a fit person to rule the Kingdom of Duke Town. Nearly all parties seem to be sick of his reign.

It is to be regretted that the all-important work of propagating Christianity, whose missionaries were guaranteed full protection and full liberty to prosecute their work before they came to the country, and when they came to the country (and the guaranty has been frequently repeated since), is so entirely at the mercy of such a man as Duke Ephraim, as it is just now, at least in so far as Duke Town is concerned.

I have, &c.

The Rev. S. Edgerley to Consul Hutchinson.

Sir,

Duke Town, Old Calabar, May 30, 1856:

HOWEVER reluctant, as a general principle, I may be, to obtrude on the attention of any representative of the interests of Her Britannic Majesty's subjects in a foreign land, any formal complaint, I feel, however, no hesitation in placing you in possession of a statement of some serious grievances under which some of the agents of the United Presbyterian Church of Scotland are at present suffering, confident that your best attention and usually prudent consideration will be given to the matter.

As a mission of righteousness and peace to Old Calabar, you will not misinterpret my application as requesting the adoption of any physical or coercive measures, but we are all persuaded that you will not withhold your suasive influence when the welfare of a cause exclusively devoted to the interests of a degraded and heathen people is in jeopardy, and the benevolent pecuniary gratuities of a vast portion of Her Britannic Majesty's subjects are at stake.

I need scarcely inform you that the United Presbyterian Church of Scotland sent out in 1846, and at an immense expense, at the reiterated request of the Kings and Chiefs of Old Calabar, a band of missionaries, to all of whom the requisitionists pledged themselves to protect them in the country, and to further the objects of their work, by permitting the Gospel to be preached, and in sending the native children to be educated at the mission schools.

Her Britannic Majesty's Government at that period also, with the usual solicitude for the benevolent and religious enterprises of its subjects, and the earnest desire for the improvement of Africa it has ever manifested, was pleased to throw its protecting shield around the little band of pioneers who volunteered to open this mission, in the instructions which were issued to Commodore Jones, the senior naval officer on the coast at the time.

There are several minor matters to which I should feel obliged by your giving your earliest attention, but the subject of paramount importance to the interests of our mission at this time is, the fact that Duke Ephraim, the King or headman of this town, has violated the promise or treaty that was made, in all its particulars (prohibiting the blood people from entering the town), by calling in their aid in numbers to coerce the missionary, Rev. Mr. Anderson, at Duke Town, to deliver up three refugees to certain death, who are innocent of any crime! who sought a sanctum on the mission premises, and for the preservation of whose lives, you yourself were kindly pleased to use your influence.

The determination on the part of the Rev. Mr. Anderson and other mission agents not to participate in a deliberate and wilful murder of three human beings, by delivering them up to the unjust and cowardly demands of a sanguinary murderous mob, has caused Duke Ephraim to proscribe, by proclamation, the mission agents resident at Duke Town, as respects their labours amongst the people, in their domestic relations, and in the obtaining the vegetable and other provisions of the country, on which, to some extent, they are dependent.

I believe you will concur with me (as all the merchant captains in the river appear to do, by their united remonstrance to Duke Ephraim) that this matter needs your judicious and prompt interference.

I have, &c.

WE, whose names are at the end of this letter, hold meeting here this day, and unite in giving you our best advice about those three people who live at the Mission-house, that you had better let them alone till Consul Hutchinson come back to this river.

You know very well that the Consul see them people that time he live here, and he say no man must trouble them. He send you book say they cannot take “esere.” You be King for town, and we know them blood people no fit to do anything if you no will. Also, we hear say it be you send for them blood man to come into town. We want to know if that be true. So if anything trouble them man it be your palaver. I NEVER hear bad news all same as this, all the time I saby Old Calabar. I hard for believe them bad thing you do.

You send for blood men come to town, then you tell Mr. Anderson say he must give up Okun Ya to chop-nut. That be very shame thing you do, King Duke. For that time I live in Old Calabar in man-of-war “Bloodhound,” I took them one man and two women live for Mission-house, and I send you book, say they can’t take chop-nut, and no man must trouble them all time they stop for Mission-house; and now you make that book I send you stand for nothing. Other bad thing you do for blow Egbo against Mission people, and Sierra Leone men, for not let them go to market and buy their chop, and very bad too for you to blow Egbo against your own people, for not let them go to Mission-house to hear God’s word, or sell yams to Mission gentlemen.

Mr. Anderson do proper thing for not give up them people to you to make them chop “esere.” Better you take all them Egbo off, I tell you true, King Duke, for Queen of England be vexed too much suppose she hear you try for make her people starve.

I HAVE the honour to inform your Lordship that on a communication being addressed to me by Don Miguel Martinez y Sanz, whereof I inclose a translation, I complied with his request, and gave him a copy of your Lordship's despatch of January 30,* with two of its inclosures—despatches to Lord Howden, and to the Admiralty, both of the same date.

The body of missionaries here have, up to this time, failed in inducing a single one of the aborigines to put their children under their care to send to Spain, and Don Miguel, on the 27th of May, sailed in the French cutter "Leurette," to Corisco, to try and get some thence. The Spanish schooner "Lemon" has proceeded to Annabon, on the 3rd instant, with a like intention, as well as to leave some missionaries on that island, under the guidance of Señor Emeterio Soria; and it was as a protection for the latter voyage that Don Miguel urged me earnestly to give him the papers. Her Majesty's steamship "Scourge" being here at the time of the "Lemon's" departure; Acting

Governor Lynslager addressed a letter to Commodore Adams, requesting him for a passport of security, in case the schooner, with her living cargo, should fall in with a British cruizer. This the Commodore gave, at the same time apprising Mr. Lynslager that if the "Leonor" carried above forty (the number mentioned in General Zavala's despatch) she would most probably be brought to Sierra Leone for adjudication.

I do not imagine they will meet with better success at Annabon than at Fernando Po, for common sense ought to teach them that the negroes, who look upon their nation as the prime movers in the Slave Trade, cannot be expected to place confidence in persons whom they have known only for a few days.

Consul Hutchinson to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received July 31.)

My Lord,

Clarence, Fernando Po, June 24, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to transmit herewith a complaint I have received from the Sierra Leone people resident on the Mission-hill, Duke Town, in Old Calabar river. On summoning them on board Her Majesty's ship "Scourge," and requesting them to prove the charge they made against Mr. Davies of having enticed the King to drive them out of the place, they could bring no substantial proof on the matter before me. A great deal of this unpleasantness has arisen, no doubt, from these men, resident on the Mission premises, becoming engaged in palm oil trade, and I deemed it my duty to inquire from the Rev. Mr. Anderson the facts of their relation with the Mission.

The first paragraph of the Rev. Mr. Anderson's reply will show your Lordship that they are natives of Calabar, from which they were taken in slavery. They have become liberated at Sierra Leone, and nevertheless desire to return and live in their own country.

One of the brutalities of the Egbo law is to the effect that on Egbo days, which occur nearly every week, a man masked cap-à-pie, supposed to be a spirit summoned from the woods, goes about the town with a huge whip in his hand, and with liberty to lash as much as he pleases any slave, man, woman, or child, whom he meets. The Duke Town authorities will not recognize these persons as freemen, because they know that formerly they were slaves. They are, therefore, obliged to keep within their dwellings on any day when this Egbo brutality is being enacted.

It is a matter on which I should like to have your Lordship's opinion, as to whether, if permission be given to them to remain at Duke Town, they are to be subject to the existing laws of Old Calabar or to the protection of British subjects.

I have, &c.

May 30, 1856.*

Sir,

WE who are under the British subject do heretofore lay our complaints to you, concerning Captain Edward Davies, supercargo on board the ship "Calabar." We recollect on the 8th of May, Captain Davies went and enticed the Chief of this country, that is, King Duke, that he, the said King, must drive away all of the Sierra Leone people who resided here into this Mission-hill; and on the 9th May, he, the said Davies, go and tell the King of the town that if he don't drive us away from this town we will surely fetch war and kill the whole of the natives and take away the country from them. And from since we come into this town, we reside with the Mission; we never disturb any of the Calabar men; neither violate their law, neither disturb any of those captain in these river. Since we came from civilized country, we show honour to them as our superiors; we thinketh within ourselves that market is for all men.

From since Captain Davies entice the King to drive us, there is no peace amongst we and the country people. As touching those three refuge who has escaped for their lives and reside with the Mission, and we thinketh within ourselves that you have already deside the matters, and they stop here under our minister the Rev. W. A., as their protector. And on the 29th May, all of the Calabar men combined together that they must have those three refuge to be killed, and of which our minister reject of the same, that he cannot deliver them until such a time our British Consul arrived here. Then the King of the country establish a law that none of us to go into their market to purchase any food, and none of their children to attend day-school; neither they did not wish of any of our minister Sabbaths preaching into their houses.

We request most earnestly as are British subjects to lay it before you.

The Rev. W. Anderson to Consul Hutchinson.

*Mission House, Duke Town, Old Calabar,
June 17, 1856.*

Dear Sir,

IN reply to your inquiries about the Sierra Leone immigrants I beg leave to state—

1. That some three years ago the Rev. Mr. Jones, of the Church Mission, Sierra Leone, was here on a visit. He told the Chiefs of Duke Town, as well as King Eyo of Creek Town, that there were a number of Calabar people at Sierra Leone, who would be glad to come back to their native country. To the best of my belief, both King Eyo and Duke Town gentlemen stated that they should be glad to see them.
2. Some two years ago a few of the native Calabarese arrived here in the mail steamers. I wished them to go to Creek Town, to live under King Eyo, who was willing to give them grounds for houses and plantations. The immigrants, however, most of them elderly people, had originally belonged to Duke Town territory, and wished to spend the evening of their lives where they had spent their early days.
3. Having been brought in some measure under the influence of Christianity in Sierra Leone—indeed there are five of them whom I consider to be in reality Christian men—they abhorred the idea of returning to the native town or towns, and wished for residences in the neighbourhood of the mission-house and the church.
4. A considerable portion of the land called the Mission Hill was at that time unoccupied (I refer to the ground granted by King Eyamba and Duke Town gentlemen to the Mission in 1846). I personally had no objection to allow them to erect temporary huts or houses thereon, as they wished to do so; but I thought it as well to present them to Duke Ephraim in the first instance, and to ascertain if he were willing to allow them land elsewhere.
5. One day, in the latter part of 1854, I went down to the Duke's, accompanied by a few of the men; explained why they had returned to Old Calabar, and asked him if he would give them ground on which to reside. His reply was, "I can't speak for that word to-day, but when all gentlemen meet to-morrow morning I tell them; then we talk about it, and then I tell you what they say."
6. On my visiting the Duke a day or two afterwards, he informed me that he and his gentlemen had talked over the matter, and that they had no room for them in the town; but that he and his gentlemen thought that "plenty bush," i. e., unoccupied land, was to be found near the mission premises, and that if they and I were agreeable they might live there.
7. The Duke and Duke Town gentlemen thus indicated their willingness that the Sierra Leone people should live in the country. Had they not done so, I should have insisted on their going to Creek Town, as King Eyo was quite willing to receive them. There are seven families in all, who have erected seven cottages; they all lived peacefully and inoffensively in reference to the Calabar people, till very lately, that two of the men have engaged in the palm-oil trade. This offended the supercargoes in the river, and I understand that they have been endeavouring to lead the Duke and others of the gentlemen to believe that large numbers of people will be here forthwith from Sierra Leone, and that they will take possession of the country of Old Calabar.

This led the Duke lately to request me to order all the Sierra Leone people out of the country; and also to state that they had been located here without his knowledge or consent. You know the current value of the Duke's averments.

I feel grateful to you for the kindly interest you have taken in regard to the welfare and security of the poor immigrants, and I am sure that they are deeply grateful for the aid you have rendered them at this critical time.

As I may not have another opportunity of writing you during your present stay here, allow me, in conclusion, to thank you for the friendly services which you have rendered to the Mission at this station.

May every blessing be yours.

Dear Sir,

ALLOW me to state that I objected to Mr. Lynslager's arrangements for the salvation of twin infants, and acquiesced in and cordially approved of yours, inasmuch as, by Mr. L.'s arrangements, the infants were to be separated from their mothers, and transported from their native country; whereas by yours, the children will be continued with their mothers, in their country, under the permanent supervision of the missionaries.

Another, though minor consideration, in my mind, was this: the infants committed to our care cost a great deal of anxious toil, and not a little expense, for which we receive no remuneration from any quarter, save what is included in "the testimony of a good conscience." Now we were present when your arrangement was made, and acquiesced in it. From the meeting at which Mr. L.'s arrangement was made, we were, in effect, excluded; and I am a holder of the (I suppose British) maxim that "there should be no taxation where is no representation."

Sir,

Foreign Office, August 23, 1856.

I HAVE received your despatch of the 24th of June last, inclosing a letter addressed to you by several Sierra Leone people resident on the Mission Hill, at Duke Town, Old Calabar, complaining that Captain Edward Davies, the supercargo on board the ship "Calabar," has been endeavouring to incite the Chiefs to drive them out of the Settlement, by representing that if they do not do so, the Sierra Leone men will eventually expel the Chiefs, and take possession of their country; and it would appear by the letter from Mr. Anderson, the missionary established at Duke Town, which is inclosed in your despatch, that there is some foundation for the complaints of these Sierra Leone men, and that the reason assigned for the ill-will of the supercargoes towards them, is the fact that some of them have engaged in the palm-oil trade on their own account.

I have to state to you that Her Majesty's Government learn with satisfaction the growing disposition of the natives to embark in legitimate trade, and desire that all due encouragement and protection should be given them. But you should warn them to be careful, in all their dealings with the supercargoes, not to give just cause of offence; and you will report in detail any illegal or arbitrary acts committed by the supercargoes, and let it be known among them that you are instructed to do so.

With regard to that part of your despatch which relates to the barbarous practice, sanctioned by Egbo law, of permitting a masked man to go about the town on Egbo days, with liberty to whip all the slaves—men, women, and children—whom he may meet, I have to desire that on the occasion of the first visit which you may make to Calabar, you will insist strongly, in the name of Her Majesty's Government, on the discontinuance of this barbarous custom.

I will answer, in a future despatch, your question as to whether the Sierra Leone men established at Old Calabar, are entitled to protection as British subjects.

I am, &c.

My Lord,

Clarence, Fernando Po, July 28, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to transmit herewith a letter I have received, on the 4th instant, from the supercargoes of the Old Calabar river, with copy of my reply, which I trust will meet your Lordship's approbation.

Your Lordship will observe, that in their acknowledgment of my two communications, they have made no reference to that which conveyed to them the disapprobation of Her Majesty's Government concerning the practice of making one man liable for a debt due by another.

The Supercargoes in Old Calabar River to Consul Hutchinson.

Sir,

Old Calabar River, June 30, 1856.

WE, the undersigned supercargoes trading in the Old Calabar river, respectfully and earnestly call for your attention and interference in the following matter:—

About ten years ago, a most inhuman and unjustifiable massacre of Ocoona people was perpetrated by a people called Omaun or Bosun. These Ocoona people were in the habit of bringing large quantities of oil to Bosun to sell, and it was on one of these occasions that the massacre took place: from that time to the present not a single puncheon of palm oil has been brought to Old Calabar from Bosun. Had the Old Calabar people the means of getting to Ocoona, this could be remedied; but the Bosun people occupying an island in the middle of the river, completely command all the passes, and prevent intercourse between Old Calabar and Ocoona. Now, means of every kind have been tried by the Old Calabar people to bring these opposing parties to terms, but all have failed, and it is an annual loss to this river of oil to the amount of 1,800 puncheons.

From your experience and knowledge of the character of the people, we now throw ourselves on you; for the Old Calabar people say, if you, as a British Consul, in a vessel of war, will go to that country, that you can at once settle the matter. The head Chiefs and traders will accompany you, and give you all the information and assistance you may require. This is a matter, exclusive of bringing a hostile people to terms of peace and trade, also of great value in a mercantile point of view.

And now that we have explained that you are the only party that will be able to settle it, we trust you will give it your best consideration and adopt the best period of going to that country, which we hear is about August.

Consul Hutchinson to the Supercargoes in Old Calabar River.

Gentlemen,

Clarence, Fernando Po, July 4, 1856.

I HAVE to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of June 30, requesting me to proceed in a man-of-war to Bosun, up the Cross river, in order to try and settle a palaver existing between the Bosun and Acoono-Coono people, which causes an annual loss of 1,800 puncheons of palm oil to the traders in the Old Calabar river.

Before this application was made, I expected an acknowledgment of my communication to you, from Her Majesty's steam-ship "Scourge," on 17th June, in which I gave you an extract from a despatch I had received from Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and which I again repeat:—

"I have to acquaint you that the first of the above-mentioned agreements

(that of detaining one man for a debt due by another) appears to me to be manifestly unjust, and to be calculated to give rise to endless embarrassment and disputes between the British supercargoes and the natives of Creek Town; and I have to instruct you to inform King Eyo and the Committee of Supercargoes at Creek Town, that Her Majesty's Government cannot sanction that Agreement, and that they must consider it to be cancelled."

By the last mail steamer I have received a despatch from Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, in which his Lordship instructs me to inform the British supercargoes at Old Calabar, that if, "in order to recover debts due by the natives to them, they choose to have recourse to unjust, violent, and high-handed measures, such as detaining one man on board ship as a hostage for another, or seizing palm oil, the property of one man, in payment of a debt due by another, the British Consul at Fernando Po must leave the British supercargoes to themselves, and abandon as hopeless all attempts to arbitrate between them and the native Chiefs."

I therefore feel under the necessity of forwarding your application to the Foreign Office before I can give any reply to it, save the extracts from the despatches which this letter contains.

I have, &c.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to your Lordship a document which reached me per boat this morning, a few hours after the Royal mail-steamer had departed hence for Old Calabar river.

Although with this representation I have had returned to me from the supercargoes my letter to King Duke Ephraim of Duke Town—a copy of which was forwarded to your Lordship (Inclosure No. 4 in despatch of June 24*)—which was not delivered, and the seal unbroken, thus still showing their disrespect to the British authority out here, I deem it my duty not to permit such an outrage as this to pass unexamined, and, if found correct, unpunished.

As I expect the steamer to touch here to-morrow for the mail bags, I have written a letter to the Senior Officer of the Bights, requesting him to send me a man-of-war steamer at his earliest convenience.

 Inclosure 1 in No. 86.
The Supercargoes of Old Calabar River to Consul Hutchinson.

Sir,

Old Calabar River, August 29, 1856.

WE, the undersigned supercargoes, trading in the Old Calabar river, call your attention to the following murderous outrage committed on Captain J. Cuthbertson, ship "Africa."

On the evening of Saturday the 23rd, Captain Cuthbertson, taking his usual rounds to the traders, was waylaid by about twenty men, armed with sticks and bludgeons, who attacked him from behind. He defended himself as well as he could, and fought his way as far as Egbo Basseys, who gave him protection. They, however, broke into Egbo Basseys's yard, and there again attacked him, knocked him down, split his head in three places, and made his right arm one mass of bruised flesh; and one scoundrel, a brother of Lame Henshaw Duke's, whilst he was on the ground, opened his legs out, and with a six-foot stick struck him on the abdomen and testicles.

This outrage was concocted and set in motion by Lame Henshaw, his two brothers being the ringleaders.

Captain Cuthbertson now lies in a dangerous state.

We waited in a body on King Eyo, and told him the occurrence, which he said he had heard, asked him for justice on these men. He said he would send our demand to Duke Town, at the same time saying we must not blame the King Duke; for a man from Creek Town was in the Duke's yard, when Lame Henshaw came there, and said he would send his gang to murder Captain Cuthbertson, when the King Duke said, "You want to break law." He said he would, did so, and this is the result in the above murderous outrage.

On Monday King Eyo sent his Egbo, and a large meeting of the natives took place. We are informed the King Duke called all to witness that he told Henshaw not on any account to do what he had done; but the reply was, that they would do what they liked. We could get no satisfaction for the outrage, and were given to understand we might expect as much ourselves. We are defied, told that a man-of-war will not be able to take this Henshaw; but the King Duke has blown Egbo on him, and says he will deliver him up to you, saying he is powerless himself to punish him, and that we must look to you and ourselves for future protection.

Should this outrage not be promptly redressed, our lives are not safe for a single moment, and we have determined not to go on the beach again at present. We intend to wait on you in a body on the arrival of the mail; and should one of Her Britannic Majesty's vessels of war be in Clarence, we would request of you to detain her until you see us.

We beg, &c.

Consul Hutchinson to Commander Haswell.

Sir,

Clarence, Fernando Po, August 29, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to inclose to you copy of a representation I have received from the British supercargoes in the Old Calabar river, detailing the facts of a gross outrage committed on one of their body, by which it appears his life is in danger.

I beg leave to request that you will be good enough to send me a man-of-war steamer as soon as possible, to convey me to that river, in order to investigate this matter.

At the same time, if it would not interfere with the arrangements of the Bights squadron, I would feel obliged by your permitting the steamer, on returning from Old Calabar, to convey me to the River Bonny, in order to hand over to King Amacree his last payment of the anti-Slave Trade tribute, which has been forwarded to me for that purpose by Her Majesty's Government.

No. 87.

The Earl of Clarendon to Consul Hutchinson.

Sir,

Foreign Office, October 19, 1856.

I HAVE received your despatch of the 24th of June, inclosing a memorial from nine liberated Africans who have returned to their own country from Sierra Leone, and who have settled at Duke Town in the Old Calabar river, representing that they live in fear of being persecuted by the native Chiefs, at the instigation of certain British traders in the river, whose displeasure it appears they have incurred in consequence of some of the Africans in question having engaged in the palm-oil trade; and you request to be informed whether, if these Africans are allowed to remain at Duke Town, they are to be subject to the existing laws of Old Calabar, or whether they are entitled to claim protection as British subjects.

I have to state to you in reply that Her Majesty's Government have previously had under their consideration the question as to the right of liberated Africans to be considered as British subjects, and that it has been decided that in the absence of any special legislation to that effect, they cannot be so considered even in the Queen's dominions; and under these circumstances they cannot, of course, be entitled to expect, as a matter of right, that they shall be treated as British subjects when they voluntarily return to, and become residents in, the territory of the native Chief whose subjects they were by birth. Nevertheless Her Majesty's Government can never cease to take a warm interest in the welfare and safety of those Africans who owe their liberty to British intervention, and who have lived for some years under the protection of the British Government, and under the instruction of Christian pastors in a British Colony.

Her Majesty's Government have accordingly learnt with much gratification that the men referred to in your despatch are engaging in lawful and profitable pursuits in their own country; and I have to instruct you to make a formal visit to the Chiefs of Old Calabar and of Duke Town, for the purpose of informing them that the Africans in question are entitled to the sympathy and good offices of the British Government, who will not tolerate the persecution with which those persons appear to be threatened, and will not fail to resent, as an insult to this country, any ill-usage to which they may be exposed. You will, however, state that Her Majesty's Government, being desirous to avoid any misunderstanding or interruption of friendly relations with the Chiefs of the Old Calabar river, have instructed you to propose to them the conclusion of a Treaty, by which, for the satisfaction and security of the liberated Africans, their right to enjoy British protection shall be duly recognised.

In proceeding to settle this affair with the Old Calabar Chiefs, you will take care to warn the liberated Africans that they should be careful, in all their dealings with the British supercargoes, not to give just cause of offence, but you will report in detail to Her Majesty's Government any illegal or arbitrary acts which may be committed against the Africans by the supercargoes, and you will let it be known among them that you have been instructed to do so.

I am, &c.

No. 88.

Consul Hutchinson to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received November 8.)

My Lord,

Clarence, Fernando Po, September 23, 1856.

AS I feel conscious of having been in too great a hurry, when forwarding to your Lordship (in my despatch of August 28, per "Candace") the preliminaries touching an affair in the Old Calabar river, which I have just returned from investigating, I trust it will not be out of order, my making the matter, from beginning to end, the subject of my present communication.

On the 28th ultimo I received a letter from the supercargoes in Old Calabar (a copy of which I again have the honour to transmit), and this was followed up by the supercargoes waiting on me next day, repeating their entreaty that I would endeavour to obtain a steamer and go over as soon as possible, as their trade had been stopped, they deemed their lives and property insecure, they knew not upon which of them another attack would be made, and there were several hundred thousand pounds in value of their goods out on trust with the natives.

In the course of our conversation I remarked to them that "they did not seem to me to understand their position in Old Calabar, for they ought to know that trade, in all the rivers of the Bight of Biafra where trust is given out, can be but a speculation, inasmuch as there exists no international code of commerce between Great Britain and the countries adjacent to these streams, and in the absence of such a code there is no tribunal of appeal or jurisdiction save the moral power of a Consul, combined with the physical, of a man-of-war. Neither of these can be applied to enforcing the payment of debts due to you when you resort to the practice of making one man responsible for the debts contracted by another. My chief duty out here, as expressed by her gracious Majesty's commission, is to 'aid and protect British merchants, and other British subjects,' by all lawful means. Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs has intimated to me, in language that I have conveyed to you, that this regulation cannot be recognised as in any way belonging to, or to be supported by, British law; and therefore, by your perseverance in it, you generate a feeling of hostility towards you amongst the natives, which is the most powerful aid in neutralizing the Treaties signed by the Kings and Chiefs to guarantee protection to British life and property."

I am happy to add that they all expressed their concurrence in my opinions, and assured me that, if I would give them a basis to work upon, they would, by the time of my arrival in the river, prepare a set of bye-laws for my sanction, to supersede those at present existing.

Her Majesty's steam-ship "Myrmidon" having arrived at Fernando Po on the 11th instant, I sent a request to Lieutenant Commanding Hastings St. John de Robeck to accompany me, transmitting to him a copy of the letter I had forwarded to the senior officer, and he at once complied. I cannot express to your Lordship the gratification I feel at the assistance I have received from this gentleman, whose views so exactly coincide with my own, of legitimate commerce being the true extinguisher of the Slave Trade in Western Africa.

On arriving at Old Calabar on the 14th instant, I summoned the supercargoes, Kings, and Chiefs, on board to a Court on the following morning, requesting of King Duke Ephraim that he would bring the accused parties with him. King Duke having come without the latter, and deeming it courteous to wait half-an-hour for their appearance, I read a letter written by King Eyo, stating that he had blown Egbo upon them, to keep them for appearance before me (thus proving by this act that Egbo law was of no use to bring them off); adding, that I did not purpose to go on with the trial till they were on board, and that if they did not come, I would make a request to Commander De Robeck to send on shore and arrest them. I told the Kings that, from my experience of Old Calabar, I had learned the inefficacy of their Egbo law to punish offenders who had ill-treated British subjects; and, moreover, knowing that if I permitted this Henshaw Duke to be punished by Egbo, all his slaves and their property would be awarded as a prey to the heads of his different orders of Egbo. If there were no other reason, this would oblige me to take the judgment of the matter into my own hands, that one of Henshaw's slaves, named Bassy Powder, is the best and richest trader in Duke Town, consequently has the largest amount of British property in his possession, all of which would be sacrificed thereby. I further assured the Kings, that I did not purpose to interfere with Egbo law for the government of their own people, and the punishment of crime amongst them; but that, as I find it ineffectual to secure the payment of debts taken in trust from British supercargoes, useless to prevent a clan organizing to assault a British subject, and inefficacious for the conservation of Treaties guaranteed to protect British life and property, it is my intention, for the future, to guard these by the power that is vested in me, and by that alone.

Before Henshaw Duke had arrived, three letters were handed to me, two of which I knew to be in the handwriting of the Rev. Mr. Anderson, and whom I immediately sent for, in compliance with the request in that signed by the Duke and Chiefs of Duke Town. I asked him (King Eyo and King Duke not being able to give me information) as to the person who had presumed to threaten unpleasant consequences to any one coming on board a British man-of-war; but he was equally unable to afford me any clue to the source whence it emanated.

The Headman, Henshaw Duke, who is a cripple, having come off, and one of his accomplices being on board, I proceeded to investigate the matter.

Having read the statement of the supercargoes to Captain Cuthbertson, he deposed to the truth of the whole of it; and I then questioned Henshaw Duke as to the cause of this outrage. He stated that Captain Cuthbertson had gone into his house on four several times and assaulted him, and that he was driven to this by so frequent a repetition of the outrage.

After this, the Rev. Mr. Anderson and Baillie's defence was handed in to me; but as the chief aggressor, the man who had struck Captain Cuthbertson on the testicles with a stick, and who is a brother of Henshaw Duke, was not forthcoming, I deemed it advisable to adjourn the further investigation until this man was brought forward; and I made a request to Commander De Robeck to keep these two men prisoners on board till I should have more ample means of investigating the matter thoroughly. At the same time, I considered it my duty to observe to Captain Cuthbertson, in presence of the Kings and supercargoes, that "lawlessness such as that practised in going into a man's house and beating him with a stick was far more culpable in him (Captain Cuthbertson) than organised violence on the part of the natives of Old Calabar; and I would not shrink from saying, that the man who would beat a helpless cripple like Henshaw Duke with a stick, either in the street or in his house, was little better than a coward and a brute. The British traders ought to set the blacks a good example by being peaceable, orderly, and humane, and not, by their conduct, goad the natives on to acts of savage reprisal. It would have been my intention to suggest to Lord Clarendon the inquiry from Messrs. Wilson and Dawson if they conferred on him any license to commit such deeds, were it not my belief that they are utterly ignorant of them; and the utility as well as power of a Consul is utterly unavailing out here so long as such a course is practised by a supercargo whose interests the Consul is instructed to protect."

As the supercargoes had arranged a code of bye-laws and the formation of an Equity Court during my stay in the river, I left the final adjudication of the matter till the first meeting of the Court on board Her Majesty's steam-ship "Myrmidon," on Saturday, September 20. I fined Captain Cuthbertson four puncheons of palm oil (one for each assault), and bound him over in a penalty of 100*l.* to keep the peace towards all the residents at Old Calabar during his stay in the river. At the same time, with the consent of the Kings, a penalty of twenty puncheons of palm oil was imposed on Henshaw Duke, with the provision that his Egbo titles should be taken from him. I would not have made this latter so seemingly severe, had it not been deposed before me by Messrs. Hearn and Samuel Davis, one a supercargo and the other a surgeon in the river, that many of the class of whom the late aggressors are members have threatened to murder white men if they went to their houses demanding payment of debts; and though I cannot agree with the system of reckless trust which has hitherto been given out in Old Calabar, I deem it my duty to use every precaution that I may lawfully do, to prevent loss to British merchants within my jurisdiction.

No matter in the whole course of inquiry gave me so much pain as my feeling compelled to mention to the missionary gentlemen that, in settling any palavers between the native Chiefs, it was not my intention to interfere; but that in disputes between the natives and British traders, I must protest against their interfering, as well because adjudicating the latter is one of the objects for which I am sent out by Her Majesty's Government, as that their meddling in commercial affairs is likely to generate a feeling of hostility towards them on the part of the British supercargoes.

I trust your Lordship will not disapprove of my proceedings in this matter, more especially as on all the points included in it I came to no decision without mature deliberation with Commander De Robeck, which I felt myself bound to do, as well from his good sense as from the remembrance that your Lordship had, in a previous despatch, directed me "to leave the British supercargoes to themselves, and abandon as hopeless all attempts to arbitrate between them and the native Chiefs."

I have, &c.

Dear Sir,

*Duke Town Mission House, Old Calabar,
September 1, 1856.*

WE, the undersigned Chiefs and Gentlemen of Old Calabar, hereby request you, when you shall come here for the settlement of the palaver caused by the dispute between Captain Cuthbertson and Henshaw Duke, to call a meeting for the settlement of the same somewhere in the country, and not on board any ship in the river. We mean no disrespect to you whatever by preferring this request to you; but some gentlemen in the river have been threatening, that if we attend

We, the Undersigned, having been unable to be present at the meeting, may, however, state that we believe the foregoing letter to express the unanimous feelings of the chief people of Calabar, and we beg to express our hope that this painful business may be peaceably and satisfactorily settled.

(Signed) HOPE M. WADDELL.

The Rev. Messrs. Anderson, Edgerley, and Baillie, to Consul Hutchinson.

*Duke Town Mission House, Old Calabar,
August 27, 1856.*

Dear Sir,

AT the request of King Duke Ephraim and the gentlemen of Duke Town, we beg leave to lay before you a plain statement of facts in reference to a matter which is exciting a good deal of interest here, and which will be brought before your notice through another channel. We trust that you will not consider it presumptuous or officious in us to comply with the request of the Duke Town gentlemen. We feel assured that it is your earnest desire to do what is right between man and man, and that you will not blame us for ascertaining and communicating to you such facts as may aid you in forming a judgment on an important matter, in connection with those for whose benefit we are spending our lives.

In reference to the affair between the supercargoes in the river and the people of Duke Town, we beg to request your attention to the following statements before you pronounce judgment:—

1. The quarrel between Captain Cuthbertson and Henshaw Duke, in reference to a woman who is generally understood to be a "friend" or concubine of Captain Cuthbertson, is of several months' standing, so that magisterial interference, if deemed necessary, might have been resorted to on your last visit to this river.

2. During the last fortnight or three weeks, Captain Cuthbertson has four times committed an assault on Henshaw Duke in his own house. Captain C.

has frequently gone into Henshaw's house; and sometimes, on seeing that attendants were at hand, he has talked to Henshaw in a friendly manner, and gone away; but when he has found Henshaw unattended, he has, four times, "cursed" him, and struck him both with his fist and his stick. You know Henshaw Duke, and are aware that he is not only a lame, feeble-bodied person, but one of the most harmless persons in Duke Town; he is no match for such as Captain C. He is, probably, the last man in Duke Town to whom any honourable man would lift either cudgel or fist.

3. The last assault committed by Captain C. was on the morning of the 23rd instant, when he found Henshaw alone—save that his wife was by him—and struck him a heavy blow with his stick on the head. The blow appears to have been within a hairbreadth of totally ruining the right eye. That stroke caused a considerable effusion of blood. On a previous occasion, when Captain C. was maltreating Henshaw, he declared to him that he (Captain C.) would not rest satisfied till he should have him killed. One great aggravation of Captain C.'s conduct, in the eye of the Calabrese, is, that Henshaw is not in his debt—"does not owe him one flint."

4. On the evening of Saturday, the 23rd instant, when a number of Henshaw's friends were with him, no doubt condoling with him on account of what had transpired, the eye began to bleed afresh. The sight of the blood, and the knowledge possessed by the young men as to the brutal treatment to which he had been subjected, so excited them, that a few of them sallied from the house into the town, with the view of giving Captain C. a few smart blows, should they fall in with him; as a sort of satisfaction for the injuries inflicted on their kinsman.

5. The young men did fall in with Captain C., and inflicted several smart blows on his person (chiefly posteriorly) with canes or small sticks. He ran into Egbo Bassy's yard, and was put by Egbo into his women's yard, till he (Egbo) had scolded and dismissed the young men. We have heard, on what seems to us good authority, that the wounds inflicted by the young men are very slight, "a mere scratch or two."

6. To describe the affair as an "outrageous attempt at the murder of Captain C.," as we observe is done by the Captains in their letter to King Duke of the 20th instant, appears to us to be simply absurd and ridiculous. We know all the facts of the case, probably better than the Captains do, and declare our firm belief that "murder" was not attempted—was never for a moment contemplated by any native concerned in the business.

7. Had there been any real attempt to murder any European, we, for our own sakes, would have been ready to petition you for redress; and we cannot help thinking that in such a case we would have been asked to join others in representing the matter to you.

8. King Eyo and Duke Ephraim have both written to the River gentlemen, proposing that a meeting of all the gentlemen in the country, both white and black, be held for the settlement of the affair, but the River gentlemen have declined the proposal. They prefer sending for you and a man-of-war. We think that they have put the case into good hands in submitting it to you. All that is left for us to desire is, that you will give no decision in the case till you inform yourself of all the facts necessary to be known, in order to "a righteous judgment."

9. It appears to us, from what we know of the state of matters generally, that there is a disposition in some quarters to interpret the Treaty made when you were last here, as a license to white men to perpetrate any outrage they choose on the natives of Old Calabar, and as a preventive to the natives taking any action whatever, even in self-defence.

10. We would call your attention to the fact, that a letter sent by King Eyo to the supercargoes and missionaries, yesterday, requesting a meeting for the settlement of the affair, was intercepted by the River gentlemen, and has not reached us. The interception of a letter from the King of the country to public parties, on the public business of the country—for surely this is no "trade palaver"—has rather a suspicious look; and we cannot avoid the conclusion that, had the matter under consideration been of such a nature as is fitted to undergo a testing examination, the proposal of the two chief men in the country would have been accepted by the gentlemen of the River.

Requesting your consideration of the above statements before you decide the matter, and with fervent wishes that in this, and in all the other perplexing duties to which you are called, you may be guided by wisdom from above, we are, &c.

Consul Hutchinson to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received November 8.)

My Lord,

Clarence, Fernando Po, September 24, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to transmit herewith a Code of Bye-laws for the regulation of trading matters between the British supercargoes and the native traders at Old Calabar, which I deemed it expedient to sanction during my recent visit to that river, in Her Majesty's steam-ship "Myrmidon."

With this I also inclose to your Lordship a document, granting a piece of ground which was made over to me by King Duke Ephraim, without any purchase, or solicitation, or threat, on my part, to obtain it from him, for the purpose of building an Equity Court. I deemed it expedient to accept of it, as well because a house, which was purchased from a Chief, named Egbo Jack, by British supercargoes, formerly stood on that spot of land, and was used as a place of meeting for evening's recreations, as because I deemed his offering it to me to be in the light of my sanctioning a security that white and black men might meet there, without danger of the latter being arrested by the former. The natives of Old Calabar are not a race of people who can be expected to jump at once to the bestowal of their confidence in the executive authority of any class of men who have so long treated them as I regret to say the former class of supercargoes at Old Calabar have done; and although I assured the Kings that the bye-laws I had just sanctioned were to do away with the iniquitous code of making one man accountable for debts contracted by another, I deemed it judicious not to refuse the grant, as I thought all the Chiefs would have more faith in a Court there than on board a merchant-ship.

I must beg of your Lordship, in analysing the twenty-five Articles of this Code, to bear in mind the peculiar condition of commerce in this river, and to believe that there are some of them that I would not have sanctioned, were it not my determination to watch over their administration with attention. In the first place, there is now an immense amount of goods out on trust: the practice of giving it indiscriminately for the future—and one which I believe to have been very much fostered by the former objectionable Code—it is intended to try to limit by the nineteenth Article. The twelfth Article has been inserted chiefly to prevent the Sierra Leone men resident on the Mission premises from shipping oil to England, as they sometimes do, and which oil is virtually the property of the British supercargoes, who bring out vessels and cargoes at great expense. Goods are paid for this oil in trust, before it is delivered to the supercargoes contracting with the natives.

The eighteenth Article was agreed to unanimously by the Kings and Chiefs, after I had read it over to them more than once; and though I represented to the supercargoes that I did not think detaining a man on board a ship as prisoner would enable him to pay his debts, they were of a contrary opinion, and so I succumbed, more especially as your Lordship will observe by Article 6 that all cases of appeal are to be suspended, in the action of judgment, till my next visit or communication. The system of giving bills, as in Articles 20 and 21, is adopted in imitation of the Bonny Equity Court, whose proceedings are carried on in a manner that is highly creditable to its members.

When I add that goods are now in the hands of the natives for an amount of debt exceeding a year and a-half's produce of the country, I trust your Lordship will allow for the many difficulties that stand in the way of the supercargoes towards adopting a more perfect code.

I quite agree with the supercargoes of Bonny and Old Calabar, of the necessity there exists of having a man-of-war placed here for my more frequent visits to the rivers within my jurisdiction; from Clarence to Lagos, the only place near this where men-of-war are permanently stationed, a distance of 383 miles intervenes. All the communication which can be effected between this place and the latter, is by the mail-steamer once a-month; men-of-war only touch here when they are in want of coals.

Your Lordship will, I trust, observe from this the unsatisfactory position of a Consul for the Bight of Biafra, whose jurisdiction extends over a coast extent of nearly 500 miles, into which twenty-eight rivers empty themselves.

I have, &c.

(Signed) THOS. J. HUTCHINSON.

Inclosure 1 in No. 89.

Bye-Laws.

AT a meeting of the British supercargoes and native traders, resident at Old Calabar, held on board Her Majesty's steam-vessel "Myrmidon, Lieutenant Commanding Hastings St. John de Robeck, R.N., the following Code of Bye-laws for the better regulation of trading matters between the parties hereunto subscribing, was unanimously agreed to, and sanctioned by Thomas Joseph Hutchinson, Esquire, Her Britannic Majesty's Consul for the Bight of Biafra and the Island of Fernando Po:—

Article 1. That an Equity Court be established in the Old Calabar country, to keep in their integrity the following bye-laws and regulations, and that the Court shall consist of all the supercargoes, a corresponding number of the chief traders of the locality being admitted at each meeting to hear the decisions of the Court, whose Kings only shall have a vote in the proceedings.

Art. 2. That these laws now entered into be complied with and respected by supercargoes absent from the river, or afterwards to be here; and any native traders, who shall come up, to be bound by them also; and that a majority of votes at each meeting have the deciding power on any subject brought before them, the chairman's vote being equal to two.

Art. 3. That this body have a monthly sitting, unless in special cases to be summoned at any time; that a supercargo, each in his turn according to seniority, be elected chairman for a month; and that a report of each meeting be forwarded to Her Britannic Majesty's Consul at Fernando Po.

Art. 4. That the proposed Court-house be erected at the joint expense of the supercargoes now trading in the river, on the ground where Whitehall once stood, to be considered British property, and under the protection of Her Britannic Majesty's Consul.

Art. 5. That in case of non-payment of just debts by the native chiefs and traders, after the customary notice be given to them by the Equity Court, the supercargoes refuse as a body to take any oil from the debtors, until the ship first ready to go out be settled with, and that each supercargo bind himself to give intimation to the chairman of any oil being offered.

Art. 6. That any one member of the Court have the power to make an appeal against its decisions, the hearing of which is to be deferred, and action of judgment suspended, till the Consul's next visit or communication; and that if on examining this appeal it be found frivolous or invalid, the appellants are to be fined, at the discretion of the Court, not less than twenty or more than sixty pieces of cloth.

Art. 7. That this Court shall apply the fines levied by it, to the expense of the erection, and keeping in order, of the Court-house, or otherwise, as the Court assembled may think fit; that the fines of palm oil be handed over to the ship next in rotation for going out, her supercargo paying the worth thereof in coppers to the chairman, who is treasurer for the time being, and who cannot be at any time in the position of getting the oil for his own ship.

Art. 8. That any supercargo or native after receiving a formal notice to appear at the Court at the time fixed for meeting (two hours grace being given), refusing to attend, thereby setting at defiance the laws of the Court, shall be fined in the amount of twenty pieces of cloth, unless he can show clear cause for his absence.

Art. 9. That in the event of any native trader attempting to evade the penalty of the Court, by non-appearance or otherwise, and notice of such a defaulter being sent to all the traders and supercargoes in the river, such traders and supercargoes are hereby bound under the penalty of 100 crews of good palm oil, to forbid such defaulter coming to his ship for trade, or any other pretence whatever, and if necessary the final settlement of the case to await the arrival of Her Britannic Majesty's Consul.

Art. 10. That any native refusing to pay any fine that may be inflicted by this Court, shall be stopped from going on board any ship in the river, either for trade or any other purpose, and any supercargo refusing to pay a fine shall be denied the privileges of the Equity Court.

Art. 11. That all future comeys be paid to King Eyo Honesty and Duke Ephraim only, two-thirds to the former, and one third to the latter, and that the rate of comey be twenty coppers per register ton; and if at any time the supercargo of a ship, after having paid or tendered the usual comey for the privilege of trading, can prove that the trade of his ship has been stopped, either directly or indirectly, upon any pretext whatever (although no compulsory trust is to be allowed), the Kings are to be held responsible for such stoppage, and must pay one puncheon of saleable palm oil per day, for each 100 tons register to the said ship, as compensation for the loss incurred. The said oil to be paid within seven days after such stoppage shall have been made, and to continue to be paid as long as the trade of any such ship shall be stopped.

Art. 12. That no man can be recognized as a legitimate trader in the country unless he pay, through the Court, a comey of 20,000 coppers per annum, for the privileges of purchasing and shipping oil, and that persons who may attempt trading without paying such comey, shall be liable to have their oil seized as smuggled produce, and delivered to the supercargo next in rotation to leave the river, he giving to the King an acknowledgment in book or books for debts to the like amount due to him.

Art. 13. That all comey be tendered on the arrival of a vessel in the river, and if not accepted, the supercargo may commence trade immediately, such comey to be paid in cargo, and by said ship when subsequently demanded.

Art. 14. That the existing regulations respecting cask-houses be held in force, and the King Eyo and King Duke Ephraim shall prohibit any of their subjects, under any pretence whatever, from entering any of the cask-houses without a written order from the white trader to whom the cask-house belongs: if they do so, they are liable to be arrested and brought before the Court, which shall fine them or those to whom they belong, and if any supercargo can prove that his cask-house has been illegally entered or broken into by any of the natives, and any property stolen therefrom, King Eyo and King Duke Ephraim shall make good all such loss themselves.

Art. 15. That British subjects having any complaint against the natives of Old Calabar, will bring his or their complaint before the Kings, Chiefs, and supercargoes assembled at the Court, and they hereby promise to redress any such grievance by punishing the offenders; and if any British subject shall maltreat a native, he shall also be punished by a Court assembled for that purpose.

Art. 16. That after the comey has been paid or tendered to the Kings, every trader shall be allowed to trade in his own name, and neither the King nor any other trader is entitled to exact any other comey whatever.

Art. 17. That in the event of the Kings or any other of the traders making any agreement to take goods from a ship at a certain rate, all such agreements shall be perfectly binding; and in case the goods agreed upon are not paid for within the time specified, such goods shall be forfeited, and the oil be considered due, as though the goods had actually been paid: such oil not paid during the ship's stay in the river to be deducted from the comey of the said ship on a future voyage, or from that of any other ship in the same employ.

Art. 18. That in the event of any native trader failing to pay his debt in the time awarded by the Court of Equity, that the said native trader shall be delivered up by the King and Chiefs as a prisoner, until such time that his debts be paid, unto the supercargo so demanding the said native trader on board his ship.

Art. 19. That any native trader contracting debt after these laws shall have come into force, must show to the satisfaction of the Court that he is in a position, and intends, to pay his present debt before he shall be called upon to pay the debt subsequently contracted.

Art. 20. That those natives who are at present guarantee for others, be held responsible for the debt of the parties whom they have guaranteed; and that for the future all trust shall be give out in bills, payable at such time as the contractors may agree upon.

Art. 21. That no such bills are to be considered invalid in any way or shape, and are to be paid under the supervision of the Court.

Art. 22. That all parties who shall not have paid their just debts contracted for, shall be posted in the Equity Court on the departure of the vessel to which they should have paid those debts, and that any supercargo giving trust to such an individual after his being posted, shall be denied the aid of the Equity Court to recover his debt.

Art. 23. That in the event of the death of a native trader owing debts to a ship or ships, if his successor be not of age, or otherwise unfit, that an order from the Court shall empower the King and Chiefs to take charge of the property, and to pay all debts that may be due to the supercargoes, and that the King and Chiefs become responsible; no native debt being allowed to be paid until all the debts due to supercargoes be discharged.

Art. 24. That in case a native trader shall be absent, from design or otherwise, the Court shall order the King and Chiefs to send for him, and that eight days be allowed as a maximum time for his appearance, after which the King and Chiefs shall be fined in the amount of twenty pieces of cloth for every seven days until the said absentee be produced.

Art. 25. That these laws be considered the existing laws between British supercargoes and the native traders at Old Calabar, and all former codes shall be by these abolished.

Ratified under my hand and seal on board Her Majesty's steam-ship "Myrmidon," in the Old Calabar river, this nineteenth day of September, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-six.

September 20, 1856.

BE it known to all whom it may concern, that I, Duke Ephraim, reigning King of Duke Town, in the Old Calabar country, do by these presents make over, assign, and demise unto Thomas Joseph Hutchinson, Esquire, Her Britannic Majesty's Consul for the Bight of Biafra, and to his successors in the same department of Her Majesty's service, that piece of ground in Duke Town on which the house called Whitehall formerly stood, being in extent about four hundred square yards, or thereabouts.

And I, the said Duke Ephraim, herewith grant full power and liberty to the British supercargoes at Old Calabar to erect on the said ground a house for an Equity Court and place of meeting, to make stronger the ties of friendship and trade transactions between them and the natives of Old Calabar.

And I hereby state, in presence of the officers of Her Majesty's steam-vessel "Myrmidon," the supercargoes of the Old Calabar river, King Eyo, and the traders of this country, that I make this gift of my own free will and consent, without any offer of reward, purchase, bribe, or because of any threat, but entirely in the spirit aforesaid.

The Supercargoes of Old Calabar River to Consul Hutchinson.

Sir,

Old Calabar River, September 20, 1856.

WE feel very great pleasure in returning our united thanks for your sanction of the establishment of an Equity Court, to carry out the regulations you have approved of, and which we hope will lead to a more prosperous condition of our trade in this river, than has for a long time existed. We confess ourselves convinced, from your arguments, that the mode of confining one man as a hostage, or taking his goods in payment of a debt due by another, deserved the censure of our Government; but you are aware that such a rule had been in existence in this river long before we came to trade here.

We respectfully beg of you to lay before Her Majesty's Government our opinion of the necessity that exists of having a man-of-war permanently stationed at Fernando Po, as we believe it essential that you should visit us more frequently than you can do under the present arrangements. It is now four weeks since the occurrence of this unfortunate affair, which you have so fully and so impartially investigated, and the suspension of our trade during that time has amounted to the united loss of from 10,000*l.* to 12,000*l.* The presence of a man-of-war steamer at your disposal, will, we feel confident, tend to place our trade on such a sure basis as will give security to the large amount of capital that we, and the other supercargoes of the Bight of Biafra, are placed here to represent.

Earnestly begging that you will lay this matter before the Government, and hoping for its success, we have, &c.

My Lord,

Clarence, Fernando Po, September 27, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's despatch of August 12, approving of my having furnished Don Miguel Martinez y Sanz, the chief of the Roman Catholic mission sent by the Spanish Government to the islands in the Gulf of Guinea, with the documents requested by him, in order to protect the schooner "Leonor" from molestation by British cruizers on the mission on which she was about to proceed to Annabon.

My Lord,

Clarence, Fernando Po, September 29, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's despatch of 13th August, approving of my proceedings relative to complaints against Duke Ephraim on account of his stopping all communication with the Missionary Settlements, because the missionaries refused to surrender three persons who had taken refuge with them in order to avoid the ordeal of the poison-nut.

Your Lordship's approval, contained in the same despatch, of the Agreement signed by Commodore Adams and myself with the King and Chiefs of Old Calabar, with the view to prevent the molestation of British subjects, affords me gratification.

Consul Hutchinson to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received November 8.)

My Lord,

Clarence, Fernando Po, September 29, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's despatch of 23rd August, referring to the subject of my despatch of 24th June, which inclosed a letter addressed by the Sierra Leone people resident on the Mission premises at Duke Town, Old Calabar, complaining that Captain Edward Davies, supercargo of the ship "Calabar," had been endeavouring to incite the Chiefs to drive them out of the Settlement, by representations that if this were not done, they would eventually expel the Chiefs and take possession of their country.

I quite agree with the Rev. Mr. Anderson, that the reason assigned for the ill-will of the supercargoes towards them is the fact of their being engaged in the palm oil trade on their own account; and I await with anxiety your Lordship's promised answer to my question, as to whether Sierra Leone men established at Old Calabar are entitled to protection as British subjects.

Your Lordship's statement that "Her Majesty's Government learn with satisfaction the growing disposition of the natives to embark in legitimate trade, and desire that all due encouragement and protection should be given to them," affords me peculiar satisfaction; for I cannot conceive that any nation of men have a better right to avail themselves of the resources of African industry than those who are natives of its soil.

I deem it necessary to mention to your Lordship, that the Sierra Leone residents have no dealings with the supercargoes, and the only offence they give, is by shipping oil in the mail-steamers to England, which the supercargoes claim as their own.

I shall take care to report any illegal or arbitrary acts committed by the supercargoes, and to inform them that I am instructed to do so.

On my next visit to Old Calabar, I shall obey your Lordship's instructions by insisting strongly, in the name of Her Majesty's Government, on the discontinuance of the barbarous system of Egbo flogging.

I have, &amp;c.

Sir,

Foreign Office, November 17, 1856.

I HAVE received your despatch of the 29th of September last, stating, with reference to the arbitrary and illegal conduct of the supercargoes towards the Sierra Leone residents at Old Calabar, that the only offence these latter give the supercargoes is, by shipping oil on their own account in the mail-steamers to England; and I have to instruct you to continue to afford every proper encouragement to the native traders.

Consul Hutchinson to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received December 9.)

My Lord,

Clarence, Fernando Po, October 20, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to transmit herewith copy of a letter I received from the Old Calabar river, per boat, which was sent over here on business a few days after the last mail-steamer left Fernando Po for England.

By the same conveyance I returned an answer which I trust your Lordship will approve of, and believe my assurance that I would not trouble your Lordship with the perusal of documents of this kind, but that I feel convinced they will show more of the peculiar conditions of commercial matters in the rivers within my jurisdiction, than could be gleaned from any other source.

In trading stations like those of the Bight of Biafra, where, in consequence of there being no permanent British residents save the missionaries, it is impossible for me to recommend to Her Majesty's Government the appointment of Vice-Consuls, I deem it expedient to sanction the formation of Equity Courts, for the double purpose mentioned in my reply to the letter from the supercargoes of Bonny (of which your Lordship has approved), as well as to that from Old Calabar, namely, to generate a feeling of confidence among the natives towards the white men, and a corresponding sentiment of friendly relation in the transactions of the supercargoes amongst one another; both of which, I regret to say, have been too long out of existence, more especially amongst the traders of Old Calabar.

When I inform your Lordship, that at the last-mentioned place every eighth day is grand Egbo day, on which the masked man goes about—supposed to be a spirit summoned from the woods, and bearing assumption of a sylvan character by carrying a branch of a tree in the hand not engaged with the whip—it may be inferred what an injury must be done to trade, when it is known that the slave class who come under the Egbo ban are the most active and most honest traders of the whole community.

Your Lordship will observe that at the conclusion of my letter to the supercargoes, I gave them to understand that my assistance would be given to them only on condition of their confining themselves to lawful practices in their dealings with the natives.

I must confess myself in anxious expectation that Her Majesty's Government will not disapprove of the Bye-laws for the government of the Equity Court.

I have, &c.

Sir,

Old Calabar River, October 4, 1856.

WE did not intend permitting you to depart from Old Calabar river without conveying to you our warmest thanks, and the expression of our most sincere admiration of the dignified manner in which you conducted the proceedings which brought you up here. But we avail ourselves of the opportunity of doing so now, and from your long acquaintance with the peculiarities of our trade in this river, we feel fully confident that under the government of the Equity Court, whose formation you have sanctioned, our trading connections with the natives will soon assume a more healthy condition than they have done before; and we unite in wishing you success in all the administrative duties of your office, which you seem so well qualified to strengthen and adorn.

Inclosure 2 in No. 94.

Consul Hutchinson to the Supercargoes of Old Calabar River.

Gentlemen,

Clarence, Fernando Po, October 8, 1856.

YOUR letter of the 4th October gives me more pleasure from the sentiments it expresses of your confidence in the establishment of your Equity Court, than from the high and unmerited compliments you pay to myself. True, I have been longer acquainted with the peculiarities of your trade than with those of any other river in Western Africa, and, therefore, I should feel doubly interested in the prosperity of your commercial dealings with the native traders.

I trust you will not be offended with me for saying, that ever since my first visit to Old Calabar river in 1850, I have lamented the deficiency of commercial morality which I saw existing between the supercargoes and the natives. I know very well that the present body of supercargoes is not to blame for bye-laws and regulations that were sanctioned and put into practice by their predecessors; and although I believe that reform of old abuses cannot be effected in a day, I give it to you candidly, as my opinion, that the establishment of Equity Courts, such as that which you have just formed, seem to me to be the most effectual means of generating a feeling of confidence between your body and the natives, and a more healthy condition of commercial amity between yourselves than has hitherto existed.

And let me assure you, as a point of my belief, that without simultaneous and sympathetic action in trading matters, things will always be at odds and ends amongst you. I do not wish men unanimous in their private tastes and habits, for without difference of sentiments and sensations, the world of creation would not go round so harmoniously as it does; but for examples in commercial unanimity, look at the corn exchanges, the stock exchanges, the whole series of mercantile communities at home, and you will see that they are governed and kept in prosperity by the unanimity of their members. Let it not be said that, in the infantile trade of Africa, the elements of discord are your upholding prop; for depend upon it these elements have not an invigorating nor enduring power.

The peculiar position in which you are placed of having so many thousand pounds' worth of goods out on trust with the natives has induced me to assent to a few provisions in the Code of Bye-laws for the government of your Equity Court that I would not otherwise have sanctioned; but I trust that time will do away with the necessity for these (Articles 18 and 22), because it is my firm conviction that you will find yourselves in a more independent position, and your employers' property less liable to be sacrificed, if you do not allow the natives to take credit from you to such a large amount as they have hitherto done.

The same advice as I have given to the Bonny supercargoes, not to meddle with the superstitions or domestic broils of the natives, I give to you. On all matters in which the brutality of Egbo law interferes with your commerce, I would advise you to appeal to me; for trading can never assume prosperity in any country where such an abominable institution exists; and it is my duty to protect you from its evil influence. Were there no other reason for my opposition to it than the fact that a man tried and condemned by Egbo is doomed to have all the property and slaves in his possession, whether they be his own or not, divided as a prey amongst its high-priests, I would deem it an obligation on me to oppose its codes. But when I see that Egbo affords no protection to British life or property, and that it is a system maintained to keep the slave population in subjection by the grossest brutality, I am equally justified in trying to suppress it.

As many of your best and most honest traders are of the latter class—slaves, you will be glad to hear that I have received instructions from Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs "to insist strongly, in the name of Her Majesty's Government, on the discontinuance of the barbarous custom of permitting a masked man to go about the town on Egbo days with the liberty to whip all the slaves—men, women, and children—whom he may meet."

I shall watch with interest and attention over the growth of "the more healthy condition" of trading matters, which you anticipate from the Equity Court, and shall at all times be willing to give you my assistance by "every lawful" means in securing you, and the merchants whom you represent, from loss by the dishonesty of the natives.

I have, &c.

Consul Hutchinson to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received December 9.)

My Lord,

Clarence, Fernando Po, November 20, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to transmit, herewith, copy of a letter I had addressed to King Duke Ephraim, of Duke Town, Old Calabar, previous to my last visit to that river.

When all the members of the Equity Court, with the Kings and Chiefs of Old Calabar, were assembled at the Palaver-house, I introduced the subject to their notice, and requested that the latter would inform me what answer to my communication on the Egbo flogging they wished me to convey to Her Majesty's Government.

A lengthened conference took place among them, and at the end King Eyo said, he was commissioned by all the head men to tell me that obedience to their laws could not be kept up without this practice, which he gave me to understand was the prop and pillar of Egbo authority in Old Calabar. He further added, that the cruelty of it is not as much as it is represented, because an Egbo bell is tolled a few hours before Iyampe (the masked man) goes on his rounds, so as to warn the slave population to be out of the way.

When your Lordship recalls to mind that nearly two-thirds of the population of Africa are still slaves, it may be imagined what a difficulty there exists in impressing on those who constitute the governing power the right of liberty, and the wrong of tyrannic compulsion to serfdom.

Consul Hutchinson to King Duke Ephraim.

Sir,

Clarence, Fernando Po, October 20, 1856.

I HAVE to acquaint you that I received, last month, by the mail-steamer "Niger," a despatch from Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, in which his Lordship instructs me, "on the occasion of my next visit to Old Calabar, to insist strongly, in the name of Her Majesty's Government, on the discontinuance of the barbarous custom of a masked man going about the town on Egbo days, with liberty to whip all the slaves—men, women, and children—whom he may meet."

I cannot command words to convey to you my abhorrence of such a practice as this, as well from its barbarous inhumanity as from its doing such a material injury to trade; and I would give you a friendly advice, with the commands of my Government, to discontinue it, as your country never can get better, in a moral, social, humane, or religious condition, so long as it is sanctioned or tolerated by you.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's despatch of September 22, approving of my determination not to interfere in the affairs of the Old Calabar supercargoes until I had received from them a distinct assurance that they would abandon the mischievous practices disapproved of by Her Majesty's Government, of detaining natives as hostages for other persons, and of seizing the property of one native for a debt due by another.

Your Lordship will have observed, before this, that these objectionable laws have been set aside by the bye-laws for the regulation of the Equity Court.

Consul Hutchinson to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received January 8, 1857.)

My Lord,

Clarence, Fernando Po, November 22, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to your Lordship, a Treaty of twenty-one Articles, which I ratified on board Her Majesty's steam-sloop "Merlin," on the 17th instant; between the British supercargoes trading in the Brass river, and the Kings and Chiefs of the countries adjacent thereto.

I deem it necessary to inform your Lordship that Kaya, King of O'Bullamabry (who is a nephew of the late King Boy), told me that Mr. Beecroft, on his visit to this river, in Her Majesty's steam-vessel "Myrmidon," about three years past, promised that Her Majesty's Government would pay him a subsidy, similar to that which had been paid to the Kings of Bonny and New Calabar, for the suppression of the Slave Trade. I asked the King if he did not find that palm oil trading was doing more good to his country than exporting slaves, to which he replied in the affirmative. He expressed his willingness to sign a “book” to that effect, leaving it to Her Majesty’s Government to “dash” him anything they pleased for so doing. He also informed me that it was more than three years since a slave-vessel appeared in any of the rivers in the neighbourhood of Brass.

I told him that I had every hope Her Majesty’s Government would instruct me to pay him something as a tribute, but that I had not authority to make him a promise to any definite amount.

The peculiar arrangements alluded to in Article V, refer to the possibility of any future demand being made, and acquiesced in by British traders having factories on shore, and will of course become equally binding on all British supercargoes, if agreed to.

The term “custom-bar” mentioned in Article VI, is different from comey, as the former expresses the revenue which is levied from the native traders for the King, whereas the latter signifies the custom fees that are paid by the British supercargoes for the privilege of trading.

As the Brass people are very timid in coming on board a man-of-war steamer, whose machinery they believe to have been manufactured by the devil, and as there has been only one specimen of this kind of ship in their river before, I thought it expedient to gratify their whims by yielding to their request that I would go ashore to a British factory, in order to hold a conference with them. I was accompanied by Lieutenant Wright, R.N., and Master Parkinson, R.N., both of Her Majesty’s steam-vessel “Merlin,” Commander Buckley being too ill to leave his ship.

After the Treaty was signed, they all accompanied me to the steamer, where I explained that they might always look on British men-of-war as friends to them, as long as they abjured the exportation of slaves, and adhered to the employment of these slaves in developing the industrial resources of their country.

To the supercargoes, before they quitted the ship, and in presence of the Kings and Chiefs, I remarked that “as the trade at Brass had been more recently established than at any other river in the Bight of Biafra, there were three important points which I wished to impress upon them in reference to their future mercantile relations with this locality, and all of which I deemed to be most important for a healthy nurture of the commercial spirit amongst uncivilized races. The first was, to be just and fair in their barter-dealings with the natives; the second, not to interfere in their harmless superstitions and country prejudices; and the third (not least essential), to be unanimous in their commercial transactions with the native traders as well as with one another, for I had seen very disastrous results arising in other rivers from British representatives, agents of the same house, opposing one another in a manner that was very far from being conducive to their own interests, or those of the merchants whose property was confided to them for profitable investment or speculation.

I trust my proceedings in Brass river will meet with your Lordship’s approbation.

I have, &c.

Inclosure in No. 100.

Treaty with the Kings and Chiefs of the Bonto and Brass Rivers.

A CODE of Commercial Regulations being deemed advisable for furthering the interests of commerce, as well as for the better security of amicable connection between the British supercargoes trading in the Rio Bonto, or Brass river, and the natives of the Brass country, the following Articles have been mutually agreed to by the British supercargoes, on the part of themselves and their successors, with the Kings of the territories adjacent to the Brass river, on the part of themselves and the people of their districts, sanctioned by Thomas Joseph Hutchinson, Esq., Her Britannic Majesty’s Consul for the Bight of Biafra and the Island of Fernando Po:—

ARTICLE I.

That the Kings and Chiefs of the countries connected in trade with Rio Bonto, duly appreciating the benefit of legitimate traffic, hereby guarantee that from this day forward they shall not engage in or sanction the exportation of slaves from their country.

ARTICLE II.

That the pilotage of vessels entering the river shall be sixteen pieces of cloth, or eighty bars of other merchandize; and of vessels leaving the river, twenty pieces of cloth, or one hundred bars of other merchandize; and any vessel detained for want of a pilot after being ready for sea, all her just debts and her pilotage paid or tendered, though not taken, shall be entitled, as compensation for delay, to half-a-puncheon of oil per day, from the Chiefs who receive comey, who, on their part, are to reclaim such penalty from the pilot causing this detention.

ARTICLE III.

That the comey of vessels entering the river for the purposes of trade be, for vessels of two masts, to pay two puncheons' worth of goods. Vessels of three masts to pay three puncheons' worth of goods to each King (Kayo of O'Bullamaby and Orishima of Bassamby); that boats or vessels coming here with cargo and bringing no produce away are to be excepted; and that for each ship taking part produce out of the river as tenderage to complete her cargo elsewhere, the comey be five bars for each cask.

ARTICLE IV.

That should such comey not have been demanded on or before the fifth day from the arrival of the vessel, the master may hoist his ensign or fire a gun as a notification of his being prepared for trade, when all traders or other Brass men are to be at liberty to visit the vessel for the purposes of transacting business, equally as if trade had been broken formerly by the Chiefs in person, but without prejudice to the subsequent payment of comey when demanded.

ARTICLE V.

That this settlement of comey is not to nullify existing agreements between supercargoes and Chiefs, nor to preclude the making of arrangements to suit particular cases, as in the instance of British mercantile houses who may establish factories in the Brass; such special agreement to be subjected to the approval of Her Britannic Majesty's Consul, and when confirmed to be as binding upon the parties concerned therein, as though embodied as Separate Articles in this Treaty.

ARTICLE VI.

That the custom bar shall be collected by the Chiefs themselves, and at their own expense and trouble.

ARTICLE VII.

That the comey and pilotage being paid, no other tax or payment is to be demanded under any pretence whatever; water is not to be refused in the pilot's town called Twaw, nor is any demand to be made for the privilege of watering. Ground for the erection of houses, and for the storing of casks and goods, is to be granted free of all charges, and is to be considered whilst in the occupation of any British subjects as British property, and the occupant for the time being is authorised by the parties hereto subscribing to expel trespassers, and to maintain his right of occupancy and to defend himself and property against any unlawful aggression.

ARTICLE VIII.

That it shall under no circumstances be compulsory on the master or supercargo of a vessel to give goods on trust, but when trust is taken, that it shall be incumbent on the Kings and Chiefs, and those to whom comey is paid, to see that no losses accrue to British supercargoes from defaulting debtors.

ARTICLE IX.

That a limit of time to pay in debt be given to each trader, to be settled by private contract.

ARTICLE X.

That should any trader or gentleman being indebted to a vessel in the river fail to pay his debt when it becomes due, a notice of the same is to be given to the Chief of the town where such trader resides, who is hereby required to see justice done to the British supercargo, and if necessary is to take possession of the trader's oil or other property, and therewith liquidate the debt.

ARTICLE XI.

That any Chief of a trading town neglecting to act in conformity herewith, be held personally responsible for the debt. The Chiefs receiving comey are required, and engage, to see this Article executed.

ARTICLE XII.

That long detentions having heretofore occurred in trade, and much angry feeling having been excited in the natives from the destructions by white men, in their ignorance of the superstitions and customs of the country, of a certain species of boa-constrictor that visits the cask-houses, and which is "jew-jew," or sacred to the Brass men, it is hereby forbidden to all British subjects to harm or destroy any such snake; but they are required, upon finding the reptile on their premises, to give notice thereof to the Chief's man in Twaw, who is to come and remove it away.

ARTICLE XIII.

That should, unfortunately, any casualty of said reptile's death again occur, the master or supercargo who, by himself or his people, has been guilty of causing the same, shall pay a fine of one puncheon of palm oil, and his trade shall suffer no stoppage. Any detention occurring after this amount has been tendered, will render the Chiefs liable to a fine of one puncheon of oil per day, as in the ensuing Article.

ARTICLE XIV.

That in the event of any vessel's trade being stopped, either directly by the Chiefs, or indirectly and secretly by their connivance, without just grounds for such proceeding, the authorities receiving comey will be held responsible for the said stoppage of trade, and a fine or penalty of one puncheon of oil per day will be levied from them, as compensation for the vessel so detained during the period of such detention.

ARTICLE XV.

That any supercargo or master having cause of complaint against a Chief, or native trader, or Brass subject, shall give notice thereof to the supercargoes and masters at that time in the river, who shall, conjointly, inform the Chiefs thereof, and require their presence, either on shore, or on board some one of the vessels; and the Chiefs and gentlemen, on their part, consent and agree to assemble when so required, unarmed, and without hostile preparation, and then and there discuss the matters brought before them, in friendly conjunction with the white men present. The Brass Chiefs and others are to act in like manner when they feel themselves aggrieved by any British subject; and the supercargoes and others are to meet the Brass men when called upon so to do.

ARTICLE XVI.

That the supercargoes and masters, on the one hand, and the Brass Chiefs and gentlemen on the other, being assembled to remove grievances, and discuss matters of complaint existing between them, do, on their several parts, engage to adjudicate thereon in a friendly spirit, and endeavour to finally remove the causes thereof in a manner that shall be satisfactory to the traders who frequent the river, and the native merchants. Any settlement so made, to be submitted to Her Britannic Majesty's Consul; and if approved and ratified by him, to become a law of trade, and binding equally with the Articles of this Treaty.

ARTICLE XVII.

That in the event of any serious dispute arising between the British and natives, or in the event of any crime or outrage having been committed by either party against the other, the native Chiefs, on their part, and the British traders, on theirs (should it be deemed necessary by the British subjects to solicit the aid of Her Britannic Majesty's Consul), agree to continue amicable relations with each other, and to avoid hostilities (unless life or the security of property be threatened or in danger), until Her Britannic Majesty's Consul, or a British naval officer, shall enter the river, when a fair hearing will be given to all parties concerned, a strict investigation take place, and due punishment be inflicted.

ARTICLE XVIII.

That upon the death of any supercargo in the river, no second comey can be demanded from his successor for the ship that is left vacant by such a death; and that all trust given out by any supercargo previous to such an event, shall be considered a debt to the merchants of whom he is the representative, and to be paid to whomsoever is appointed to succeed him.

ARTICLE XIX.

That a copy of this Treaty be furnished to each Chief receiving comey, and a copy of that part referring to the pilotage, to the chief pilot; the Chiefs to produce it when receiving comey, and the pilot to show it to the masters upon any vessels entering the river; and that these Articles be held to be the laws existing between British supercargoes and the natives for the regulation of trade matters, to be observed, so long as they continue law, by those who were not present at their enactment as by those who were.

ARTICLE XX.

That the Chiefs and gentlemen of Brass, satisfied that payment of comey as well as the introduction of legitimate traffic to their country, is sufficient compensation to them for the abandonment of the Slave Trade, hereby engage to fulfil the conditions of this Treaty, and to become severally and conjointly responsible for the due payment of all fines to which they, or any Brass subject or subjects, may become liable under its provisions.

ARTICLE XXI.

That the Chiefs of the Bento hereby pledge themselves that no British subject shall, from the date of this, be detained on shore, maltreated, or molested in any way or under any pretence whatsoever. If any such maltreatment or molestation shall take place, the Chiefs of the Bonto will incur the displeasure of Her Majesty the Queen of England, and be declared enemies of Great Britain.

I shall obey your Lordship's instructions in making a formal visit to the Chiefs of Old Calabar for the purpose of informing them that the Africans in question are entitled to the sympathy and good offices of the British Government, and shall endeavour, without any misunderstanding or interruption of friendly relations with the Chiefs, to secure a treaty for the satisfaction and security of these British residents, by which their right to enjoy British protection shall be duly recognised.

Sir,

Foreign Office, January 23, 1857.

I HAVE received your despatch of the 22nd of November, inclosing a Code of Bye-laws for the regulation of trade between British supercargoes and the natives of the Brass country, which you have negotiated with the Chiefs of the Rio Bento or Brass river.

I have to acquaint you that I approve of your having proceeded to the Brass river, and of your having effected a Commercial Agreement between the British supercargoes and the natives, but it will be necessary for me to refer that Agreement to the proper Law Officer of the Crown for his opinion thereupon, before Her Majesty's Government can adopt and authorise you to confirm the same.

With regard to the statement made to you by King Kaya, that Mr. Beecroft promised, in 1853, to make him a present upon the conclusion of a Treaty, I have to inform you that the Treaty which Mr. Beecroft was about to negotiate with the King of Brass, was an anti-Slave Trade Treaty similar to the engagement of which I inclose a draft; and in conformity with the proposal made by Mr. Beecroft at that time, I have to state that, if the King and Chiefs of Brass should be ready to conclude a Treaty for the abolition of the Traffic in Slaves according to the inclosed draft, you will be at liberty to insert therein an Article, promising that a present, either of 1,000 dollars or of goods equal in value to that amount, shall be granted to the King, such present to be delivered only upon the production of a certificate signed by the masters of British merchant vessels frequenting the Brass river, to the effect that the stipulations of the Treaty have been fulfilled with good faith by the King and Chiefs.

Your Lordship may rest assured that I shall lose no opportunity which presents itself of endeavouring to impress upon the native Chiefs of Old Calabar that this barbarous custom is daily proving itself opposed to the principles of common humanity, as well as to the interests of their country's commerce, and therefore objectionable to Her Majesty's Government.

My Lord, Government House, Sierra Leone, October 7, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to inform your Lordship that a slave-canoe from the Sherbros, captured off the Banana Islands, within the jurisdiction of this Colony, by Lieutenant Harger, of the 2nd West India Regiment, Acting Manager of the Western District, was brought into Freetown on the 25th ultimo, having on board 16 men, 4 women, and 16 children, making a total of 36 slaves; this canoe was condemned on the 4th instant, in the Court of Vice-Admiralty, as a lawful prize to Her Majesty.

I regret to add that the capture was not made without resistance offered by the slavers, and two men of Lieutenant Harger's boat, as well as two of the canoe's crew, were slightly wounded.

The captain of the slaver has acknowledged that he made four successful trips previous to his capture; and I am sorry to remark that the poor slaves had been without food for more than two days when the canoe was taken.

Information having very lately reached the Senior Naval Officer of the Northern division of the squadron, that two slavers were expected at the Rio Pongas, where cargo was being collected, Commander Day has proceeded to that river to watch the proceedings of those vessels ; and I have no doubt the natives now rescued from bondage were intended for shipment on board those slavers.

The natives liberated are distributed as follows : 6 men enlisted in the West India Regiments ; 4 girls and 4 boys placed under the care of respectable residents ; 8 boys sent to school ; and 4 women and 10 men located at Waterloo.

In conclusion, I have to express my satisfaction at the manner this canoe was intercepted by the Acting Manager of the Western District ; the weather at sea during this, the rainy season, being very boisterous, of which the slavers take advantage to make their run round Cape Sierra Leone.

Senhor Paranhos to Mr. Jerningham.

(Translation.)

Rio de Janeiro, February 12, 1856.

THE Undersigned, &c., has the honour to acknowledge the receipt of the note that Mr. William Stafford Jerningham, &c., addressed to him on the 4th instant, relative to the capture of the North American schooner "Mary E. Smith," by the Brazilian brigantine "Olinda."

Mr. Jerningham manifests the pleasure which that fact occasioned to the Legation of Her Britannic Majesty at this Court, and holds out the expectation that it will produce a similar emotion on the minds of Her Britannic Majesty's Government.

Mr. Jerningham says, that the capture of that vessel by a Brazilian cruiser, being an indication of the firm resolution of the Brazilian Government to annihilate all attempts at reviving that detestable African Slave Trade, will give more prestige and moral force to the Imperial Government, and will oblige the ill-intentioned to reflect before running headlong into speculations of Slave Trade.

The Undersigned thanks Mr. Jerningham, in the name of the Government of His Majesty the Emperor, for the just appreciation, this time, by Her Britannic Majesty's Legation at this Court, of the firm disposition which animates the said Imperial Government to extinguish, once for all, the Slave Trade in Brazil.

According to official information, up to the present moment in possession of the Imperial Government, it is known that the schooner "Mary E. Smith" was captured sailing under the North American flag, and having on board 350 Africans, off the bar of the port of St. Matthew's (in the province of Espirito Santo), on the 20th of last month, at half-past 5 o'clock P.M.

It is believed that the captain, crew, as well as those individuals who called themselves passengers, were all in the hands of the captor, who conveyed them, as well as the Africans, to the port of Bahia, where they had already arrived. Some of the Africans died during the voyage, in consequence of the privations which they had undergone.

The process and adjudication prescribed by the Law of the 4th September, 1850, and its Regulation of 14th October of same year, will take place either in Bahia or in Rio de Janeiro, according to the orders given by the Minister of Justice.

The Imperial Government hopes that the criminal speculation of the schooner "Mary E. Smith" may be fully investigated, and that the authors and accomplices who are already in prison, and those who may still be discovered and found within the territory of Brazil, may be punished with the full rigour of the law.

I have, besides, sent messages to the Minister of Justice, and received them from him upon this subject; but I am sorry to say that I cannot, as yet, get a positive assurance from his Excellency that these slaves are actually in the enjoyment of their freedom.

Mr. Jerningham to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received April 12.)

My Lord,

Rio de Janeiro, March 8, 1856.

NOT very long ago I received from his Excellency Senhor Paranhos the following note, copy of which I have now the honour to transmit to your Lordship.

By this it appears that the captain of the captured slaver "Mary E. Smith," Cranovich, an American citizen, who is now ill at Bahia, and in the hands of the judicial authorities, made the following revelations; that two more North American vessels, one a topsail schooner named "Vilcot," and another a lugger, had arrived at one of the African ports, between Cape Lopez and Loango, to load slaves for Brazil.

The cargoes were to be sent, according to the captain's testimony, by Joaquim Ignacio Riverosa, brother of Don Francisco Riverosa.

His Excellency says the Imperial Government have taken all such measures as are within their reach, and trust that their authorities will frustrate every attempt of daring speculators; and his Excellency adds that they would be glad if the Government of Her Majesty would particularly direct their attention to those places on the coast of Africa where these speculations are being carried into effect, as well as to the fitting out of any such vessels in the ports of the United States.

His Excellency is of opinion that the basis of the African slave-traders' criminal speculations and operations for the Havana and Brazils, is established in the United States, and that their agents reside in Angola, and other places on the coast of Africa, to load and dispatch the cargoes destined for this country.

His Excellency concludes by saying that the Brazilian Legations and Consulates continue to be furnished with such information as has been obtained in this respect, and that if Her Majesty's Diplomatic Agents and Consuls choose to understand and act in accord with those of Brazil, they will always meet with the greatest willingness on the part of the latter to co-operate with them.

I have communicated the contents of this despatch to Admiral Johnstone, to inform him, in the first place, of the announcement made by the American captain of the "Mary E. Smith," and also with a view that he might inform, vid St. Vincent, the officer commanding Her Majesty's squadron on the coast of Africa of the facts communicated by his Excellency.

I beg to subjoin copy of Admiral Johnstone's letter to me on the subject.

In consequence of further information which had reached me from Her Majesty's Consul at Bahia, Mr. Morgan, I took occasion, when acknowledging the receipt of Senhor Paranhos's note, to inform him in the note herein inclosed, that this gentleman had stated that from investigations made by the police four more vessels, belonging to the same Association to which the "Mary E. Smith" appertained, were expected on the coast of Brazil with slaves, and that the first expected was the "Mary Stuart," and that there was even a report in Bahia, when the post left, that the "Mary Stuart" had actually landed 1,400 slaves in the River Mucury, in the Province of Espirito Santo.

I asked his Excellency forthwith to inform me if this rumour is founded, or not. I have not as yet received a reply.

As his Excellency seemed to have been of opinion that the basis of the African slave-traders was in the ports of the United States, I have ventured to tell him that he cannot be unconvinced that the focus of the present attempt at a renewal of the Brazilian Slave Trade is in Rio de Janeiro.

I have assured his Excellency that all Her Majesty's Diplomatic Agents and Consuls would accept with pleasure the invitation to co-operate with those of Brazil in endeavouring to crush the cruel and uncivilizing Traffic in Africans, and no one with more activity than myself.

I have, &c.

Inclosure 1 in No. 114.

Senhor Paranhos to Mr. Jerningham.

(Translation.)

Rio de Janeiro, February 22, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to address myself to Mr. W. Stafford Jerningham, &c., in order to communicate to him the following information possessed by the Imperial Government, relative to new attempts of the slave-traders.

The captain of the schooner or yacht "Mary E. Smith," recently captured on the bar of St. Matthew's, by the Brazilian cruizer "Olinda," has divulged that two more North American vessels, one of which a topsail schooner, the "Vilcot" of New York, and the other a lugger, had arrived at one of the ports of Africa, between Cape Lopes and Loango, to load slaves for Brazil.

Those cargoes were to be sent, according to the said captain's testimony, by Joaquim Ignacio Riverosa, a brother of Don Francisco Riverosa, who, he says, is in Rio de Janeiro.

The Imperial Government have taken all such measures as are within their reach, and trust that their authorities will frustrate every attempt of the daring speculators on the territory of Brazil; and they would be very glad if the Government of Her Britannic Majesty would particularly direct their views to those places on the coast of Africa where those speculations are carried into effect, as well as to the fitting out of such vessels in the ports of the United States.

It appears unquestionable that the African slave-traders have established a basis for their criminal speculations and operations to the Havana and Brazil in ports of the United States, and that there are agents in Angola and other places in Africa, commissioned to load and dispatch the cargoes destined for these countries.

The Brazilian Legations and Consulates have been and continue to be made acquainted with such information as has been obtained in this respect, and if the Diplomatic Agents and Consuls of Her Britannic Majesty choose to understand and accord with those of His Majesty the Emperor, they will always meet with the greatest willingness on the part of these to co-operate with them in as far as it may be possible.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 24th instant, and its inclosure, relative to the fresh Slave Trade speculations on this coast, and I beg you will be good enough to inform Senhor Paranhos that, by the next mail, I purpose forwarding a copy of his note direct, via St. Vincent, to the Commodore commanding Her Majesty's squadron on the coast of Africa, as well as to the Admiralty; and that so far as the means at my command admit, no effort shall be wanting on my part to further the views of the Imperial Government in checking this Traffic.

I shall also communicate to that officer the contents of your letter of yesterday on the same subject.

Inclosure 3 in No. 114.

Mr. Jerningham to Senhor Paranhos.

(Extract.)

Rio de Janeiro, February 27, 1856.

I BEG to acknowledge the note which your Excellency did me the honour to address to me on the 22nd instant, communicating information relative to fresh Slave Trade speculations to this country.

Your Excellency has informed me, that the captain of the "Mary E. Smith" had divulged that two more North American vessels, the "Vilcot" and a lugger, had arrived in one of the ports of Africa, between Cape Lopes and Loango, to load slaves for Brazil.

Joaquim Ignacio Riverosa, brother of Don Francisco Riverosa, is stated by your Excellency, according to the captain's of the "Mary E. Smith" account, to be the person who promotes these two Slave Trade enterprises. I have lately received news from Her Majesty's Consul in Bahia, who declares that four more vessels belonging to the same Association to which "Mary E. Smith" belonged, were likewise expected to arrive on the coast of Brazil with slaves, and that the first expected was the "Mary Stuart." There was even a report current in Bahia, when Mr. Consul Morgan closed his despatch, that the "Mary Stuart" had landed 1,400 slaves in the River Mucury.

I sincerely trust that this may not be the case; and I must request your Excellency to inform Her Majesty's Legation if the Imperial Government have also been advised of such a rumour.

Your Excellency declared in your note of the 22nd instant, that the Imperial Government have taken all such measures as are within their reach, and trust that their authorities will frustrate every attempt of daring speculators on the territories of Brazil; and they would be very glad if Her Britannic Majesty's Government would particularly direct their attention to those places of the coast of Africa where those speculations are carried into effect. Your Excellency also adds, that it appears unquestionable that the African slave-traders have established the basis of their operations to the Havana and Brazil in the United States, and that they have agents in Angola and in other places in Africa, to dispatch slave cargoes to these countries.

I shall take occasion by the next mail to forward a copy of your Excellency's note to Her Majesty's Government, who will learn with pleasure that the Imperial Government have made due preparations to frustrate further Slave Trade aggressions, and no doubt Her Majesty's Government will immediately direct the attention of the British squadron on the African shores to those points indicated by your Excellency.

In the meantime, I have communicated the contents of your Excellency's note to the British Admiral on this station, who will make known to the British Commander on the coast of Africa, by the first opportunity, where the points are that Senhor Riverosa's vessels are supposed to be fitting out; and Admiral Johnstone begs me to assure your Excellency that no effort shall be wanting on his part to further the views of the Imperial Government in checking the Slave Traffic.

Your Excellency, at the end of your note, states that the Brazilian Legations and Consulates have been, and continue to be, made acquainted with such information as has been obtained with respect to Slave Trade speculations, and that if the Diplomatic Agents and Consuls of Her Britannic Majesty choose to understand and harmonize with those of His Imperial Majesty, they will always meet with the greatest willingness on the part of those functionaries to co-operate with them in as far as it may be possible.

Her Britannic Majesty's Diplomatic servants and Consular Agents, no doubt, will accept this invitation of the Imperial Government with the greatest alacrity, and no one more so than myself, as far as my humble powers will permit; and as we have the same noble and humane object in view, there will be little difficulty existing in the way of the Agents of Great Britain and Brazil mutually co-operating with each other to crush for ever the cruel, illegal, and uncivilizing traffic in African slaves.

Your Excellency says the ports of the United States have been chosen by the African slave-traders as a basis of operations, and that they have also agents in Africa; but I am sure your Excellency cannot be unconvinced that the focus of the present attempt at a renewal of Slave Trade to Brazil is in this country itself, if not, perhaps, as I am assured, even in the city of Rio de Janeiro.

I HAVE the honour to forward to your Lordship copy of a note which I have written to Senhor Paranhos, to ascertain whether any information has been received from the authorities of the Province of Espirito Santo, respecting a brig, name and nation unknown, which had been reported to the Commander of Her Majesty's steamer "Trident" to have been found abandoned fourteen months ago near Barra Secca, in the vicinity of Caravellas, with all sails set and fitted out for the Slave Trade.

Mr. Jerningham to Senhor Paranhos.

Rio de Janeiro, March 5, 1856.

IN an interview which I had the honour of having with your Excellency last month, I called to your Excellency's notice, a circumstance which had been revealed to the commander of the "Trident" by some sea-faring people on the coast of Espirito Santo, namely, that about fourteen months ago, a brig, name and nation unknown, was found on shore with all sail set, abandoned, and equipped for the Slave Trade, near Barra Secca, between St. Matthew's and Rio Doce: the master and crew of the said vessel were represented to have arrived at Caravellas with their clothes, &c., stating that they had been wrecked on the neighbouring coast.

After their departure from Caravellas, a person came there from St. Matthew's who announced that a brig had in fact been wrecked about seven leagues south of that village, fully equipped for the Slave Trade, but abandoned.

The launch of the brig, as the commander of the "Trident" was informed, had been sold by the master at the bar of Caravellas, and was pointed out to him.

Four persons communicated this intelligence, who, in addition, stated that the master was a Spaniard, and the crew Portuguese, and that a friend of his had in his possession some fire-arms which were found on board the brig when she was plundered of everything by the inhabitants of St. Matthew's and Rio Doce, not a vestige of this wrecked craft now remaining.

As your Excellency has read this report, and as I have already communicated it to Her Majesty's Government, I beg now to remind you of it in writing, in order to know if any previous information had reached the Imperial Government, respecting the strange appearance of this abandoned and slave-fitted-out vessel, and on shore at Barra Secca, fourteen months ago; and whether no investigation has been set on foot upon the subject. Her Britannic Majesty's Legation hopes that the Imperial Government will endeavour to obtain from their authorities in Espirito Santo, for their own satisfaction, explanations that may throw light upon such a suspicious occurrence.

SOME months ago I communicated to the Minister for Foreign Affairs a report which I had heard of a landing of 300 Africans in the Province of Alagoas.

His Excellency having requested the Minister of Justice to make inquiries respecting its correctness, Senhor Paranhos the other day addressed me the following note, copy of which I beg now to forward to your Lordship, informing me that according to the intelligence received from the President of Alagoas, the report was unfounded.

WITH reference to your Lordship's despatch of 19th February,* in which your Lordship approved of the note which I had addressed to the Brazilian Government respecting the free Africans Laudelino and Honorio, who were sent to Pará for the purpose of being employed in the Government arsenals of the latter port, I beg now to have the honour to forward to your Lordship copy of Senhor Paranhos' answer upon that subject.

As long as the position of the emancipados in the service of the Brazilian Government is not properly defined, I fear there will be a frequent recurrence of complaints similar to those which I made in the case of the above-mentioned free blacks.

Your Lordship is no doubt aware that the emancipados, in consequence of the Government Decree of the year 1853, are entitled to their certificates of perfect freedom after serving fourteen years in private families, being hired out by the Government to them at a low rate. However, these free blacks must then present a petition in form to the Minister of Justice, who, usually, but not in some instances without a little urging on by Her Majesty's Legation, grants them their liberty.

But the Imperial Government considers the time which the emancipados have served in their own employ as not giving these unfortunate people the same title to reap the benefit of the above Decree, which is evidently a manifest injustice, especially as the labour which is pressed upon them in Government establishments, on public roads, in arsenals, and in barracks, is generally of a more arduous nature than that which the hired emancipados have to perform in the service of the nobility and gentry, who are not unfrequently good and easy masters.

Her Majesty's late Minister, Mr. Howard, during his residence in Brazil took up this question with great zeal, and your Lordship will, undoubtedly, recollect the correspondence which passed between Mr. Howard and Viscount de Abaeté, then Minister for Foreign Affairs, in the year 1854, in which the latter endeavoured to establish that the emancipados who were in the Government employ did not come under the provisions of the Decree of the 28th of December, 1853, No. 1,303.

In conclusion, I beg to state that it appears to me very desirable that Her Majesty's Government should have the kindness to emit an opinion upon this point; for, in the eyes of justice and humanity, it would seem that the Imperial Government, who are bound to re-export, at some time or other, those free blacks, or emancipados, as they are termed, to Africa, should not be allowed to consider them as their legal property, and keep them in a situation which presents them hardly a gleam, whether they give satisfaction by good behaviour or hard work, of ever recovering their liberty.

I am happy to say, however, that lately, but not without frequent messages, I have been able to obtain the freedom of a free African named Desiderio, of the Mina nation, who had been constantly in the Government employ since the year 1835, having been seized by the Brazilian police at the engenho of Cabrito, in the Province of Bahia, shortly after being landed, and the other day he came to thank me for having procured him his certificate of freedom.

WITH reference to my note of the 7th January last, acknowledging the receipt of that which was addressed to me by Mr. W. S. Jerningham, for the purpose of bringing to my knowledge the despatch received by him from the English Consul in Pará, who therein informed him of the arrival in that city of two freed Africans, sent by the Imperial Government in the steamer "Paraná," and that they were working in the Marine Arsenal, guarded and treated as if they were criminals, and in a worse condition than the slaves, I have now the honour to state to Mr. Jerningham that the Minister of Justice, to whom I have addressed myself on this subject, sent me an answer on the 27th March last, containing the information furnished to him by the President of that province, and the Inspector of the said arsenal.

From that information it appears that the first of those Africans went on to the province of Amazonas; and that the second, along with two others who went from this city, were kept there (in Pará) to be employed in felling timber, and had always been considered, in regard to service, discipline, and pay, as belonging to the marine corps, with whom they are lodged, and, in like manner, allowed furloughs on Sundays and close holidays, when their turn comes round; all of which can be witnessed at any time, either by day or night, and was seen some time ago by that same English Consul, when he visited the said arsenal, and conversed with the Inspector of that Department, according to the latter's report.

In communicating to Mr. Jerningham the information received from the two authorities in Pará, I think that I have replied to his said note, and I avail, &c.

WITH reference to a note which I wrote to Senhor Paranhos on the 4th March, and which I forwarded to your Lordship in my despatch of the 22nd ultimo, acquainting his Excellency that, in consequence of complaints which had reached me from the Imperial Government, that captains of British vessels trading to Brazil had endeavoured, and in two instances succeeded, in enticing away slaves, the legal property of persons residing in this country, I had addressed a circular to Her Majesty's Consuls, requesting them to warn all captains and masters of English vessels of the illegality of such a practice, and of the penalties to which, if carried out, they subjected themselves; I beg now to submit to your Lordship copy of a note from his Excellency the Minister for Foreign Affairs, in which, at the same time that his Excellency tenders me his thanks for the circular in question, he takes occasion to defend his Government against some remarks which I was induced to make upon the alleged efficacious protection which the Imperial Government consider they afford to freed blacks, entitled "emancipados."

As I had pointed out to his Excellency the extreme difficulty Her Majesty's Legation were for ever struggling against in obtaining the manumission of some of this unfortunate class, and as I instanced the delay which had taken place in closing the legal proceedings with respect to Mr. Craven's 3 blacks, who had been some time ago declared free by the sentence of the Municipal Judge of Marianna, and about whom I had not as yet been informed whether they were already in the enjoyment of their freedom or not, his Excellency declares that, with regard to the blacks of Mr. Craven, the Imperial Government have acted with the greatest deference towards Her Britannic Majesty's Legation; and his Excellency asserts that the case now pending in the Supreme Court of Rio de Janeiro will shortly receive the final judgment of that tribunal.

Senhor Paranhos endeavours to make out that the Imperial Government have done more in the affair of Mr. Craven's slaves than in merely seeing to the execution of the laws, by doing away with those impediments which retarded the case in the Supreme Court of Justice.

Rio de Janeiro, April 4, 1856.

THE Undersigned, &c., has had the honour to receive the note which, on the 4th ultimo, was addressed to him by Mr. William Stafford Jerningham, &c., in answer to that of the 12th February last, relative to the occurrence touching the captain of the English vessel "Danube."

Mr. Jerningham, in referring to the fact of 2 slaves having been found sheltered on board the said vessel, as well as to the representation which, in consequence of analogous facts, some proprietors addressed to the Imperial Government, stated that if the proceedings of the captains of English vessels were such as therein asserted, they could not but be highly reprehensible in the eyes of Her Majesty's Legation.

In consequence, therefore, Mr. Jerningham had the goodness to acquaint the Undersigned that he was going to instruct the British Consul in Rio de Janeiro, and the other British Consuls in Brazil, to warn the masters of British vessels not to shelter, nor to carry away from this country, slaves who are legally the property of Brazilian subjects, or of persons residing in the Empire.

On this occasion, and à propos of some observations of the Undersigned, Mr. Jerningham says that he does not see that the Imperial Government have afforded efficacious protection to the freed Africans, that is, to those who entitle themselves emancipados, and who ought to be considered as such; that, on the contrary, Her Majesty's Legation has struggled with extreme difficulty to carry into effect the real manumission of some individuals of that unfortunate class; and, as a proof, Mr. Jerningham adds that he has not been informed whether the slaves which belonged to the British subject John Craven, and who were declared free by the sentence of the Municipal Judge of Marianna, were already in the enjoyment of their liberty.

The Undersigned, in thanking Mr. Jerningham for the assurance given by him, that Her Britannic Majesty's Consuls in this Empire have already received the necessary instructions to prevent the captains of British merchant-vessels from incurring similar complaints to those of which the note of the Undersigned treated, regrets having to tell Mr. Jerningham that he is very unjust in the remarks which he made relative to the freed Africans.

The Imperial Government have acted, in this respect, with the greatest deference towards the Legation of Her Britannic Majesty.

The case quoted by Mr. Jerningham, of the slaves of the British subject John Craven, is a proof of this truth. The Imperial Government did everything possible, and that depended upon them, to remove the obstacles which have retarded the final decision of the proceedings for the freedom of those individuals.

The proceedings, as Mr. Jerningham knows, are already pending in the Supreme Court of Rio de Janeiro; and, according to the information received by the Undersigned from the Minister of Justice, he can assure Mr. Jerningham that the final judgment of that tribunal will not be delayed.

The Undersigned therefore hopes that Mr. Jerningham, in consideration of the nature of the impediments which have retarded the course of the said cause, and which arose from the want of a solicitor or attorney, who should have done that which is the province of individuals to do to guard their own interests, will admit that the Imperial Government have done more in this affair than to see to the execution of the laws, and that they have acted with manifest deference to the Legation of Her Britannic Majesty.

The Undersigned, &c.

My Lord,

Rio de Janeiro, April 11, 1856.

IN my despatch of February 12,* I mentioned to your Lordship that Lieutenant Hervey, Commander of Her Majesty's steamer "Trident," had, during his cruize off the coast of Espirito Santo, been informed that a brig (name and nation unknown) had been found on shore, abandoned, about fourteen months ago, fitted out for the Slave Trade.

In a conference with Senhor Paranhos, soon after Lieutenant Hervey's return, I communicated this fact to the Brazilian Government; but, thinking that the expediency of making an investigation into the matter might have passed his Excellency's recollection, on the 5th of March I addressed a note to him, requesting information which the Brazilian Government might have obtained respecting the appearance of the suspicious wreck.

The other day I received the note herein inclosed from the Brazilian Minister for Foreign Affairs, stating that his Excellency the Minister of Justice had no intelligence of the alleged occurrence, but that he had ordered the Presidents of Bahia and Espirito Santo to make the necessary investigations, and that when the result might reach the Brazilian Government, it would be communicated to Her Majesty's Legation.

I HAD the honour to receive the note which Mr. William Stafford Jerningham, &c., addressed to me under date of the 5th ultimo, in which he refers to the report, which he showed me in a conference, of the Commander of Her Britannic Majesty's war-steamer "Trident," who had been cruising on the coast of the province of Espirito Santo, to the southward of Bahia.

I communicated to the Minister of Justice the news which the Commander of the "Trident" had heard, that, fourteen months previous, a brig, name and nation unknown, with full fittings adapted to the Slave Trade, had appeared on the coast of the province of Espirito Santo, between St. Matheos and Rio Doce; that it was said that the crew of that vessel had gone to Caravellas, and there stated that she had been wrecked on the neighbouring coast.

His Excellency replied to me, that no accounts of that fact had reached the Ministry of Justice, and that he did not think it possible, but that, notwithstanding, on the 12th of last month, he ordered the Presidents of the provinces of Bahia and Espirito Santo to cause due inquiries to be instituted, and to acquaint him with the result.

As soon as the information called for by the Minister of Justice is forwarded to me, I shall have much pleasure in communicating the same to Mr. Jerningham.

I reiterate, &c.

IT appears that the deportation of Antonio Severino de Avellar, by order of the Brazilian Government, on account of his having been supposed to have been mixed up with the Slave Trade transaction of Serinhaem, has caused much dissatisfaction amongst a certain set of individuals in Portugal, who have chosen to vent their fury against the Brazilian Government in the Lisbon "Jornal do Commercio" for having expelled from Brazil this well-known slave-trader.

As the captain and crew of the pilot-boat which arrived at Serinhaem with Africans, escaped before the vessel was captured, the papers on board, which probably would have proved who in reality were the guilty persons, likewise disappeared.

Avellar, from previous information, which had reached Rio de Janeiro as early as August or September, was denounced as being then privy to the fitting out of two pilot-boats in the River Zaire for Brazilian Slave Trade.

His arrival in Rio in November per Royal mail-steamer, almost simultaneously with the news of the attempt at Serinhaem, and other considerations, caused this Government to give orders for his arrest, and he was accordingly sent to Pernambuco, where legal proceedings were commenced against him.

I was, even before Christmas, informed by a person well versed in Slave Trade matters, that Avellar had confessed all privately, and had also made some revelations respecting certain points on the coast of Africa where slave-trading was going on, which I mentioned to your Lordship in my despatch of October 9.*

However, it appears there was not sufficient legal proof to convict him in a Court of Justice; but the Brazilian Government, using their prerogative, and not wishing to harbour in the Empire such a suspicious person and well-known trafficker, ordered him to leave the country, and he was sent away some months ago.

Thinking it might interest your Lordship to learn the present ostensible sentiments of the Rio de Janeiro "Jornal do Commercio," which, formerly, like its namesake in Lisbon, was not disinclined to plead the cause of disreputable slave-dealers, I beg to have the honour to forward copy of extract from its columns.

I am glad to hear from Her Majesty's Minister in Lisbon that the Portuguese Minister for Foreign Affairs is not so inclined to advocate Senhor Avellar's cause as the Lisbon "Jornal do Commercio."

Extract from the "Jornal do Commercio" of Rio de Janeiro of April 4, 1856.

(Translation.)

THE AFRICAN SLAVE TRADE.—THE LISBON "JOURNAL OF COMMERCE."—ANTONIO SEVERINO DE AVELLAR.—Doubts are no longer entertained that new attempts and projects of African Slave Trade are being meditated, combined and prepared contrary to the laws of Brazil. It is likewise a manifest truth, proved by numerous and incontrovertible facts, that the Imperial Government have evinced the greatest desire to repress this crime and to punish the criminals, by employing for that purpose those means which are at their disposal, and which they do and ought to make use of with that severity called for by the position in which their honour and duty have placed them, and above all from the machinations of the slave-traders, who are encouraged by the desire and hopes of fabulous profits.

The question is not only one of humanity and civilization, it is not only the compliance with solemn engagements and with imperious duty; it is still more, it is one of public order and regarding the future. The Emperor's Ministers understood the mission which was confided to them, and since 1850 up to the present day, they have shown that it has not surpassed their activity, energy, and willingness.

No considerations whatever have prevailed against the idea of duty. The utmost vigilance and severity has been and will continue to be exercised against slave-traders. They may rest assured that the Government do not lose sight of them, whether they be in New York, Cuba, or Lisbon. Their steps are watched, whether their speculations be directed to Havana or to Brazil. The Imperial * Class B, presented 1856, No. 113.

Government will unceasingly pursue them with the whole rigour of the laws, and are firmly resolved not to retain any officials, whatever may be their rank, who may nourish contrary sentiments.

The Slave Trade in Brazil is at an end; the nation does not wish it to be continued; attempts to revive it will cease.

Let these few words serve as the exordium to a reply which we owe to the Lisbon "Journal of Commerce" of the 11th of January, which has just come to our hands.

That journal published an article touching the imprisonment of Antonio Severino de Avellar, a Portuguese subject, and his forced voyage to Pernambuco, in order that it might be ascertained what part he had taken in the attempt made by the pilot-boat with Africans, which was captured at the bar of Serinhaem.

In that editorial article, as well as in the communication received by the said journal, insults were lavished upon the Brazilian Government, and upon the Portuguese agents at this Court:—

"The Government of Brazil proceeded brutally and violently in that imprisonment; they kept the prisoner incommunicable, they ill-treated him, and occasioned his suffering heavy losses, in order to court the English Government, when they ought to have been convinced of the innocence of Avellar, who left Rio de Janeiro in 1853 for Lisbon, went from thence to the Island of Terceira, his native place, where he remained until December, purchasing many lots of national lands. From thence he went to London and the United States, returned to London, and in August of last year went to see the Exhibition of Paris, arrived in Lisbon in September, and in October departed to Brazil in the English packet, and in November arrived in Rio de Janeiro, where he was arrested.

"The innocence of Avellar is thus explained, and who is there capable of doubting it? A man who thus employed himself in visiting divers countries, how could he be engaged in slave-trading? Is not the brutality, the violence of the Brazilian Government quite evident?"

In all probability the author or authors of those articles thought that the newspaper in which they were printed, would never reach the hands of those who could reply to them, and who were as well acquainted with Avellar's proceedings as themselves; they wished to agitate the minds of the public in Portugal, and thought that they might safely publish falsehoods without fear of refutation.

The name of Antonio Severino de Avellar has long figured in the secret registers of the police of the Empire as a famous and daring African slave-trader; that individual has long been under the vigilance of the police authorities, who have never lost sight of him.

In June or July last, the Government had knowledge that Avellar had ordered two pilot-boats to be built in the River Zaire, which were to bring Africans to Brazil.

A pilot-boat arrives at Pernambuco, and is captured with negroes at the Bar of Serinhaem, and the arrival of Antonio Severino de Avellar in Rio de Janeiro coincides with the former.

Not to have arrested Avellar, not to have sent him to Pernambuco, for the purpose of confronting him with the commander and crew of the pilot-boat, if they had been captured, would have been the most inexcusable of negligences. How would not the authors of the articles which we now reply to have laughed at the imbecility of the Brazilian police!

It now becomes necessary to enlighten the correspondent and the editor of the Lisbon "Journal of Commerce" respecting Avellar's voyages, which it appears were not known to those two writers.

Avellar left Rio de Janeiro in 1853, and in the early part of 1854 he effected a disembarkation of Africans on the Island of Cuba from the brig "Laura," of which he was the commander. From Cuba he went to Liverpool or London, and the greatest part of the time which intervened until 1855 he passed in Cuba, endeavouring to liquidate a speculation in Africans confided to a certain Don Salvador.

We are acquainted with many of the particulars of that negotiation, and of the influence used in Madrid by Portuguese, in order to interest General Concha in its favourable result. We have both the names and dates in our portfolio, and shall publish everything, if necessary.

CLASS B.

Avellar is not the man to have remained idle during the leisure hours at his command whilst settling his affairs in Cuba. He kept up regular communications with the African slave-traders in the United States and in Portugal, and gave orders for the purchase in the Islands (of Azores) of a good fast-sailing vessel for the Slave Trade.

Tired of the discussion which was mooted on the subject of that purchase, he resolved, as it appears, to have those two pilot-boats, of which we have already spoken, built in the Zaire.

We do not know whether Avellar went to the Exhibition in Paris, nor whether he accepted an invitation to visit a certain manufacturing city in England, for the purpose of buying goods for the coast of Africa before he went to Paris. Perhaps the author of the communication, who appears to us to have been the same person who invited him to do so, might enlighten us on this subject.

The Brazilian Government having so many proofs demonstrating that Antonio Severino de Avellar is a great African slave-trader, and so many indications that he was turning his views towards Brazil, how could or ought they to have remained inactive?

The assertion that the repressive measures taken against Slave Trade were dictated by the wish to court the favour of the English Government has lost much of its value. There was a time in which it might have served: now the whole world knows that the Brazilian Government act of their own accord, and only accept of the cooperation of the British Government.

In what does the ill-treatment and violence practised by the Brazilian Government towards Avellar, or through their agents, consist? If he suffered losses from his imprisonment he has only to impute them to himself. He who assumes the position in which Avellar placed himself must reckon upon these, and even greater, losses. No one ever thought of computing the want of profits and the losses arising and which have resulted from the imprisonment of a criminal, and no authority can omit doing his duty from the consideration of the losses which may ensue to those who, by reiterated facts, prove themselves to be inimical to the laws and to society.

Why did not the official agents of Portugal in Brazil remonstrate against the brutal and violent incarceration of Avellar? Why? Because that brutality and violence was only an offspring of the brain of the author of the communication in question, who perhaps was concerned in Avellar's new speculations.

And with what right could Portuguese agents intervene against the acts of the Brazilian Government? Ought they to seek the placet of the Portuguese Legation when they may have to apply the laws to the subjects of His Most Faithful Majesty, or to ascertain whether they are authors of or accomplices in the crimes of slave-trading, false coining, &c.?

We now know that the flight of the master and crew of the pilot-boat seized at Serinhaem, and the fatality with which the papers disappeared from on board, prevented Avellar being convicted of connivance in that attempt. The Government, however, fearing the presence of so dangerous and audacious a guest, banished him from the Empire.

They complied with their duty.

No. 127.

Mr. Jerningham to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 16.)

(Extract.)

Rio de Janeiro, April 14, 1856.

I BEG to have the honour to forward to your Lordship copy of a despatch which I have received from Her Majesty's Consul at Bahia, acquainting me that some new slave-trading adventurers are being initiated by an entirely new set of men, petty shopkeepers, in that city.

Some time ago, it appears, a few individuals endeavoured to tamper with a rich planter, in order to realize their malpractices; but this rich farmer, who had formerly lent his property for such purposes, appears not to have yielded to their suggestions from fear of the authorities and of the law.

Mr. Morgan says that the success of some shopkeepers in a late venture to the Island of Cuba, where each African was sold at the enormous price of 850 silver dollars, has been the origin of the actual intended speculation at Bahia.

The "Siren" brig is at Bahia; two days ago Rear-Admiral Johnstone dispatched the "Spy" to that port. Mr. Morgan says it is evident the slave-dealers care little for Brazilian cruisers, but that they stand in awe of the British flag.

He also laments the paucity of British cruisers at present on this station, in which lamentation I perfectly concur; for the men-stealers, besides the very great temptation of being able to sell their cargoes at enormous prices, have imagined that British vessels of war have been withdrawn from hence for the purposes of war in Europe, and having believed in a continuance of the gigantic struggle with Russia until very lately, have devised these speculations for slave-trading.

A vessel called the "Joven Dolores," Captain Coll, was here in December, and left Rio for Pernambuco on the 25th of that month; I have been assured that an old slave-captain thinks that this may be the vessel by which the Bahia people, according to Mr. Morgan, made such an encouraging and rich speculation.

The manifest of a cargo of Africans in a vessel called "Dolores," destined for Havana, was found on board the "Mary E. Smith." Her Majesty's Consul at Bahia has told me that he had furnished your Lordship with a copy of it: in the one I possess, I find several Brazileiro-Portuguese, as well as Spanish names.

Her Majesty's Consul informs me that Cranovich, the captain of the "Mary E. Smith," died in the hospital of Bahia, on the 19th of March.

It has been intimated to me that he is still alive, and had since been seen at the United States' Consulate in that city.

I cannot vouch for the truth of this assertion; but in this country many things are possible, especially in slave-trading affairs.

There are still many slave-dealers who do a great deal of trade in buying and selling Ladino blacks, and dispatching them from one province to another, chiefly from the north hither.

Inclosure in No. 127.

Consul Morgan to Mr. Jerningham.

Sir,

Bahia, April 4, 1856.

I REGRET it is my duty to acquaint you that information has reached me, from a reliable source, that some slave-trading ventures are being initiated by an entirely new set of men, petty shopkeepers established in this city, for the purpose of introducing Africans into the province.

Some time ago, I heard that a few individuals had been in negotiation with a planter who has an estate on the River Comandatuba, south of Ilheos, to assist in the realization of these malpractices, but the negotiation had been protracted, not on account of any scruples the planter entertained, as he was formerly much engaged in, and lent his property for, such purposes, but from a fear of the vigilance of the authorities, and the reality of the law.

I cannot learn the names of the parties interested, as my informer would not mention them; but it appears to me clear that they do not fear the Brazilian cruisers, while they apprehend, if peace be effected in Europe, the coast of Brazil will again be narrowly watched by a new batch under the British flag.

These intended speculations seem to have originated in the success some of these shopkeepers had met in a late venture to the Island of Cuba, where it is said they safely landed a cargo of Africans, which were sold at the enormous price of 850 silver dollars per head.

I have seen both the President of the Province and the Chief of Police on the subject, and I am satisfied these respectable authorities will not omit any endeavour to discover the parties I have indicated as about to revive this infamous Traffic in the province. The latter told me he had no fear of any attempt, either in the vicinity of the capital or towards the north, where no good port is to be found ; but he expressed his apprehension of Caravellas and other districts to the south, where so many favourable ports and rivers are to be met with for clandestine disembarkations.

I cannot help calling your attention to the very inefficient force we have on this station. Her Majesty's ship "Siren" can hardly be expected to perform the laborious duties of cruising over 600 miles with any effect, without a consort. As one cruiser is going south, another ought to be coming northward, and thus the slave-dealers, who stand so much in awe of the British flag, would be convinced that we have not entirely abandoned the determination to put down their infamous enterprises. The Imperial Government have, it is true, sent the steam-sloop "Magé" to reinforce their squadron here, but she arrived with four feet water in her hold, and will not be of any assistance for months to come ; while, were we to have a couple of men-of-war watching on this station, it would tend to stimulate the Brazilians to greater exertions, for fear of our cruisers taking a prize.

It is to this very state of inefficiency in maintaining British cruisers constantly on this station, under the mistaken idea some of these men-stealers entertain that they had been withdrawn for the purposes of war in Europe, that these speculations to the Havana, and now to the coast, have been initiated, and are being carried out ; and I should not be surprised if the slavers at Rio had come to the same conclusion.

I have, &c.

I HAVE received your despatch of the 9th of April,‡ relative to the position of those negro slaves in Brazil who received certificates of emancipation from the Mixed British and Brazilian Commission Courts. It appears by your despatch, and by the correspondence upon this subject which passed between Mr. Howard and the Brazilian Ministers in 1854, that although the Brazilian Government issued in 1853 a decree providing that negroes of this class, who were in the service of private individuals, should be entitled to their freedom at the end of fourteen years, yet the Brazilian Government have claimed for themselves the right to keep in bondage, for an indefinite period, any of the certificated negroes who might be in the employment of the public departments.

I have to instruct you to address a note to the Brazilian Minister for Foreign Affairs, stating that the regulations relative to the negroes in question, which are laid down in the Treaty concluded between Great Britain and Portugal on the 28th of July, 1817, and adopted by Brazil in 1826, are still binding upon Brazil, and that Her Majesty's Government are, therefore, entitled to claim the exact fulfilment of those Regulations in regard to any negroes who may have received certificates of emancipation from the Mixed Commission Courts.

You will point out to the Brazilian Minister that Article 7 of the Regulations for the Mixed Commissions, annexed to the above-mentioned Treaty of July 1817, not only provides that the slaves receiving certificates of emancipation from the Mixed Commission shall be delivered over to the Government in whose territory the Commission emancipating them shall be established, to be employed as servants or free labourers, but that Article also stipulates that “each of the two Governments binds itself to guarantee the liberty of such portion of these individuals as shall be respectively consigned to it.” You will say, that it appears manifest to Her Majesty’s Government that it cannot have been the intention of the parties to these Treaties to prolong the period of service of the Africans consigned to them to the extent to which the bondage of the negroes employed under the public departments in Brazil has been, and it appears may still be, protracted.

You will say that when it is borne in mind that the greater part of the Africans so employed must have received certificates from the Mixed Commission, Her Majesty’s Government consider themselves entitled to take an interest in their fate, and more particularly in the emancipation of those amongst them who were captured by British cruisers, and delivered over to the Brazilian authorities; and you will add, that Her Majesty’s Government rely upon the honour and humanity of the Brazilian Government liberally and fully to carry into effect the provisions of the Treaty of 1817 in favour of these unfortunate negroes.

Speech of the Emperor of Brazil, in opening the Session of the General Legislative Assembly, on the 3rd of May, 1856.

(Translation.)

MOST august and worthy Sirs, Representatives of the nation,—I congratulate you on the present meeting of the General Assembly.

The epidemic which, in the course of the last year, invaded some provinces of the Empire, and this capital, has successively attacked the greatest part of the other provinces.

The evils occasioned by that terrible scourge continue profoundly to afflict my heart. I, however, confide in Divine Providence, that, in His infinite mercy, hearkening to our fervent prayers, He will for ever remove it from Brazil.

My Government have not been sparing of their efforts, nor will they cease to exercise them, towards affording relief to such populations as may be attacked by the disease.

They have generally given proofs of resignation and courage; and numerous acts of charity and dedication have rendered themselves worthy of my especial praise, and of public thankfulness.

Our agriculture has suffered a considerable loss of hands, and it therefore becomes daily more urgent to provide for the acquisition of industrious and well-behaved colonists towards the maintenance and development of the productions of our fertile soil.

This undertaking, however, does not only depend upon the powers of the State; it principally calls for the spontaneous co-operation of all our rural proprietors, and I reckon upon their patriotism, which will cause them to be sensible of the truth of this statement.

I watch with the greatest solicitude over the accomplishment of this national interest, and over the confidence which you may repose in my Government, by aiding them, as I trust, with the necessary means for the realizing of so transcendent a benefit, which will be requited by decisive and persevering execution on their parts.

The public revenue, notwithstanding the unfavourable circumstances of the last two years, has been superior to the forethought of the Government. Its progressive tendency is manifested in such a manner, that such an excess of receipts would appear in the budget which will be presented to you, if it were not for the natural increase of the public expenditure, and the differences resulting from the general rise of prices.

As the new Customs Tariff contains some notable reductions of duties, it will not be prudent to carry it into execution, unless you should enable them to avoid the disproportion of the receipts, which, however, there is reason to suppose will be but of short duration.

Notwithstanding all the measures taken for the repression of the abominable Slave Trade, some adventurers have dared to attempt new speculations; but the vigilance of my Government, aided by public opinion, succeeded in frustrating their designs, as I trust will ever be the case.

The administration of justice, the army, and the navy, still claim from your wisdom those measures which, upon another occasion, I recommended to your consideration.

Peace with all other nations, the incessant object of my cares, subsists unaltered.

In accordance with the Government of the Republic of the Uruguay, I resolved upon the cessation of the military aid which we afforded that State.

I saw, with pleasure, that the conduct of the Brazilian Division has always been most praiseworthy, and that its discipline and morality were publicly and solemnly acknowledged by the Government and the Oriental people.

The stipulations which for a length of time have bound us to the Argentine Confederation have been confirmed and developed by means of a Treaty of Friendship, Commerce, and Navigation, which is grounded on a solid and durable basis.

A Treaty of Amity, Commerce, and Navigation has likewise been made between my Government and that of the Republic of the Paraguay, by which the question of navigation and fluvial transit is solved; that other respecting boundaries being put off until a more suitable occasion, within the term of the said Treaty.

August and most worthy Sirs, Representatives of the nation,—Peace and internal order are becoming daily more consolidated by the calmness which presides over the spirits of the public, and by the general tendency to labour, and towards improving the state of the country.

This result, which is in a great part owing to the policy hitherto followed, justifies a continuation of the frank and decided support which it always has deserved on your part. I therefore hope that, in paying attention to the necessities pointed out by my Government, you will vote for the measures which they call for, and thus promote the happiness and aggrandizement of the nation.

The session is opened.

My Lord,

Rio de Janeiro, May 9, 1856.

WITH reference to your Lordship's despatch of the 26th of March,* forwarding a copy of a despatch received from Her Majesty's Consul at Lagos, Mr. Campbell, complaining of the barbarous conduct of the masters of two Portuguese vessels, named "General Rego" and the "Emilia," towards several liberated Africans whom they had engaged to convey from Bahia to Lagos, I beg to state to your Lordship that I have communicated the contents of Mr. Campbell's despatch to Senhor Paranhos in a note, copy of which is herein inclosed, and have also verbally recommended to his Excellency, on the part of Her Majesty's Government, the adoption of the plan suggested by Mr. Campbell, of obliging the owners of vessels taking liberated Africans from the ports of Brazil to give bond for the disembarkation of such persons and their property at the proper places designated by the Africans themselves at the time of their departure.

The captain of the "Emilia," mentioned in Mr. Campbell's despatch, is most probably the celebrated Jacinto Derizanz well known in Slave Trade history, and who was in Bahia some time before the close of last year.

This man, since his escape after being captured by Her Majesty's steamer "Cormorant" in 1851, has been known to have successfully landed cargoes of slaves in Cuba; and now, instead of quietly returning to his native country, Venezuela, as he formerly intended, he has most probably given way to his old sea-roving propensities, ready for any Slave Trade scheme that the slave-dealers may think proper to confide to his dexterous and intelligent management.

In May 1854 this individual arrived at Rio de Janeiro in a North American brig, "General Pierce," when Mr. Howard, Her Majesty's Minister, knowing well his antecedents, and learning that he had been making inquiries after his former associates, called the attention of Viscount de Abaeté, then Minister for Foreign Affairs, to Captain Jacinto's presence, with a view of frustrating any design this old offender might have in contemplation.

If Captain Jacinto, of the "Emilia," is the same person as Jacinto Derizanz, there are strong grounds for believing that vessel's advent to the coast of Africa had some other object in view, which suspicion the cruel and wanton conduct manifested against the liberated Africans conveyed from Bahia would seem to confirm.

Respecting the captain of the "General Rego," I know nothing; but the barbarous conduct of that individual, detailed in Mr. Campbell's despatch, proclaims him a more heartless personage than many an unscrupulous slave-dealer.

Mr. Jerningham to Senhor Paranhos.

Excellent Sir,

Rio de Janeiro, May 5, 1856.

I HAVE been instructed by Her Majesty's Government to communicate to your Excellency the contents of a letter which has been received from Her Majesty's Consul at Lagos, complaining of the barbarous conduct of the masters of two Portuguese vessels named "General Rego" and the "Emilia," towards several liberated Africans whom they had engaged to convey from Bahia to Lagos.

It appears that the master of the "Rego" forced 40 Africans to land at Whydah, a notorious slave-mart, where they were first plundered of their property, and then sent to the King of Dahomey, who put them to death because they were Egbas, with which nation he is at enmity; and in the case of the "Emilia," 15 Africans were put on shore at Aghwey; and although they had the good fortune to escape from thence, their property was detained on board that vessel.

Such are the deplorable and unjust occurrences which took place to the liberated Africans who were returning to their native country in the above-mentioned Portuguese vessels from Bahia; and I am directed to state that Her Majesty's Government feel convinced that the Imperial Government of Brazil will be ready to take any measures which may be in their power to prevent the recurrence of such heartless and cruel treatment of the Africans, who are forced by the Government of Brazil to quit this country as soon as they have been liberated; and Her Majesty's Government beg to recommend to the Imperial Government the adoption of the plan suggested by Mr. Campbell, of obliging the owners of vessels taking liberated Africans from the ports of Brazil to give bond for the disembarkation of such passengers and their property at the places designated at the time of departure by the Africans themselves.

Mr. Jerningham added to this communication that, notwithstanding the Legation of Her Britannic Majesty having already congratulated the Imperial Government on the said event, he availed himself of the occasion to reiterate his congratulations.

The Undersigned has the honour to request Mr. Jerningham to be so good as to bring to the knowledge of the Government of Her Britannic Majesty, that the Imperial Government have duly appreciated, and return thanks to Her Britannic Majesty's Government for, the manifestation which they have been pleased to address to them upon the occasion of a fact which evidently shows the zeal with which the Brazilian authorities have taken to heart the repression of the Slave Trade.

My Lord,

Rio de Janeiro, May 12, 1856.

I BEG to have the honour to state to your Lordship, with reference to your Lordship's despatch of the 31st March,* in which your Lordship forwarded to me copy of a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister in Lisbon, respecting the order given by the Brazilian Government for the expulsion of the slave-dealer Avellar, and of the clandestine departure of Francisco José da Rosa from Rio de Janeiro for Loanda, both of which had been communicated to Mr. Howard by the Brazilian Minister in Portugal, M. Maciel Monteiro, that I have, in conformity with your Lordship's instructions, thanked Senhor Paranhos for having caused M. Monteiro to convey this intelligence to Mr. Howard.

I beg, however, to point out to your Lordship a little inaccuracy in M. Monteiro's statement. His Excellency says, that measures were taken for Avellar's arrest, and, eventually, for his expulsion, by the Brazilian Government, at my requisition; this is partly incorrect. I urged this Government to arrest Avellar, in order to undergo judicial proceedings, as he had been denounced to Her Majesty's Legation as being the person who had fitted out two pilot-boats for slave-trading, one of which was supposed to be that which was captured near Serinhaem; but his expulsion from Brazil was the act of the Imperial Government alone, who never acquainted me of this proceeding until after the decision had been taken and carried, I believe, into effect.

In speaking to Senhor Paranhos the other day, upon this subject, he quite agreed with me, and said Avellar's being sent out of the country was the pure act of the Brazilian Government themselves.

Avellar was suspected of being privy to the Serinhaem attempt at slave-trading, was examined, and, as I have been told, revealed a good deal on slave-trading matters. There were, however, I suspect, no legal grounds or proofs to convict him in a Court of Justice; but the Brazilian Government having ample reasons for not wishing for the further presence of this notorious slave-dealer in the country, gave him his passport for Lisbon. In doing so they made use of their prerogative, and I should not be sorry to see it put in force against some others of M. Avellar's fellow-countrymen, in the interests of humanity and of Slave Trade repression.

IN your Lordship's despatch of the 31st of March,† your Lordship forwarded to me copies of a letter addressed by Her Majesty's Consul at Oporto to Mr. Howard, and likewise of a despatch from Mr. Howard, respecting the case of a Brazilian slave named José Maria, who having escaped from the Brazilian brig "Iris," at Oporto, was then taken prisoner, and was some time afterwards put on board another Brazilian vessel, to be sent home to his master, upon which occasion, having attempted to regain his liberty, he was wounded, and taken back to prison.

Your Lordship refers me to Mr. Howard's despatch, in which it is to be seen that although the Brazilian Minister, M. Monteiro, was obliged to demand, formally, the extradition of this slave, yet his Excellency did everything possible to secure the liberation of this individual, and also obtained from his Government the order directing the competent authorities in Brazil to prevent the embarkation of slaves on vessels bound for Portugal.

In consequence of your Lordship's instructions I have expressed to the Brazilian Minister for Foreign Affairs the satisfaction with which Her Majesty's Government have regarded the proceedings of M. Monteiro in this business, and the orders issued thereupon by the Brazilian Government.

I must, however, state to your Lordship, that according to the law of Brazil slaves are not allowed to be employed or taken in vessels bound for foreign shores, and are only permitted to embark in those which ply in the coasting-trade of this country.

My Lord,

Rio de Janeiro, May 14, 1856

I BEG to forward to your Lordship copy of a despatch from Admiral Johnstone, inclosing to me extract of a letter from Lieutenant Christian, commanding Her Majesty's ship "Rifleman," relative to two vessels suspected of being destined for the Slave Trade.

The "Cruz V" was a long time at Santos, and private information pointing her out as an object for suspicion, Her Majesty's brig "Express," Captain Boys, went down there to look after her some time ago, and, lately, the Admiral directed Her Majesty's ship "Rifleman" to do the same.

The "Cruz V," after the return hither of Her Majesty's brig "Express," published an advertisement for a cargo of coffee, and she has now left for Liverpool, I have been told; but Lieutenant Christian says, for Plymouth.

The "Santa Clara" was lying at Santos ready for sea, having cleared out for Pernambuco, when the "Rifleman" left, with 20,000 arobas of coffee. This vessel, however, belongs to the well-known slave-trader Thomas da Costa Ramos, and I shall write to Mr. Cowper to have her movements watched.

I have received, as yet, no authentic information respecting the reported landing, near the Island of San Sebastião, of 180 blacks (at Caraguatatuba). One person, who knows the coast, says it would not be possible, as there is no road over the Serra, and that the country is peopled, and that a detachment is stationed, on the only road the Bozals would have to pass. However, I have been assured from another quarter that this landing did take place at Caraguatatuba. Next month I shall be able to give more positive information.

The Commendador Bernardino Ferreira de Faria has been again arrested (this time, at the request of the Chief of the Police at Bahia) for complicity in the Slave Trade speculation of the "Mary E. Smith."

I am informed the sailors of that captured schooner deposed against him.

This gentleman, respecting whom great interest and "empenhas" have been made here by influential people, has left for Bahia to answer charges preferred against him.

Santos, May 6, 1856.

WE met the Portuguese brig "Cruz V" going down the river on the morning of our arrival. She was deeply laden with a cargo of coffee, and is bound for Plymouth to await orders.

We found the barque "Santa Clara" still lying here, but ready for sea. She has on board 20,000 arobas of coffee. She sailed the next day (May 4), having cleared out from the custom-house for Pernambuco.

I have been endeavouring to get information respecting the latter vessel, the only one of the two that appeared to me to have anything suspicious about her, on account of her looking rather light, but with no success.

WITH reference to your Lordship's despatch of the 28th of April last, approving the letter which I had addressed to Senhor Paranhos on the 29th of January last, respecting the question of Mr. Craven's 3 slaves, I beg to state I have written again on this matter to his Excellency, expressing to Senhor Paranhos the regret which Her Majesty's Government experience that this act of justice has been so long and vexatiously delayed.

Three or four weeks ago I spoke upon the subject to the Under-Secretary of State, Senhor d'Azambuja, when this gentleman informed me that he would attend to it in earnest, and that he thought everything was now arranged respecting it in the Department of the Minister of Justice.

I HAVE the honour to forward to your Lordship copy of the report of the Section of Justice of the Council of State upon the trial and condemnation of the North American schooner the "Mary E. Smith," captured with Africans on board by the Brazilian brigantine of war "Olinda" on the 20th of January last.

Report of the Section of Justice of the Council of State in the case of the "Mary E. Smith."

(Translation.)

Sire,

ON the 20th day of January of this year, at half-past 5 o'clock in the afternoon, the brigantine of war "Olinda," commanded by the First Lieutenant Bernardo Antonio Loureiro, captured the North American schooner "Mary E. Smith," which was at anchor two miles from the Bar of St. Matthew's, bearing south-west.

Besides the captain, Vincent Daniel Cranatich, eight men of the crew, and two Portuguese passengers were taken prisoners on board, and 384 Africans, some of them understanding and speaking the Portuguese language, and the remainder being perfect Bozals.

The prize having been sent to Bahia, was there tried and condemned by the Auditor of Marine, whose sentence, dated the 21st of February last, declared the schooner to be a good prize, and the Africans who came in her to be free, ordering the fulfilment of the existing laws and regulations.

An appeal from this sentence having been addressed to the Council of State, your Imperial Majesty was pleased, by an order dated the 18th of last March, to determine that the Section of Justice of this Council should take cognizance of it.

From the examination of the official reports, the records of surveys, the interrogatories of the captain, crew and passengers, and from the depositions of witnesses subpoenaed, as appears in the process, the Section has collected the following facts:—

The "Mary E. Smith" having been built in Essex, in the State of Massachusetts (and for slave-trading purposes, as affirmed by the surveyors) of 122 tons burthen, owned by the said Captain Cranatich, left Boston in ballast on the 25th of October, 1855, destined for the coast of Africa, with a crew of eight persons, and the Portuguese João José Vianna as passenger.

Arriving on the coast of Africa, to the south of Cape Lopez (as the captain says), he met a canoe with an agent of the Spaniard Rivezoza, there established, who proposed to the captain the freighting or purchase of his vessel.

He accepted the former, and (as the sailor Manoel da Silva says) consented to receive on board, at Cabeça de Cobra and Mangue Grande, more than 400 Africans, with the indispensable quantity of water and provisions, as well as another passenger, Manoel Alves da Silva Bastos, and the sailors Manoel da Silva and Manoel Luiz Antonio Leitão, all Portuguese, who (the captain says) undertook to put up the fittings on board.

Thus being dispatched, the schooner left the coast of Africa on the 14th of December last, and sailed for Brazil destined to Aldea Velha, in the province of Espírito Santo, which place, the captain says, was pointed out to him by the sailor Leitão.

On the arrival of the schooner in sight of this place, and without coming to anchor, the passenger Bastos went on shore in the boat to speak to a brother of his, as he affirmed. Upon returning on board on the following morning, the said Bastos stated that it was impossible to effect a disembarkation at Aldea Velha.

The schooner, therefore, proceeded to the River Mucury, and afterwards to the Bar of St. Matthew's, where she came to anchor, and was captured as above said.

To these criminal facts the Section laments the having to add that a great number of the Africans have died, not only during the passage across, but also since the capture of the schooner. Nor could any other result have been expected from the atrocious accumulation of more than 400 individuals in the hold of a vessel of 122 tons.

In consideration, therefore, of these facts, as set forth in the record of the process, although some of them may be incorrect; and principally from the essential fact, fully proved, of the said schooner having been captured in the territorial waters of Brazil laden with Bozal Africans, the Section is of opinion that the sentence of the Auditor of Marine relative to the "Mary E. Smith" is well founded, and ought to be confirmed.

(Extract.)

Rio de Janeiro, June 13, 1856.

THERE is a rumour, and I see it is mentioned also in the "Jornal do Commercio," that a disembarkation of Africans has been effected on the coast of the Province of Maranham.

It is stated that the President of the province has sent out a brig of war, with thirty soldiers on board, in the direction of Turyassu, where this force, being united with the 4th Company of "Pedestres," and twenty more soldiers employed in the exploration of the Serra of Aricamba, and further to the north the garrison of the Military Colony of Gurapy, will make a search and institute inquiries.

It is said, if the landing has been effected in that direction, neither the delinquents nor the unhappy victims will be able to escape through this military circle.

I have been told the Government have no real intelligence of the matter, but that they believe there may be something in it.

I am told that it is reported that between 500 and 600 have been landed; but nothing appears to be really known as yet either in that respect, or as to what vessel imported them.

Senhor Paranhos has promised me information respecting the searches made in the Rio Una to the south of Rio de Janeiro, where it was said some Bozals had been imported; but his Excellency says that the result of these researches has verified that the report was unfounded.

Deposition.

(Translation.)

THE said deponent said, in answer to the interrogatories put to him by the Chief of Police:

That his name is Vincent Daniel Cranotich; that he is a native of Venice; an American citizen, of the State of Louisiana; 35 years old; is a bachelor; and is a seafaring person.

That the "Mary E. Smith" was his own property; that he caused her to be built in Boston, and that when ready for sea she cost him 15,000 dollars.

That he sailed from Boston on the 25th or 26th of August last, for Montevideo, in ballast, and provisions for his crew for twelve months, and with eight pipes of water.

That his crew consisted of eight persons, including himself—his mate, Andrew Wilson, having remained on the coast of Africa; that he did not bring a boatswain, because on his return from the coast of Africa he named the sailor Joseph Sisson to act in that capacity.

That he brought as passenger from Boston the Portuguese subject João José Vianna, who is a prisoner along with himself and the crew.

That when he left Boston it was his intention first to touch in the ports of Africa, to try to sell his vessel; and that on arriving to the southward of Cape Lopes, in latitude 2° 28' south, a canoe appeared to him, with a Spaniard, agent of Riverosa, who resides on the coast of Africa, who came to him with a letter from the said Riverosa, proposing to purchase or freight his vessel, which he, the deponent, accepted the first part of, with the condition imposed by Riverosa, that he was not to leave the vessel until another crew was shipped, together with the provisions, water, and captives which were to be put on board, when he was to receive the amount agreed upon, of 16,000 dollars.

That he having received on board the provisions, water, and about 400 and odd slaves (he does not exactly know how many, as he did not count them), an English steamer hove in sight, for which reason he, the deponent, put to sea, in order to avoid her, and changing his route at nightfall, he stood for and entered the same port, having left his boat on shore, in which the sailor Joseph Sisson, and another, came on board, and told him that Riverosa, through fear of the English, had retired, with the remainder of the Africans.

That he, the deponent, having waited some hours without seeing any one come off from the shore, went to sea, being apprehensive of being captured.

That his passenger, Vianna, who came with him from Boston with the intention of going to San Paulo de Loanda or Montevideo, was then on board, and that the two sailors, both Portuguese, Manoel da Silva and Manoel Antonio Leitão (the latter of whom arrived in a dying state, and is since dead), went on board with the provisions sent off by Riverosa and with his orders, and they told him, the deponent, that they were coming to Brazil, according to their conversation with Riverosa; to which he, the deponent, replied, that the new crew and their captain were those who would know all about the destination of the vessel.

That upon leaving Africa he followed the course of the winds, and that he intended going to Maldonado to deposit the slaves.

That although such had been his intention, when opposite the Abrolhos he met with a strong east-south-east wind, which forced him to run to the north, and carried away his stays, gib-boom, and split his sails, and for that reason, and the want of water and provisions, he made for a port in Brazil; likewise on account of the increasing mortality of the slaves; and first arrived to the south of Mucury, where he attempted to land, but could not go on shore in consequence of a heavy surf, and therefore next day he stood out to sea and met with a pilot-boat with slaves, the captain of which vessel told him that he came from Macahé; that it was impossible to disembark Africans at present in Brazil; and that he, the deponent, having stood in for the shore, arrived at St. Matthew's, where he subsequently was captured by the brig-of-war "Olinda," at between two and three miles from the shore, on the afternoon of the 20th of January, 1856.

That Manoel da Silva served for two or three days, and Leitão very little, on account of his infirm state, and that he was almost mad, having once attacked the captain, and wounded him with a bludgeon.

That the passengers Bastos and Vianna, who are prisoners, interested themselves very much for the Africans, and distributed water and rations to them, and that he, the deponent, used to take notes of the deaths, or that the said passengers did so by his order.

That he, the deponent, has, for the last eighteen years, made voyages to Brazil, and that the ports he has most frequented are Pernambuco, Bahia, and Rio de Janeiro.

That he has some knowledge of the coast of Brazil, and that he has belonged to the Brazilian Company's steamers, acting as mate.

That Riverosa, who lives on the coast, has a brother in Rio de Janeiro, Francisco Riverosa de Uzeda, with whom he, the deponent, is acquainted, but that he has never had any transactions with him, and that the public voice proclaims him to be a slave-trader.

That about 100 Africans had died on board before the "Mary E. Smith" was captured.

That he, the deponent, does not know the captain of the pilot-boat which he fell in with (having slaves on board), when he departed from Mucury; and the deponent said nothing further, &c.

The said above-named Captain Cranotich having been further interrogated by the said magistrate, deposed:

That he left Africa without any certain destination, as he had before said, because at sea, after passing the Island of Trinidad, the Portuguese Manoel Antonio Leitão, who came in the pilot-boat by order of Riverosa, of Africa, offering to serve as a sailor, told him that he had been captain of a cutter which was captured by the English steamer "Pampesio,"* with Africans on board, which cutter was to have landed them at Aldea Velha (now called Carahype) in the Province of Espirito Santo; that the said Leitão gave him the latitude and longitude of that place and of Victoria, of which he, the deponent, took a note with a pencil in a Nautical Almanac of last year; and that he consequently stood in for the port designated by Leitão, and upon arriving near to the shore, the passenger Bastos asked the deponent to go on shore to Aldea Velha, where, he said, a brother of his resided, and he, the deponent, sent the said Manoel Alves da Costa Bastos in the boat, with a sailor and a boy, and gave him an ounce of gold to buy some refreshments on shore; that this having taken place at nightfall, the next morning Bastos returned on board, saying that he had spoken with his brother, and that he and the sailors further said that they had run away because a cavalry force wanted to arrest them, where the deponent left the coast with the pilot-boat, went to anchor in the Mucury, and subsequently in St. Matthew's, but that he had not anchored in Aldea Velha, and kept under sail there close in-shore.

That he does not know the name of Bastos' brother, but knows that he had a provision store in Aldea Velha; that he does not know if he was to have received the Africans, because Bastos did not tell him the purpose of his visit to the shore, but that the before-mentioned Leitão told him that the Africans which were on board the cutter captured by the English were to have been landed at Aldea Velha, and to have been consigned to Bastos' brother.

That, while on board, Bastos and Vianna conversed with Leitão, and that he does not know but that, by a combination between them, it was that Leitão gave him the information about Aldea Velha, it being certain that after the brig of war "Olinda" had hailed the pilot-boat, which was at anchor in St. Matthew's, Bastos addressed himself to the deponent, and proposed to him the stranding of the pilot-boat, which the deponent refused to do, saying that he preferred being captured to the sacrificing so many lives.

That he does not know what became of the correspondence and letter of instructions relative to the vessel's cargo; that he did not know whether any of the Portuguese who came in the vessel had brought them.

That João José Vianna did not buy the pilot-boat of him; that she is his property, and that the only dealing he had respecting the sale of her was with Riverosa, of Africa, as he had already deposed.

That Vianna came with the intention of remaining in Loanda, in the event of the pilot-boat touching at that port, or, if not, to go on in her. That Bastos went on board saying that Riverosa had sent him on board to be landed at any port in the south at which the vessel might touch; and that the others came as sailors to work on board, and that it was those two who fitted up the false deck.

Senhor João José Vianna.

My dear Sir,

Loanda, April 21, 1855.

YESTERDAY I received your esteemed favour, dated the 4th, in which you tell me that you were going in the "Bearer of Cunha," with eighty-eight packages on our account; and I sincerely hope you will arrive safe, and that we may be fortunate. By virtue of accounts received from Rio, I learn that some business is on the point of being done for that place; Bernardino Chorão is shortly to arrive here in the brig "Progresso," and is coming to prepare cargoes; the partner of the late José Fortunato da Cunha says, that this vessel is going to touch at different points; I have therefore thought that as soon as you receive this, you ought to purchase a patacho or pilot-boat to carry 400 packages: she must be a fast vessel, her being old is of no consequence, it is sufficient that she performs one voyage, and after being bought, fit her out with everything excepting beef, because we can procure fish here. You know very well that the voyages to Rio average about thirty days: with from forty-five to fifty pipes of water on board, we can ship from 400 to 450 packages; I need not recommend you to be careful in your purchase, because you know what you ought to do. Baltimore is the best place for cheap vessels. The vessel is to come with the American flag, and is to come to anchor at the "Snake, six thirty-five;" it would be well that you should seek for Miller, who knows Brazil well, is fortunate and a good pilot for that coast. I have resolved upon this, because I think we shall do a good business; whatever may remain to us from the proceeds of our packages, you will send to me by way of Salem or New York to Ambriz, deliverable to Junqueira, in order that we may buy people on our joint account. You are to come in the vessel, and to proceed in her to Brazil. I hope you will give me timely advice of the day on which you are certainly to arrive here, in order that the cargo, correspondence, &c., may be ready. In New York everything is dearer, and I think it is more difficult to fit out vessels there; in short, with the greatest secrecy you will find out what it is most expedient to do. Nothing more for the present. I wish you perfect health, being your friend and affectionate servant,

(Signed)

GUILHERME JOSE DA SILVA CORREA.

Senhor João José Vianna.

My dear Sir,

Loanda, April 23, 1855.

On the 21st instant I wrote to you, and confirm the same, and have to add the following:—

If what I have said to you in mine of the 21st should not suit you, I have to request you to deliver to J. Mazorro and Co. my half of the eighty-eight packages, in order that they may do what I under this date have requested of them; but I must, notwithstanding, tell you that, according to the accounts from Rio, the business is certain to be very advantageous. You will hand over the proceeds of the packages marked 4, to Messrs. Zulueta, Brothers. Without anything more at present, much health and business is the wish of your friend, reverencer, and obliged friend and servant,

(Signed)

GUILHERME JOSE DA SILVA CORREA.

P.S.—In a few days I shall go to Cobras to wait for the "Bearer."

Messrs. Carvalho and Rocha.

Dear Sirs,

New York, September 18, 1855.

On the 25th ultimo, the American schooner "Mary E. Smith" sailed from Boston for the coast of Africa, there to receive a cargo of n . . . . . for your Empire, which vessel is on my account, on that of Guilherme José da Silva Correa, and of João José Vianna: this last person goes in the vessel, and I have ordered him to place in your hands the net proceeds, at least of my share of not only the vessel, but of what may have been sent on my account; this vessel goes to Brazil in consequence of Senhor Guilherme José da Silva Correa having requested it. Now, in the event of this vessel being fortunate, I do not know whether she certainly goes consigned to Mr. Bernardo Martins Ferreira, or to the late partner of José Fortunato da Cunha, but I request you to ask those gentlemen if they have any money of mine to deliver to you, and should you receive any, you will have the goodness to send half of it to London, and keep the other half at my disposal; if previous to the month of March, the vessel which is going to Ambriz should not have arrived in Rio, you are to ship hides and coffee on board any vessel to the consignment of Messrs. Figaniere, Brothers, of this city. I hope that you, my friends, will do all you can to realize this business, and give me early information on the subject. I also hope that you will tell me something touching the continuation of those affairs. Without anything more at present. I hope you are well, and am your very obliged friend,

(Signed) M. B. DA CUNHA REIS.

Senhor João José Vianna.

My Friend,

New York, October 2, 1855.

After thy departure Lima arrived, and learnt from some passengers the instructions given to Guilherme, which were sent to Rio by Mr. F——; therefore I, under this date, write to that gentleman, informing him of thy departure, as well as recommending him, as soon as this affair is liquidated, to hand over my share to Carvalho and Rocha. Now, in the division that thou makest of the freights of the vessel, thou must not omit reserving money for the vessel's expenses, also for the wages, dividing the remainder; for I want to have my share here, for which purpose the barque "Ilha de Cuba" is to go there to come loaded with coffee in order that I may have money, and send off another vessel, and let me know whether those are inclined to take an interest in another that I have sent. In consequence of the occurrences at thy departure, the journals were full of them, and I fear that the Montevidean Minister has written to his Government about them; it would for that reason be advisable that thou shouldst put into some other place, in order to avoid anything happening.

My friend, a great part of the cargo for the brig remained on shore; I bought another vessel, and was forced to buy the greater part of her cargo on credit, for which reason I am without money; I hope that thou wilt do all that thou canst in order to see the result as soon as possible; I hope that thou hast arrived in good health and been fortunate; this is the wish of thy obliged friend and servant,

(Signed) M. B. DA CUNHA REIS.

(No address.)

Esteemed Sir,

New York, October 2, 1855.

In consequence of advices received by me from Senhor Guilherme José da Silva Correa, in which he tells me that he had received instructions from you to put some cargoes of n . . . . . into the Empire of Brazil, and in the same advices he told me to send a conveyance; I consequently dispatched on the 25th of August the American schooner "Mary E. Smith," fitted out to receive in Africa from 500 to 550 packages. This schooner belongs, one-third to Guilherme José da Silva Correa, one-third to myself, and one-third to the supercargo João José Vianna; as she is a very fast sailer, she must be with you in all the month of December, or sooner; I must have some packages on my account, laden by Luis Antonio Ferreira Reis; I therefore expect that you will have the goodness to liquidate these packages as well as that part of the vessel belonging to me, and to deliver the amount to Messrs. Carvalho and Rocha; as a vessel is to go from Loanda to Rio, for those gentlemen to load her, for if we should continue to send cargoes there, and it is not possible there to find conveyances, it is necessary that I should have funds here for that purpose; I therefore hope that you will not be unmindful of my request. I inclose a letter for Senhor João José Vianna, which you will have the goodness to send to him to the place, in order that he may soon receive it. I have also to beg the favour of you, as soon as the vessel arrives, and that nothing has happened, to let me know it, sending your letters sealed to Messrs. Figaniere Brothers of this city by way of London, under cover of Messrs. J. Spencer and Budden of that city, for which favour I shall be much obliged to you. I hope you will command your obedient and obliged friend,

(Signed) M. B. DA CUNHA REIS.

Messrs. Carvalho and Rocha, Rio de Janeiro.

Dear Sirs,

New York, October 2, 1855.

After writing to you upon the affair of the schooner which I dispatched from Boston on the 25th of August, and spoke to you about the consignees, I have learnt that the person who sent instructions to Guilherme José da Silva Correa was Senhor F . . . . . to whom I write under this date, and beg him, if the affair should prove successful, to deliver to you the proceeds, and that by the barque "Ilha de Cuba," which is shortly to sail for Loanda and your port, I shall write to you circumstantially respecting such proceeds. Have the kindness to cause the inclosed letter to be delivered to Mr. F . . . . ., for which favour I shall be obliged to you. I hope you will command your much obliged friend,

My Lord,

Rio de Janeiro, July 11, 1856.

I BEG to forward to your Lordship copy of an extract from the report of the Brazilian Minister of Justice to the Legislature, on the African Slave Trade.

Senhor Nabuco alludes, first of all, to the Serinhaem affair, where the pilot-boat with 162 Africans (according to Mr. Cowper, 181) was captured by Colonel Drummond and his son, on the 12th of October last; 47 of which, however, were stolen, and whereof 21 are said to have been restored to what is termed freedom, in Government arsenals and houses of correction.

The Minister next alludes to the capture of the "Mary E. Smith," by the Brazilian brigantine "Olinda," with 350 Africans on board, near St. Matthew's.

Senhor Nabuco enlarges, amongst other things, upon the vigilance of the local authorities, and praises greatly the activity of the Brazilian cruisers.

His Excellency informs the Chambers, likewise, that from the 1st of May last year to the 30th of April of the present one, 68 freed Africans have received their certificates of emancipation.

Inclosure in No. 152.

Extract from the Report presented by the Brazilian Minister of Justice to the General Assembly of the Legislature, on the 15th of May, 1856.

(Translation.)

THE AFRICAN SLAVE TRADE.—In my last year's report, when speaking of the African Slave Trade, I said that we ought not to be confident of the complete extinction of that barbarous Trade, so repugnant to civilization, but that, on the contrary, we ought to be prepared to frustrate any attempts which might be made by daring slave-traders.

Adventurers have since made their appearance; the foresight of the Government has been realized.

A pilot-boat, with 162 Africans on board, was captured on the Bar of Serinhaem, in Pernambuco, on the 12th of October last.

The captain of this vessel, Augusto Cezar de Mesquita, went, unwittingly, to Colonel Gaspar de Menezes Vasconcellos Drummond to report her arrival, supposing him to be the Colonel João de Barros Wanderley, whom he was seeking. Colonel Menezes, the Delegate of the District, although not at that time exercising his functions, seized the vessel, but allowed the captain to depart. Between the seizure and the arrival of the detachment, the crew absconded; the vessel's papers disappeared from on board; and 47 Africans were stolen, of whom 21 have since been restored to freedom.

For this crime the following persons have been indicted; viz., João José de Faria, the fitter-out of the vessel on the coast of Africa, and Augusto Cezar de Mesquita, the captain of the pilot-boat, as principals; and Antonio Elias Salgado, Manoel Fidelio do Nascimento, Antonio da Silva Pereira, Dr. Antonio de Menezes Vasconcellos Drummond, Francisco de Paula Cavalcanti Wanderley, and João Francisco Accioli Lins, as accomplices; all of whom, excepting two, are in prison.

Whatever my conviction may be respecting these facts, which I cannot but deplore, I await the new investigations instituted by the police of the Province of Pernambuco, and the decision of the Court of Justice. I, however, assure the Chambers that the Government is on the alert, and will promote the punishment of the criminals and their accomplices by every means in their power.

On the 20th of January, on the bar of St. Matthew's, the brigantine "Olinda" captured the North American schooner "Mary E. Smith," with 350 Africans on board; the prize was taken to the capital of Bahia, and indictments were instituted against her by the Chief of Police of that province. The Imperial Government knew of the destination of that schooner, since her sailing from Boston on the 25th of August last year, having cleared out for Montevideo; consequently all proper measures were taken towards her capture if she should come to any of the ports of the Empire. On the 5th of January she arrived off the port of the town of Santa Cruz, in the Province of Espirito Santo, which was her destination; but coming to anchor at a great distance, she only stopped there four hours, having been informed of the danger that she ran from the vigilance and hostile spirit of the local authorities.

The following have been indicted for this crime; viz., Manoel Basilio da Cunha Reis, Guilherme José da Silva Correa, João José Vianna, Manoel Alves da Costa Bastos, Bernardino Martins Ferreira, José Alves da Costa, and the sailors Manoel da Silva, Nathaniel Standed, Joseph Lissan, William Bursley, and Dablement Eugenio, all of whom are in prison, excepting José Alves da Costa, of the town of Santa Cruz, in the Province of Espirito Santo.

The cruizers have evinced a degree of activity and zeal worthy of praise. The officers of the navy, entrusted with that important commission, do not content themselves with cruising on the coast; they enter the ports, and communicate with the authorities on shore; they everywhere inquire and inform themselves circumstantially respecting the places, tendencies, and facilities for slave-trading.

The result of the inquiries made by those officers, and of the information furnished by the Presidents and Chiefs of the Police, is that the local authorities are duly apprised and are vigilant against the traffickers, whose attempts may be considered as rash and unsuccessful.

The scourge, however, which deprived our agriculture of so many hands, may encourage the slave-traders, who, dazzled by the fabulous profits which they expect to reap, run all risks in order to realize them.

The Government know what it is their duty to do, and they will perform it.

FREED AFRICANS.—From the 1st of May of last year to the 30th of April of the present year, certificates of emancipation have been given to 68 freed Africans, in conformity with the Decree No. 1,303, of the 28th December, 1853.

My Lord,

Rio de Janeiro, July 11, 1856.

I BEG to forward to your Lordship copy of a despatch received from Mr. Consul Morgan, at Bahia, respecting a rumoured landing of Africans at Itacaré, near the Rio das Contas, and the proceedings of the Chief of Police in this matter, whose zeal and activity appear to have been highly praiseworthy.

I am awaiting an official communication from the Brazilian Government with regard to this rumour, but, in the meantime, I have thought it right to forward to your Lordship copy of extract from the "Jornal do Commercio" of the 29th of June, giving a succinct account of what has been effected in making investigations concerning this reported disembarkation.

It appears that suspicions were first of all entertained from the fact that, some time since (I presume, in the early part of June), a vessel made her appearance off the port of Itacaré, and very close to the shore, with her sails furled, and without showing any colours; but, after some time, she stood out to seaward.

On the 12th a large pilot-boat came in sight, neared the port above alluded to, also without any sails set, and only one flag at the poop, which appeared to be white, when she fired two guns, and, after two hours' stay, put out to sea in a northerly direction.

These two facts certainly look very suspicious, and probably an attempt at introducing slaves (or false money, perhaps) was meditated on this occasion, but, I trust, not effected. In fact, the diligence and energy of the Chief of Police, who certainly, from Mr. Morgan's description, as well as that in the "Jornal do Commercio," distinguished himself by inquiries and investigations, tends to establish a belief that, if this ominous barque or pilot-boat really conveyed slaves, their attempts to land them in the southern part of the coast of Bahia have been, it is to be presumed, frustrated.

In the latter part of these extracts mention is made of the arrival at Bahia of the "Africano," formerly "General Rego," against which vessel suspicions of importing false money are entertained.

In an interview with Senhor Paranhos, I requested him to inform me if any fear of her being engaged in Slave Trade was harboured; and that, at all events, if she intended leaving Bahia again for the coast of Africa with emancipated negroes, she should be required to give bond for depositing them at the right places in Africa which such passengers should indicate before leaving Bahia.

His Excellency told me this was rather difficult with respect to a foreign vessel, the "Africano" being Portuguese, but that he thought perhaps a guarantee might be exacted by some means or other when such a vessel was undergoing the fiscal process.

I have, &c.

Consul Morgan to Mr. Jerningham.

Sir,

LATE in the night of the instant, the Chief of Police of this province suddenly embarked in a steamer with a detachment of troops, and was absent several days. The schooner of war "Canopo" was on the same day ordered off to sea with sealed instructions.

I have now learnt the destination and cause of that mission. The President having received information of the appearance of a suspicious palhabote off the point of Itacaré near the Rio das Contas, that had a few days previous fired two guns as a signal, and then stood off the shore, dispatched the Chief of Police to make stringent inquiries and search along the whole southern coast, and to communicate with all the authorities respecting that vessel.

The Chief of Police appears to have displayed great activity in the matter; he visited the point in question, where a detachment of police is always maintained, and personally or officially communicated with the authorities along the coast, and found them all vigilant, with no signs existing of any disembarkation; in short, he brought back the gratifying assurance that the slave-traders have no chance of support in the authorities of this province.

You are aware of the high opinion I entertain of the good faith and energy of the actual President of this Province, and of its worthy Chief of Police, Dr. Mattos; and it is doubly satisfactory to me thus again to bear witness to their activity not to permit this province to be polluted by infamous slave trading speculations.

I have, &c.

Extract from the Rio "Jornal do Commercio" of June 29, 1856.

(Translation.)

SUSPICIONS were entertained in Bahia of a disembarkation of Africans having been effected on the southern coast of that province. The authorities, always vigilant, immediately took most energetic measures for the capture of the Africans and slave-traders, if the current rumour should prove to have been grounded. It, however, turned out to have been unfounded.

The "Jornal da Bahia" has published the following statement:—

"Yesterday, the 19th June, at daybreak, the Chief of Police, accompanied by a military force, embarked on board the steamer 'Paraná,' for one of the southern ports of this province, where it was suspected that a disembarkation of Africans had taken place.

"On the 23rd, the Chief of Police returned from his voyage to the south.

"On the 19th, at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, he arrived in the 'Paraná' at the town of the bar of Rio das Contas, and communicated with the Delegate and Judge of the district; from the investigations which those authorities had instituted, and those he himself set on foot, it became certain that no disembarkation had been effected at that place.

"The suspicions were suggested by the two following facts, which having been submitted to the consideration of the Chief of Police, caused him to determine upon going personally to examine into the affair, and take such steps as might be necessary.

"The Commander of the patache of war "Theresa" informed the Delegate of the town of Barra, on the Rio das Contas, that suspicions were entertained of a disembarkation or re-embarkation of Africans in that district, and the Delegate, in conformity with the orders of the Judge, proceeded with twelve soldiers of the detachment, commanded by a serjeant, to the port of Itacaré, four leagues south of that town; he there cantoned his soldiers, and upon inquiring of the inhabitants of the place he learnt that on different days of the preceding week a vessel made her appearance off the port of Itacaré, and very close to the shore, with her sails furled, and without showing any colours; that after some stay she made sail to seaward.

"On the 12th, a large pilot-boat came in sight which, having neared the port, also without any sails set, and only one flag at the poop, which appeared to be white, fired two guns, and after two hours' stay put out again to sea in a northerly direction.

"The detachment then in Itacaré was reinforced as soon as information was obtained of this second fact.

"It was that which occasioned the visit of the Chief of Police to that place, from whence he addressed the Judge of Ilheos and the Delegate on the subject, because, the district of Ilheos being next to that of Camamu, to which the town of Barra of Rio das Contas belongs, and there existing in the said river accessible ports for disembarkations, such as that of Mamuo, where formerly the "Sem Igual" was captured, it was possible that some attempt might there be made; but the authorities answered that having visited that spot, and instituted all due investigations, they could affirm that no disembarkation of Africans had been effected either there or at Ilheos. The Chief of Police, after having adopted such measures as he considered expedient, retired from Rio das Contas on the 22nd.

"Therefore, if the barque or pilot-boat conveyed slaves, their attempt to land them on the southern part of the province has, as it is to be presumed, been frustrated."

Rio de Janeiro, July 11, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to your Lordship copy of extracts from a speech delivered in the Brazilian Senate on the 1st of July, 1856, by Senator Francisco de Paula Hollanda Cavalcanti, now Visconde Albuquerque, upon the subject of the Slave Trade.

This gentleman who, in the worst of times, when the Slave Trade was at its height, distinguished himself by inveighing against its abominations, is equally worthy of attention when speaking upon the same subject now that the Traffic is represented as being almost extinct.

There is one remark, or suggestion, in this speech, which appears, to my humble judgment, particularly worthy of consideration. Visconde de Albuquerque when alluding to the vigilance which ought to be exercised on the coasts, asks whether it would not be more expedient to organise a department of Coast Guards.

If such a suggestion was adopted and executed in an efficient manner, I am convinced it would be a most excellent preventive measure, might save the Brazilian Government much needless expense in steam-cruizing, and extend a chain of communication along the line of coast, by which any daring attempt might be soon made known to the proper authorities and commandants of military stations.

(Translation.)

LET us talk of the necessity of extinguishing the Slave Trade.

I grant that that is a necessity of the country, and am not one of those who say that the Slave Trade is at an end. No such thing, Sirs, and there will be much greater risk of its continuation from the spreading of the opinion of its being extinguished. I am certain that opinion has arisen from the wish entertained that it should be put an end to; we readily believe what we wish should come to pass, and thus the public press, the reports of former years, and even the speech from the Throne, has said that the Slave Trade is extinct. But I always say, Mr. President, that we have to make great sacrifices with the extinction of the Traffic; and who knows to what extremities these sacrifices will lead us? It is proper it should be known that I shall not retrograde, convinced as I am of the great necessity of putting a stop to this evil: but to say that it is at an end! No, Sirs, the Traffic is not at an end, and we have to submit to a great sacrifice; let us prepare to meet it.

I am one of those who presume that African negroes are still imported into the United States.

Sirs, the capital employed in the Slave Trade produces twenty times more than that which is employed in any other speculation: you may therefore judge whether the Traffic is at an end.

Sirs, let us look to this affair with the utmost attention; it is necessary to establish an especial repression, and greater vigilance against the Traffic.

Sirs, let us go into the question. It becomes necessary to attend to the necessities of providing against the continuation of the Traffic; it is necessary to watch our coasts—not that the simple watching on the coasts will prevent the Traffic; concurrence is necessary, a concurrence of measures upon the coast and on shore, as we cannot extend our measures beyond the coast.

Would it not be more expedient, Mr. President, to organize a department of Coast Guards? Is there not a beginning of this branch of service in existence? Has not the Customs a Coast Guard? And cannot that service be reorganized, and the persons whose duty it is to detect smugglers of goods be also charged to keep watch against the smuggling of negroes? Would it not be more economical to establish special vessels with special instructions?

Sirs, I much fear that the police of the coasts is very weak, and that the vessel which may have landed her cargo remains unheeded.

I do not want impossibilities; but why, Sir, are prepossessions which still exist denied? These sympathies for the Benjamins! Oh! perhaps the walls of this Chamber might still re-echo the opinions which have been heard here.

Can any one be persuaded that our planters say they do not wish to have slaves? Can we prevent seducers from going round from door to door, with the phrase now in fashion: "You are poor because you choose; if you choose it is easy to become rich; we have an interesting business which you may have when you like." There are Catos of this sort, and it is said the Slave Trade is extinct!

I shall express one principle, and which is, that when negotiations are on foot with powerful nations, it is necessary to be moderate in behaviour, in order to effect the prevalence of the arguments preferred.

My Lord,

Rio de Janeiro, July 11, 1856.

I BEG to inclose to your Lordship copy of a communication which I addressed to the Brazilian Minister for Foreign Affairs on the 29th of June, suggesting, from secret information received, that the Portuguese schooner "Emilia" now in this port should be searched, her papers examined, and that the exaction of a bond should be enforced before she left for Benguella.

Three or four days since the Brazilian police went on board and made the necessary investigation.

Senhor Paranhos, whom I saw yesterday, informed me that he believed nothing had been found to justify detention, but that the Minister of Justice had made the "Emilia" give bond for her good behaviour.

His Excellency has promised to answer my note on this subject before the departure of the mail.

I have likewise requested to be informed respecting the intentions of the "Africano" ("General Rego") now at Bahia, which is or has been in the hands of the police on suspicion of bringing false money.

I have also asked for any information which the Brazilian Government may have received respecting the rumours of slave-landings at Turyassu, province of Maranham, and Itacaré near Rio das Contas, Bahia; respecting all which reports his Excellency yesterday promised to satisfy me in his answer as soon as he is put in possession of the result of the necessary investigations.

Inclosure in No. 155.

Mr. Jerningham to Senhor Paranhos.

Excellent Sir,

HAVING received information that a Portuguese schooner named the "Emilia," now in this port, is about to proceed to Benguella, and it being suspected that she may possibly be the "Roberto" which left the port of St. Martinho in Portugal on the 9th of March last without her commander or papers, and of which occurrence your Excellency has been informed, as well as myself, as likewise of her being suspected of the intention to engage in the Slave Trade, I beg to suggest to your Excellency the expediency of a proper investigation being instituted, in order to ascertain whether she is the vessel that she is represented to be, and that her papers are in order.

As your Excellency may likewise remember that a Portuguese vessel named "Emilia," as well as the Portuguese vessel "General Rego" (now the "Africano"), some time since conveyed emancipated blacks from Bahia destined for Lagos, who were unduly landed at other places, where in one case they fell victims of the Chiefs of those places, and in the other case (that of the "Emilia") the poor people's property was retained on board, they reaching their ulterior destination by a lucky chance offered by an English vessel; it may be possible that the "Emilia" now in Rio de Janeiro, may be one of the vessels above alluded to, and therefore, that it would be desirable, in the cause of humanity, to make her enter into a heavy bond not to repeat such heartless conduct.

I see by to-day's "Jornal do Commercio," that the "Africano" ("General Rego") which arrived at Bahia, is now in the hands of the police under suspicion of having conveyed false money. This vessel, as your Excellency will remember, was also suspected by the Portuguese authorities to be engaged in Slave Trade, as has been communicated to Mr. Howard in Lisbon by the Viscount de Athoquia, who wrote to the Portuguese Vice-Consul at Bahia respecting this vessel, whilst Mr. Howard informed Her Majesty's Consul in this city of the suspicions entertained, both of them being desired to watch her proceedings, as the Captain Lage is known to be an old African slave-trader. I doubt not that the Imperial authorities at Bahia will ascertain whether or not these suspicions are borne out by facts, and that they will act accordingly.

With regard to the reported disembarkations at or near Turyassu in the Province of Maranham, and that at Itacaré near Rio das Contas in the Province of Bahia, I shall be much obliged to your Excellency if you will have the kindness to communicate to me any information that the Imperial Government may have received on this subject by the last vessel from the north.

Mr. Jerningham to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received August 11.)

My Lord,

Rio de Janeiro, July 14, 1856.

WITH reference to your Lordship's despatch of the 4th ultimo,* on the subject of the right which the Brazilian Government have claimed for themselves with regard to keeping in bondage for an indefinite period any of those certificated negroes (emancipados) who might be in the employment of the public departments, whilst those negroes of this class who had been in the service of private families for the space of fourteen years, were by the Imperial Decree of 1853 entitled to their freedom, and instructing me to write a note on this subject to the Brazilian Minister for Foreign Affairs, I beg to have the honour to state that I have obeyed your Lordship's orders, and have forwarded to Senhor Paranhos, under date of July 14, a note embodying the whole of the arguments and injunctions as literally expressed in your Lordship's despatch.

The other day I casually touched upon this matter in conversation with his Excellency, when I told him I had orders to address him a note on the subject; Senhor Paranhos hereupon remarked that it was impossible to set free so many at once. To this I answered that the Brazilian Government did not treat all the emancipados alike, and that those in the service of Government were as equally entitled to their freedom as those who had served fourteen years in private families, because they also had equally received their certificates of emancipation from the Mixed British and Brazilian Commission Courts.

We had no time to continue the conversation, as it was late; and I announced to his Excellency the note which I had been ordered to send him on this question, to which he said he would give his attention.

Rio de Janeiro, July 14, 1856.

WITH reference to your Lordship's despatch of the 19th May,† forwarding to me a copy of a despatch from Mr. Campbell, British Consul at Lagos, reporting what he had heard from a source likely to be well informed, namely, that two cargoes of slaves which had been shipped from the South Coast of Africa and the Bight of Benin, had been severally landed, the one not long after the other, at Cape Frio, in the Province of Rio de Janeiro, and at Camamú (between Bahia and Pernambuco, which place is not far from the Rio das Contas), some months previous to Mr. Campbell's announcement dated May 19, being, I suppose, at the commencement of the present year, or in February. I beg to state that I have acquainted Senhor Paranhos with the contents of Mr. Campbell's despatch, and that he considers the information therein contained as erroneous; and upon my part I must assure your Lordship that I have not any intelligence positive enough either from Mr. Consul Morgan, of Bahia, or from any other sources, that would warrant the belief that any such landings were effected at either of those places about the period indicated by Her Majesty's Consul at Lagos.

The two suspicious vessels which were seen off Itacaré, near the Rio das Contas, in June, mentioned in my despatch of the 11th instant,‡ cannot, I should think, be the same as those which, according to Mr. Campbell's account, left Africa some months before the 19th of May.

In the month of November or December there was a rumour of a vessel having been seen off Cape Frio, under suspicious circumstances, when the military were called out, and, as far as we have been able to ascertain, no landing took place there. This information I have already conveyed to your Lordship, in my despatch of the 9th November, 1855.§

§ Class B, presented 1856, No. 117.

In March, Mr. Morgan, when speaking of the capture of the "Mary E. Smith," off St. Matthew's, by the Brazilian schooner "Olinda," on the 20th of January, reported that other slavers were to follow; and it was rumoured then in Bahia that the "Mary Stuart" had landed 600 slaves.

This report he never confirmed, nor have I heard it again repeated, and I mentioned it to other persons, besides the Brazilian Government, likely to be cognizant of such an event had it taken place, and never could I perceive that it had any foundation. Consequently had any such disembarkation taken place, as Mr. Campbell is led to believe, I think by this time, at all events, something of these matters would have eked out.

It may be possible that these cargoes, which are reported to have left Africa, were destined in the first instance for Brazil, but that the captains of the vessels conveying them having learnt the fate of the "Mary E. Smith," which they could have done had they only started in the middle of February, altered their plans, and that they then changed their course for the Havana; they may also have neared this coast, and have found here difficulties, as the "Mary E. Smith" did, and have then departed for another destination.

However, everything is possible on this long line of coast; and although I have not had sufficient ground to believe that disembarkations occurred at Camamú or at Cape Frio, one thing has rendered me distrustful for some months past; this is, the activity of the movements, to the north and south, of the Ladino slave-dealers, who are continually upon the wing between Bahia, Rio, and Santos. These men purchase slaves in the northern provinces, and bring them to Rio de Janeiro for sale, or take them to Santos, in the Province of St. Paul's, but few, comparatively speaking, are brought from St. Paul's hither, and this Trade, unfortunately, is a legitimate one. Now, I was told, on good authority, that, between the 3rd of January this year and the 3rd of June this year, 1,400 had been brought south from the northern provinces, where the cholera had been, as your Lordship knows, excessively severe.

I have often asked myself the question, how comes it that these agriculturists and others who complain so much of want of hands, can afford to increase that want by allowing so many blacks to be taken away from their provinces to the southern market? The only solution that appears to me to suggest itself is that, somehow or other, unknown to Government, Africans may be smuggled in by dribblets to some secret northern point, and afterwards exchanged for Ladino slaves who are brought up coastwise hither.

I also find that Her Majesty's Consul at Maranham, Mr. Ovenden, copy of whose despatch to me respecting the late rumoured landing at Turyassu I here inclose, entertains the possibility and practicability of a similar manner of proceeding.

Your Lordship will see, upon perusing that communication, that Mr. Ovenden is of opinion that the Slave Trade can never be extinct as long as it is allowed to convey slaves for sale from one province to another; and he points out that it is the policy of the slave-dealer, both in a pecuniary view, and in that for ensuring success, to effect exchanges of Africans for Ladinos in the out-of-the-way places where the farmers are poor and not over trustworthy, which puts him directly in possession of legal property, for which the provincial traffickers can get enormous prices in the richer and monied provinces of the south.

The Minister of Marine last year made a motion to endeavour to pass a Bill in the Legislature to restrict, if not forbid, this interprovincial slave-dealing; but his Excellency met with enormous opposition from many members, and the affair dropped.

M. Ferraz, not long since, during this session, has spoken upon this subject very warmly; and during an interview the other day I alluded to it in a conversation with Senhor Paranhos. But his Excellency told me such a Trade could not well be interfered with, on account of the agricultural interests. I then acquainted him with my misgivings to which the quantity of blacks brought from the northern ports gave rise, and I stated that the number of 1,400 had been sent hither in six months' time, which I said might be accounted for by their having possibly been exchanged for Bozals. This, however, Senhor Paranhos assured me was not the case.

I beg to offer these remarks to your Lordship, to show what may possibly be the case, as well as to draw your Lordship's attention to a species of provincial Slave Trade, that as long as it is legal may open the door to abuse, especially as it is in the hands of a set of professional slave-dealers.

The slave-stores of one of these people have been visited twice by the police since March, but nothing illegal was found; and the other day the visiting officer on board the Santos steamer, when she was leaving this port, examined minutely every black belonging to one of these dealers which he was conveying to San Paulo. There is a tax of 40 milreis (5*l.*) per head on these Ladino slaves passing from one province to another, and a fine, I believe, of 200 milreis on the dealer if their passports are not in order.

It is to be hoped that growing civilization and a sense of justice may urge on the Legislature to abolish this impolitic, cruel, and offensive Traffic.

Consul Ovenden to Mr. Jerningham.

(Extract.)

Maranham, June 5, 1856.

I CONSIDER it my duty to report to you that rumours exist in this city of a cargo of slaves having been landed to the northward about six weeks ago.

In conjunction with M. Rougé, French Vice-Consul, I have made every inquiry, but I am sorry to say without being able to obtain anything approaching to proof.

This rumour existed in the beginning of April, when Her Majesty's steam-vessel "Sharpshooter" was here, and I called, with Lieutenant Parish, on the President, and made inquiries. The President had already sent out two cruizers, in consequence of the report, but believed it to be a false alarm, and from all I could learn I had reason to agree with him; and in fact, if the slaver arrived, as I believe she did, it was not until some time afterwards.

Report says a Company has been organized at Rio, for importing slaves here, and afterwards sending them, or others who have been exchanged for them, to the Southern Provinces, and that the agents of this Company are, Anselmo Ferreira Condé, a coast slave-dealer, who has for some time back purchased slaves in this province, and shipped them to Rio de Janeiro, and Manoel da Rocha Miranda, agent or local manager of the Maracassumie Gold Company. It is also said that the slaves lately landed were exchanged for others who could already speak Portuguese, and that these latter were shipped to Rio de Janeiro. I am not so fully convinced of this as of the fact that Condé and Miranda are the parties implicated in this transaction.

I am well aware of the unsatisfactory nature of this communication, resting, as it does, upon rumour; but as the report is universally believed here, I considered it necessary to acquaint you with it.

I do not believe that the President, or any of the higher authorities, are disposed in any manner to countenance those concerned in the nefarious Traffic; but I fear that the minor officials along the coast are but too much inclined to participate in so profitable a speculation.

I believe that if the Brazilian Government could be induced to prohibit or place restrictions on Slave Trade coastwise, that no further attempts would be made to import slaves in the Northern Provinces from Africa, as the great impediment hitherto to the Slave Trade in North Brazil, has been the impossibility of obtaining ready money for a cargo of slaves, and the knowledge that if they are sold on credit, the debt, not being a legal one, cannot be recovered at law.

This difficulty does not exist for Condé and Miranda at present, as they are amply supplied with funds from Rio de Janeiro, but if they could be prevented from shipping them coastwise, they would find the importation of slaves in Maranham no longer a paying business.

Inclosure 2 in No. 157.

Extracts from a Speech delivered in the Brazilian Chamber of Deputies on the 4th of July, 1856, by Don Francisco Balthasar da Silveira.

(Translation.)

I NOW remember, Mr. President, that the President of the Council, replying last year to a question put to him by one of our colleagues in this house respecting the project of a law in which Mr. Wanderley, then still a Deputy, and not a Minister, proposed to the Chamber for prohibiting the Traffic in Slaves from the Northern Provinces to this capital, said, "Do not be afraid, that will be put a stop to." But, Sirs, what is true is, that that horrible Traffic is not at an end, and still continues in a most heinous manner. What is certain is, that those slaves still continue to come, to the injury of the agriculture of the north, and the friends, the protégés of the Government, continue to enjoy the profits which that horrible Traffic yields them! And of what consequence is it that the Northern Provinces are suffering? Have not the Government shown the greatest indifference with regard to the evils occasioned by such a Trade? What do they care if it entails much misery? What matters that this Traffic causes an increase of immorality? Unhappily we see a child torn from the arms of a poor female slave to be sent here; sometimes the woman is married, but without any regard to morality, she is separated from her husband, and sent here. Of what consequence are those disgraceful acts, that hideous immorality, if the profits are certain and advantageous, if the Government care little about it, provided their friends profit by them.

I was a Chief of Police, and had sometimes to wrest free persons from the claws of those harpies, who endeavoured to sell them?

But the Chief of Police cannot prevent any one from selling their slaves.

The Government can endeavour, by the means within their reach, to moralize the country; but the Chief of Police has not the means which the Government possess: he is a judicial authority who has to comply with the law.

Still further, Mr. President, those slaves come huddled together on the decks of the steamers, exposed to all the inclemencies of the weather, suffering from the heat of the sun, from rain, and from dews. As far as male sex is concerned, the evil is not so great, but with regard to the females and the poor children? I have made two voyages to this capital in a steamer, whose Commander merits all praise, and I avail myself of this occasion to manifest how worthy of esteem is Senhor Antonio Joaquim de Santa Barbara. This person, who commands a steam-vessel which has not the necessary accommodations, does everything in his power to diminish the sufferings of these unfortunate beings, by having them placed under awnings in the best way he can, and in taking those who are sick into his own cabin.

But sometimes 100, 200, are shipped! And how can so many be accommodated? How can their sufferings be lessened? What are those in comparison with the great profits derived? The essential part of the question is, that they must be brought here, where the compeers and friends (of the Government) are residing!

Sirs, I make use of frank language; it is harsh, unpalatable, but you must have patience. I represent a province in the north, which has already been greatly injured, and will suffer more in future. How can the hands of which it has been, and continues to be, deprived, be substituted? It pains me to see that province falling into decay, and the Government do not even look to it.

A noble Deputy for Bahia, now a Senator and Minister of Marine, presented a proposal in this Chamber respecting this matter. Why was that proposal hushed up? Why was it not discussed? Why could not the Government, composed as they are of so many enlightened persons, and with such means as they possess of consulting persons fully acquainted with our country, and even those of foreign countries (which would not be unbecoming us), discover some means of lessening this evil?

Some of the evils which I have mentioned it is the vigorous duty of Ministers to put an end to: it is in their power to do so. They wish to allow commerce to go on with the evils and vexations to which it is subject.

Mr. Jerningham to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received August 11.)

(Extract.)

Rio de Janeiro, July 14, 1856.

I BEG to forward to your Lordship copy of the sentence which has been pronounced by Dr. Lopes de Leão, at Pernambuco, condemning Senhor Francisco de Paula Cavalcanti Wanderley (called Chico Caçador), and Senhor José Francisco Accioli Lins (known by the name of Cazumba), convicted of the abduction of Africans from the pilot-boat which conveyed a cargo of Bozals to the waters of Serinhaem, in the month of October of last year, to six years' imprisonment, and to a fine of 200 milreis (22*l.* 10*s.*) for each stolen African, as likewise to incur the expense of re-exporting them to their own country, and to the costs of the prosecution.

The other accused persons, Dr. Antonio Drummond, one of the chief captors of the Serinhaem slaver, and Manoel Fidelis, the fisherman, who conveyed the slaver's captain on shore to Colonel Drummond's (the father) house, instead of to Colonel João Manoel de Barros, the real consignee of the cargo, have been honourably acquitted.

It appears that Colonel Barros has not yet been seized, although the police have been searching after him.

Since the arrival of Senhor Macedo to act as President of Pernambuco, matters touching upon the Serinhaem prosecution have at last taken a satisfactory turn, and justice has at last pronounced her verdict.

I am sorry to find that the authorities of Pernambuco have arrested Colonel Drummond, who, as your Lordship well knows by the interminable correspondence which has taken place upon this most unfortunate, and, I fear, disgraceful, business, was the main cause of the slaver being captured.

During my last interview, I represented this step of the Government, or of the Courts of Justice, as a most anomalous, unjust, and impolitic proceeding, and one which, no doubt, would provoke from Her Majesty's Government unpleasant remarks, since the fact of prosecuting Colonel Drummond, after all the great things he had achieved, merely because he had not done all his duty (by letting the captain escape, &c.), would have a prejudicial effect in the interest of Slave Trade repression. That what Colonel Drummond had done was incomparably greater than what he had left undone; and that a man at his age, sick, and without soldiers, and not in the exercise of the regular functions of Delegado, did as much as he could to compass the capture of the pilot-boat and her cargo; that if he had let off the captain, which he did not (for he took himself off early in the morning), he acted thus from a motive of prudence, for in Colonel Drummond's letter, lately published, he states, that had he seized the captain, the report would have directly got abroad amongst the Africanistas in the neighbourhood and the vessel would have soon put to sea and have disappeared.

However, Senhor Paranhos took shelter under his old arguments, and seemed to look upon Colonel Drummond as guilty of a want of duty.

I told his Excellency, "Well, Sir, if you prosecute Colonel Drummond for not fulfilling all his duty, why do you not include President José Bento, and the Chief of Police, Paiva, who appear to have neglected theirs, in the indictment?"

Senhor Paranhos then defended the late President, as he always did. He said that he was a worthy man, poor and without a fortune; that he had been a Professor; and that he had acted in the best way he could in investigating the Serinhaem affair; and that the Liberal Party were against him, as well as Her Majesty's Consul, and Colonel Menezes Drummond; and his Excellency added, that President José Bento intended to give an explanation of his conduct in this matter to the Chamber of Deputies.

I have since heard that he did speak upon it the other day, but the newspapers have not yet given the report of ex-President José Bento's apologetical discourse.

Senhor Paranhos, amongst other things, declared that it was impossible for the Brazilian Government and authorities to put down and extinguish the Traffic, if we were to interfere with the prosecutions, and to interest ourselves for individuals against whom the law authorities must proceed.

Senhor Paranhos exclaimed, "It is all very well Colonel Drummond's endeavouring to make out his case in his letter, but that is not sufficient; the tribunal must decide if he is innocent."

I replied to Senhor Paranhos, that Brazilian authorities could act as they chose with their own countrymen, without my interference, but that in the case of Colonel Drummond it was different, as England and Brazil were bound to put down the Slave Trade, and that if the Brazilian authorities prosecuted a man who had been the main cause of a capture, and who had been thanked by the President, the Emperor, and Her Majesty's Government, in the name of humanity, that such a manner of proceeding would have a pernicious influence in Slave Trade repression, and would give rise to animadversion.

Senhor Paranhos wound up by saying that he was unable to convince me to take a right view of the whole affair; that I had founded my appreciation of it upon Mr. Cowper's reports, who, after all, was but a man, and liable to be deceived; that foreigners could not judge of things so well in this country as the Government or its authorities, yet that Her Majesty's Government and myself believed the versions given by Her Majesty's Consul in preference to that furnished to the Brazilian Executive.

As for Her Majesty's Government, I assured his Excellency that they were in possession of all that had been written upon this matter, and had not hastily formed their judgment concerning it, as I could convince him if he would have the kindness to read your Lordship's despatch of the 6th June, which I handed to him; that he would see that they had carefully considered this disgraceful affair with regret, and that they suggested the dismissal of President José Bento and the Chief of Police from their offices; and that Dr. Antonio Drummond and the captors of the slaver should be either immediately brought to trial or liberated.

Senhor Paranhos read the despatch attentively, but made no very remarkable reply; I think he said we were unjust.

His Excellency intimated that from intelligence received from Senhor Carvalho Moreira, who had had an interview with Viscount Palmerston, at a levee, his Lordship was under the impression that none of the slaves of the pilot-boat captured at Serinhaem had been saved by the captors, but that they had all been landed and conveyed inland.

This, I told him, was impossible, for I could show his Excellency several despatches of mine, where the numbers who were captured by the Brazilian authorities, and of those who were stolen by Chico Caçador and others, were distinctly mentioned. Besides, Mr. Cowper had also, no doubt, furnished your Lordship with similar statements.

Senhor Paranhos said, that Senhor Moreira had been ordered to present to Her Majesty's Government a memorandum on the Serinhaem affair.

I broke off my conversation with Senhor Paranhos very good friends, and in doing so I expressed once more a final hope, in the name of humanity and justice, that Colonel Drummond would speedily be declared innocent of the charge imputed to him.

The Government and authorities appear now to be acting satisfactorily in Slave Trade repression.

ACCORDING to the tenour of these records, Francisco de Paula Cavalcanti Wanderley, known as Chico Caçador; José Francisco Accioli Lins, known as Cazumba; the Bachelor of Laws, Antonio de Vasconcellos Menezes de Drummond; and Antonio da Silva Pereira; are accused of having taken away 46 Bozal Africans, conveyed to the waters of Serinhaem by a pilot-boat from Angola, by the captain or commander of that vessel, Augusto Cezar de Mesquita, or Menezes, in the month of October 1855; of having committed that crime on the night of the 12th of that month, conveying the Africans, thus removed, by water to the vicinity of Serramby; Manoel Fidelis do Nascimento is accused of having conducted the said captain to the shore, being one of the guard of the citizens who went on board to make the seizure of the negroes; of having consented to the removal of the Africans; and of having carried home, from on board the pilot-boat, a tin of basilicon, a piece of rope, and other important articles.

The two first accused, in their defence, presented the witnesses at pages to , who deposed that the accused, Wanderley, was, during the said 12th of October, at the sugar-estate of Coelhas, two and a-half leagues from the Bar of Serinhaem; and that the accused, Accioli Lins, was at the sugar-estate of Sibiró, at the same distance from the Bar of Serinhaem, where the pilot-boat with the Africans was at anchor; and that they knew this because they went to the house of the former, and passed by that of the latter. The first witness likewise says that he passed the night in the house of the accused, and did not see him go out. This witness is a journeyman cabinet-maker, and is in the pay of the accused. But upon being asked whether they knew if the two first accused took any part in the removal of the Africans, they confined themselves to stating that they were not aware of their being in possession of any of the Africans taken from on board the pilot-boat.

The witnesses presented by the accused, Antonio da Silva Pereira, vide pages to , also confined themselves to deposing, upon oath, that they were not aware that Antonio da Silva Pereira had in his possession any of the Africans who were abducted, and that they did not see him leave his house on the said 12th of October.

The said accused produced no other proofs in their defence.

The witnesses above cited did not destroy the accusation; on the contrary, they confirmed it, because they did not prove that the accused did not commit the crime, nor did they even depose in such a manner as to create doubts of the possibility of the three accused having gone on board the pilot-boat to effect the abduction. I, consequently, pronounce the accused, Francisco de Paula Cavalcanti Wanderley, known as Chico Caçador; José Francisco Accioli Lins, known as Cazumba; and Antonio da Silva da Pereira, as having incurred the provisions of the 2nd Article of the Law of the 7th November, 1831, and of the 4th Article of the Law of the 4th September, 1850; and as the crime was committed at night, and the delinquents had agreed together to perpetrate it (circumstances mentioned in the 16th Article, § 1, of the Criminal Code), combining the 179th Article with the first part of the 34th and 35th of the said Code, I condemn the said accused, Francisco de Paula Cavalcanti Wanderley, known as Chico Caçador; José Francisco Accioli Lins, known as Cazumba; and Antonio da Silva Pereira, to suffer the penalty of corporeal imprisonment for six years, and further, by virtue of the 2nd Article of the above-cited Law of the 7th November, to pay the fine of Rs.200$000 each for every one of the abducted Africans, and the expenses of the re-exportation of them to Africa, each one of the condemned answering for himself, and for the others, respecting the fine and expenses of re-exportation, according to the terms of the Law last above cited.

I, however, acquit the accused Bachelor of Laws, Antonio de Vasconcellos Menezes de Drummond, and Manoel Fidelis do Nascimento, of the crime of which they are accused; the former, because he has proved that he not only took no part in the importation of the Africans, but that it was he who persuaded his father, the Colonel Gaspar de Menezes Vasconcelles de Drummond, to assume the functions of Delegate of Police in Serinhaem, in order to effect the seizure of the Africans and of the pilot-boat; that he assisted him with his counsels as a lawyer and with his pen, and for that purpose was at the Trapiche Plantation until after 11 o'clock at night of the 12th October, and went straight from thence to his own home, the Anjo Plantation, and that he only went on the 13th to the Bar of Serinhaem in company with his father, in order to guide him in the drawing out the warrants for the seizure, and in framing official reports, &c.; finally, that as soon as he and his father knew of the abduction of 46 Africans (an abduction which could only have been known to him and to his father, because the captain has only acquainted the latter with the number he had brought, and his father acquainted the accused with the same) he advised his father to communicate that circumstance to the Government without delay, and he himself wrote the communication—a circumstance which excludes all probability of his having participated in the crime, which it would have been most easy for him to conceal, not only for the reasons above mentioned, but because the capaciousness of the accommodations on board the pilot-boat were entirely favourable for that purpose. The accused further proved that he could not have had any understanding with the two first, Wanderley and Lins, because he had no intercourse with the former, and was not upon good terms with the latter.

I acquit Manoel Fidelis do Nascimento, because, even from the proof of the accusation, it is seen that he, being well acquainted with Colonel João Manoel de Barros Wanderley Lins, and his sugar-plantation Serraria, whom the captain of the pilot-boat was seeking, he deceived him, and purposely conducted him to the house and presence of the Delegate of Police of the District of Serinhaem, Colonel Gaspar de Menezes Vasconcellos Drummond, in order to deliver the prize to him. This proceeding ought to have placed him in the provision of the 5th Article of the Law of the 7th November, 1831.

As to Manoel Fidelis having brought on shore and taken to his house some of the captain's effects, that is not a crime foreseen by the cited Law; it is rather to be believed that he did so the better to deceive the said captain; finally, it has not been proved that Manoel Fidelis do Nascimento had in any way concurred in the abduction of the 46 Africans who disappeared from on board the pilot-boat.

I further condemn the culprits Francisco de Paula Cavalcanti Wanderley, known as Chico Caçador; José Francisco Accioli Lins, known as Cazumba; and Antonio da Silva Pereira, to pay pro rata the costs of this suit, deducting the share belonging to those who have not yet been tried; and I condemn the Municipality to pay the share of the acquitted; besides which, each of the condemned is to pay in full the expenses of their defence.

My Lord,

Rio de Janeiro, August 10, 1856.

A FEW days ago Admiral Johnstone communicated to me a copy of a memorandum which had been sent him from the Admiralty, which had been furnished to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Brussels by the Brazilian Consul in that capital, respecting a system stated to have been adopted by certain speculators for carrying on the Slave Trade on a large scale in a disguised manner, and under the veil of exporting ostensibly free colonists from the coast; and it appears from this memorandum that French subjects and vessels are said to be connected with this ingeniously planned and well-combined transaction.

As Sir Thomas Waller has most certainly put your Lordship in possession of this information, it is needless for me to offer any remark; but I have thought it my duty to communicate it M. St. Georges, the French Minister here, who with great alacrity asked me for a copy, as he intended to address his Government on the matter.

I also imparted it to Senhor Paranhos, who did not exactly remember if the Brazilian Consul at Brussels had communicated the same information to his own Government; but he said he would revert to what had been received from him, and let me know.

His Excellency thought this plan, if there was any truth in it, a remarkable example of ingenuity.

He told me, however, that by the present laws of Brazil, no Bozal blacks, free or slave, could land upon the soil of this Empire.

I BEG to have the honour to forward to your Lordship, copy of two letters which I addressed to Senhor Paranhos on the 29th June and 27th of July, asking of his Excellency information relative to Slave Trade; and also to transmit copy of Senhor Paranhos' reply declaring that the informations lodged of the disembarkation of Africans at Turyassu, and to the southward of Bahia, are groundless, and that the schooner "Emilia" is not the "Roberto," as it was suspected she was, but is detained until security is given.

Since receiving this note from Senhor Paranhos, the "Emilia" has been released by the Brazilian authorities, and has left for Fayal, a security of 40 contos (4,500*l.*) having been required and given, I am told.

Senhor Paranhos informs me that this "Emilia" is not the vessel which conveyed the "emancipados" from Bahia to the coast of Africa, and landed them at the place short of their destinations, as mentioned in your Lordship's despatch of the 29th of March.

I WISH to bring to your Excellency's knowledge copy of a letter which has been received at Her Majesty's Legation respecting vessels suspected of slave-trading; and I beg to call the attention of the Imperial Government to the necessity of making a thorough investigation on the subject, and to ascertain the truth, or not, of the report that the two vessels, having 600 blacks on board each, all young and healthy, averaging from 15 to 25 years, and the greater part speaking Portuguese, had arrived at the places Pipa and Macão, in Rio Grande do Norte, and whether or not disembarkations were effected.

Another vessel, with a similar cargo, is said to have effected a landing at Goiana, where all were sold at Rs. 400$000 each.

Your Excellency will perceive by perusing this inclosure that two more vessels were expected.

Inclosure 3 in No. 165.

Senhor Paranhos to Mr. Jerningham.

(Translation.)

Rio de Janeiro, July 30, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to address myself to Mr. William Stafford Jerningham, &c., in order to answer the letters which, on the 29th of the last and 27th of the present month he was pleased to address to me, and wherein he asks for and gave some information touching the Slave Trade.

The Portuguese schooner "Emilia," now in this port, is not the patache "Roberto," which clandestinely and without proper license sailed from the port of San Martinho, in Portugal.

The schooner "Emilia" is the property of Joaquim Teixeira Brazil and Company, in which firm are comprised Francisco Candido Machado and his brother Manoel Augusto Machado, who is the present captain of this vessel.

She was employed last year in the trade from Lisbon to the Islands of Azores, and this year in the conveyance of colonists to Brazil, with such clearances and licenses as are required by the laws of Portugal.

As this schooner intends to continue conveying colonists, and has for that purpose some articles on board which are specified in the Regulation of the 14th of October, 1850, the Chief of Police was instructed to detain her until it be shown, and a guarantee be given, that such is her destination, and no other, of which, however, there is no reason to doubt.

The last official information received by the Minister of Justice contains the assurance that the reported disembarkations on the coast of Maranham and Bahia did not take place.

The first delation was founded on the following facts:—

1. The barque "Ilha das Enchadas," having sailed from Rio de Janeiro on the 22nd of December, 1855, entered the port of Maranham on the 17th of February of this year, that is, after an interval of fifty-seven days.

2. The manager of the Mining Company established in that province, undertook, in the depth of winter, a rapid voyage to the mines of Turyassu shortly before the arrival of that barque.

3. The coincidence with this voyage that the telegraph more than once made signals of the approach of a vessel to the coast, which vessel never arrived there.

4. That the Company greatly felt the want of labourers.

From these circumstances it was concluded that the said barque might have effected a disembarkation of Africans upon the coast between the Rivers Turyassu and Gurupi, if that cargo had been sent for on account of the Mining Company.

The President of the Province, as Mr. Jerningham may have read in the newspapers of this capital, immediately took the most active and proper measures for the discovery of the crime, if it had been committed. He promptly dispatched advices to the local authorities, a detachment to the suspected point, and a vessel of war to watch that part of the coast where it was presumed the disembarkation had taken place.

I have not yet received from the Minister of Justice an official communication of the result of those proceedings, but I can assure Mr. Jerningham that such a disembarkation has not taken place; and the Imperial Government have always held this belief, because, besides the slight grounds of presumption which gave rise to the delation, it was to be noted that the Province of Maranham kept free from the Slave Trade whilst it was being carried on with impunity upon the coasts of the Empire.

The vessel signaled by the telegraph, and which did not go into port, was a Brazilian vessel of war on a cruize.

The report of a disembarkation to the southward of the port of Bahia, in the vicinity of the Rio das Contas, was still more unfounded. The Chief of Police immediately went to run along the coast; he conferred with the local authorities from whom he could obtain the best information, and on his return he assured the President that the news was false.

As to what Mr. Jerningham was pleased to suggest to me respecting the Portuguese vessel "General Rego," which it appears has lately returned to Bahia, and relative to others which convey emancipated Africans to the coast of Africa, I can only upon this occasion reply to Mr. Jerningham that I have transmitted his observations to the Minister of Justice, and that I am sure that everything possible will be done on the part of the Imperial Government in order to protect the lives of those emigrants.

Mr. Jerningham to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received September 8.)

My Lord,

Rio de Janeiro, August 12, 1856.

DURING my absence for a few days in the Organ Mountains for the sake of getting a little fresh air, information was given to this Legation that the captain of a North American brig, "William Willson," which had arrived here from Charleston, had brought letters which he delivered to a person named José Carneiro Bastos, and that this individual made over the same letters to Antonio Pedreira da Cunha, Commander of the steamer "Josephina," to be remitted by him to João Octavio dos Santos.

This information when received was brought under the notice of the police, as your Lordship will perceive by the inclosed correspondence; but according to the Minister of Justice's report annexed to Senhor Paranhos' note to me, it would appear that the captain of the "William Willson," upon being interrogated, deposed to not having brought any letter for Bastos or João Octavio dos Santos, and that they were not even acquainted. It appears, however, true that Bastos did deliver a letter to the Commander of the "Josephina," addressed not to João Octavio dos Santos, but to João Octavio Nebias, explaining the reason for this delivery and the object of it. The mail being closed, this was his only resource; and as to the object, that was to request Senhor Nebias to furnish him with four contos (450*l.*) to purchase slaves in Rio de Janeiro, Senhor Bastos being a ladino slave-dealer, or a person employed by such people in this unfortunately legitimate trade.

From letters seized (I suppose since) it appears that Senhor Nebias did send Bastos four contos, and that he realized the proposed purchase.

Since this correspondence occurred, I have been assured from the source from whence the information proceeded that a person, whether captain or not of the American vessel "William Willson," did hand a packet of letters to José Carneiro Bastos for João Octavio Nebias, not Santos.

The town of Santos has unfortunately been sadly renowned in the history of Slave Trade, and I fear that there is a great deal of the old leaven still remaining in that city and thereabouts.

THE captain of the North American brig "William Willson," which arrived here from Charleston on the 15th instant, brought a packet of letters for João Octavio dos Santos, in Santos, which letters he delivered to José Carneiro Bastos, who resides in the street of Senhor dos Passos, at No. 53, and who delivered the said letters to Antonio Pedro Carneiro Pereira da Cunha, commander of the steamer "Josephina," to deliver to said João Octavio, in Santos.

The "Josephina" left this port for Santos on the 16th instant, and it being very probable that the answers to those letters (which are supposed to be upon the subject of Slave Trade) will not come in the mail-bags to the post office, but privately in the care of the commander of the "Josephina," in the same manner in which they were sent, to be placed in the hands of José de Carneiro Bastos, it appears to be a case of urgency that the latter's house should be searched immediately after the return of the steamer, in order to the seizure of any letters which may reveal the projects of the slave-traders.

IN the absence of Mr. Jerningham, &c., Mr. John Morgan addressed a letter, on the 22nd instant, to the Chief Clerk of the Office for Foreign Affairs, to be brought to my knowledge, communicating that Her Britannic Majesty's Legation had received information that the Portuguese José Carneiro Bastos, residing in this city, had received from the hands of the captain of the North American brig named "William Willson," which arrived here from Charleston on the 15th, a correspondence addressed to João Octavio dos Santos, alias João Octavio Nebias, which was suspected to relate to some project of attempting to trade in Africans; that the said Bastos had delivered that correspondence to the commander of the steamer "Josephina," which left for Santos on the 16th, and that it was very probable that the answers to that correspondence would come by the intermedial agency of the same person, to be forwarded to a brother of Cunha's, the fitter-out of the "Mary E. Smith," in Boston, who was in Charleston when the "William Willson" left that port.

As soon as that letter was received, I apprised the Minister of Justice of its contents, and his Excellency having caused the said Bastos' house to be searched by the police, in order to ascertain the truth of that information, no signs whatever were discovered by the searchers of any attempt at slave-trading, as Mr. Jerningham will see from the copy of the report of the Chief of Police, which explains the fact of the delivery of the correspondence alluded to, to the commander of the steamer "Josephina," which gave rise to the suspicions which Mr. Morgan refers to.

As the circumstance of the delivery of the letters by the American captain to Bastos is the principal and most important object of Mr. Morgan's communication, it would be proper to know how, when, and in what place, they were delivered to him. It is this explanation that the Chief of Police wishes to obtain in order to prosecute his researches and investigations.

The Chief of Police to the Minister of Justice.

Most Illustrious and Excellent Sir,

*Police Office, Rio de Janeiro,
July 24, 1856.*

HAVING taken due note of the subject matter of the letter written by the English Consul to the Chief Clerk of the Foreign Office, communicating his having been informed that the Portuguese José Carneiro Bastos had received from the captain of the North American brig "William Willson," which arrived from Charleston on the 14th instant, a voluminous correspondence for João Octaviano dos Santos, in Santos, supposed to be relative to some project or attempt at trafficking in Africans; that the said Bastos had delivered that correspondence to the captain of the steamer "Josephina," which left for Santos on the 16th, and that he naturally would have received João Octavio's answer by the same steamer, which returned yesterday; I ordered a strict search to be made in the house of José Carneiro Bastos, but no paper whatever was found which had any reference to the object of the delation. I interrogated Bastos and the captain of the "William Willson," and from their depositions, of which copies are inclosed, your Excellency will see that the captain brought no letter for Bastos or João Octavio dos Santos, and that they are not even acquainted. It is true that Bastos delivered a letter to the commander of the "Josephina," addressed, not to João Octavio dos Santos, but to João Octavio Nebias; but he explains the reason for that delivery, and the object of it. He did deliver it to the captain, whom he met with, because the mail was already closed; and, as to the object of it, he therein requested him to furnish him with a certain amount for the purchase of slaves in this city, a purchase which he realised, Nebias having sent him four contos, as is ascertained from the letters seized, and of which copies are annexed, written by Nebias, and by Manoel Carneiro, a brother of José Carneiro.

As the principal and most important object of the Consul's communication is the circumstance of the delivery of the letters by the American captain to Bastos, it would be proper to find out how, when, and in what place, they were so delivered.

Mr. Jerningham to Senhor Paranhos.

Excellent Sir,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Excellency's private communication under date of the 29th of July, forwarding to me a copy of a note from the Chief of Police to his Excellency the Minister of Justice, respecting the information which was furnished by Her Majesty's Legation to the Imperial Foreign Office, with regard to a correspondence said to have been brought from Charleston, in the United States, by the captain of the North American brig "William Willson," and delivered by him to José Carneiro Bastos, who was reported to have handed it to the commander of the Santos steamer "Josephina," for transmission to João Octavio dos Santos.

From the investigations of the police, contained in the inclosure forwarded by your Excellency to me, it appears the American captain denies having brought any correspondence, but that Carneiro Bastos delivered a letter to the commander of the "Josephina," for a Senhor João Octavio Nebias, at Santos, the nature of which José Carneiro Bastos has explained after his own manner.

At present I know nothing more about the business, and consequently am unable to satisfy the Chief of Police as to where the captain of the American brig was said to have delivered the letter to José Carneiro Bastos.

The information that such a thing did occur was reported to Her Majesty's Legation, and as, according to mutual understanding, and your Excellency's wish that this Legation should furnish any suspicious indications in matters of Slave

(Extract.)

Rio de Janeiro, August 12, 1856.

I BEG to have the honour to forward to your Lordship copy of a despatch which I have received from Mr. Vines, Her Majesty's Consul at Pará, together with inclosed reports of examination by the Brazilian authorities, respecting an American fore-and-aft schooner, which entered the port of Pará in the beginning of July last, called the "Eliza Jane," and which, from the suspicious nature of her cargo (empty casks), and a strong crew, nine of which were Portuguese, it was deemed necessary by the Brazilian authorities to cause an investigation to be made on board.

From the report of the persons charged to search the "Eliza Jane," it would appear that she put into Pará for the purpose of replenishing her provisions, having been on a whaling voyage; according to her register, she left Edgartown on the 22nd August, 1855, for whaling off the Falkland Islands, for which the implements on board seemed to indicate she was destined, but from the evidence extracted, it appears that no whales were found, which, it was alleged, accounted for the number of empty casks; the hold of the ship being nearly filled with them.

The examiners upon inspecting the log-book found it agree with the route marked out on the map; and the muster-roll was correct, twenty-one persons—twelve Americans, nine Portuguese, with the exception of three Portuguese who were not on the muster-roll, having been shipped at the Island das Flores, since the departure of the "Eliza Jane" from the United States.

Your Lordship will see that according to the words of the report, the examiners having discharged the casks from the ship, and having gone over her with a diligent search, they did not find any proofs pointed out by the Decree as evidences that she was engaged in the Slave Trade, not being able to take, as such, the casks that formed all the cargo of the vessel, and would be beyond the limits of the Decree.

The "Eliza Jane" appears then to have been disembargoed, and cleared out at the Pará custom-house for Edgartown; but Mr. Vines states, that the master, Leander West, stated that it was his intention to proceed in a southerly direction, and resume his search for whales.

The Rio newspapers alluded to this business, but I see to-day in one of them a short paragraph stating, "that a person who is well informed on the matter, assured us that from the investigations which took place on board the North American schooner 'Eliza Jane,' has resulted the conviction, that she was not employed in the African traffic, but was a bond fide whaler."

Probably by the next packet from the north, something more may be ascertained concerning the "Eliza Jane;" in the meantime I shall beg the Brazilian Minister for Foreign Affairs to cause vigilance to be exercised in case she calls at the other ports in Brazil, and changes her occupation by endeavouring to ship such necessaries as might enable her to undertake a slave excursion.

This vessel shipped, before leaving Pará, 1,800 lbs. of biscuit, 10 jars of molasses, 2 arrobas of coffee, 24 pumpkins, and 3,000 pieces of firewood.

In 1853, a vessel named the "Sem Igual," informed against by one of her crew, a British subject, and employed upon a similar whaling excursion, being about this coast for a long time, and as she was about to leave St. Catherine's under suspicious circumstances (one of Her Majesty's cruisers being outside at sea to intercept and examine her), she was, before leaving the port, embargoed by the Brazilian authorities, and sent up to Rio de Janeiro to the Court of the Auditor of Marine.

I will do my best to cause this matter to be further investigated.

The suspicious vessels seen off Rio das Contas, Bahia, and off the coast of Paraiba do Norte, as mentioned in my despatch of the 11th ultimo,* have never been as yet satisfactorily accounted for.

Consul Vines to Mr. Jerningham.

Sir,

Pará, July 17, 1856.

I BEG leave to transmit to you the inclosed copies, with translations of papers, which, on my application, were sent to me by the President of this Province, Senhor Henrique de Beaurepaire Rohan; they contain a report of the inquiries instituted by the police authorities of this city, relating to the United States' vessel "Eliza Jane," which recently visited this port, under circumstances calculated to give rise to suspicions that she had been fitted out for Slave Trade.

The "Eliza Jane," which is a fore-and-aft schooner, without topsails, cleared the custom-house of this city for Edgartown, on the 14th instant, and sailed hence yesterday, but the master of the vessel stated it was his intention to sail in a southerly direction, and resume his search for whales.

You will observe that the authorities express themselves, in the inclosed documents, satisfied with the result of their investigations; nevertheless, I deem it advisable to furnish you with all the information I have been able to obtain in reference to the above-named vessel, that you may act in accordance with any opinion you may form, as to whether the circumstances, as far as they are known, justify the suspicion that the "Eliza Jane" has been fitted out to engage in Slave Trade.

I have, &c.

Report of the Examinations on the American fore-and-aft Schooner (Hiate)
"Eliza Jane."

(Translation.)

ON the 14th day of the month of July, in the year of the birth of our Lord Jesus Christ 1856, in this city of St. Mary of Belem, capital of the Province of Grand Pará, in the Police Office, present the Chief of Police, Dr. John Baptista Gonçalves Campos, where I, the temporary Notary Public in the office of the before-named, came, and there he ordered me to report this case, that having made the necessary investigations about the American fore-and-aft schooner "Eliza Jane," entered into the port of this city, on the 4th of July, present month, besides other points, of which I already gave an account to the most excellent President of the Province, I have, by order of the said high authority, and in the order numerically marked, examined the following, which I collected from his informations and examinations to present to his Excellency, namely:

1st. That the said fore-and-aft schooner is of the burden of 174 tons (Brazilian measure); that it has 104 spans of length from stem to stern, and  $27\frac{5}{16}$  in the hatchways, and  $14\frac{2}{16}$  depth of hold, according to the scales and calculations of the stereometre of the custom-house.

2ndly. That the proprietors of the said vessel are, Thomas Bradley, David P. West, Leander West, and Stephen Dillingham, of Falmouth, in the State of Massachusetts, and George Hall, of Savannah; it has no consignee in this city, which port it entered as one of call to replenish its provisions.

3rdly. That Edgartown is the port of its registry, from which it sailed the 22nd of August, 1855, for the Falkland Islands, for the whale fishery.

4thly. That the name of the captain is Leander West, one of the above named proprietors, and a citizen of the United States.

5thly. That the mate's name is Edy C. Luce, which appears likewise on the muster-roll of the vessel.

6thly. That its cargo is empty casks, excepting two, with fish-oil, they not having met any whales.

7thly. Besides services obtained from the Consul of the United States, it only appears that he negotiated a loan of money from Captain James Fairfield, of the American brig-schooner "Henrico," to purchase provisions, &c., for the port expenses; he embarked of provisions 1,800 lbs. of biscuit, 10 jars of molasses, 2 arrobas of coffee, 24 pumpkins, and 3,000 pieces of firewood.

8thly. That its destination was the same port of registry whence it comes, Edgartown, having cleared the custom-house to-day, July 14.

The muster-roll of the crew is as follows :

1. Edy C. Luce, First Mate.
2. William Joffers, Second Mate.
3. Charles Anthony, Sailor.
4. Thomas Pring, ditto.
5. Michael Berran, ditto.
6. William Johnson, ditto.
7. William Norris, ditto.
8. John Gronies, ditto.
9. Charles Conrady, ditto.
10. Thomas Burrell, ditto.
11. William Lynch, Steward.
12. Francis Kurbaugh, Sailor and Cook.
13. Frank Sylvia, Sailor.
14. Manoel Perry, ditto.
15. John Perry, ditto.
16. Joseph Anton, ditto.

This muster-roll is dated to-day, and signed by the Consul of the United States, Samuel G. Pond.

And that all may be known, the Doctor, Chief of the Police, ordered this report to be drawn up, which goes to him signed and registered.

I, Marcellino Marques de Lima, acting Public Notary, who wrote this.

Report.

(Translation.)

REPORT of the examinations officially made on the American fore-and-aft schooner ("hiate") "Eliza Jane," A.D. 1856, the 6th day of July of said year, in my archives I find the report of the examinations as follows, to make known which I draw up the present report: I, M. de Lima, Notary Public, who wrote it.

Report of Examination.

A.D. 1856, July 6, in the anchorage-ground of this city, met on board the American vessel "Eliza Jane," the Chief of Police, Dr. John Baptista Goncalves Campos, with me, the Notary Public to the above-named; the Captain-Lieutenant Gabriel Ferreira da Cruz, Commander of the brig of war "Calliope;" the Second Lieutenant, Desiderio Celestino de Castro; the first tide-waiter of the custom-house, José Joaquim da Gama and Silva; the under tide-waiters, Christovão Antonio Cordeiro, and Antonio Bernado de Souza; as well as the citizen of the United States Samuel G. Pond, in charge of the Consulate of his nation; the said Leander West, captain of the said vessel, and more persons of her crew when the Chief of Police declared, it being said that this vessel, coming from Edgartown, had, on the 4th day of the present month, entered the port of this city as a port of call to replenish water and provisions, but without a manifest; that it being said the before-named captain brought all his casks empty, not having met whales; that being a numerous crew, and belonging to different nations (the greater part Portuguese); that it being said the deck of the vessel was not caulked; all this had given rise to suspicions of her being engaged in the Traffic of Africans, and consequently, by the terms of the Decree No. 708 of October 14, 1850, he was obliged to proceed to examine if the facts named were real, and if there existed legal indications according to Articles 32 and 33 of the same Decree.

To commence the above-named examination the Doctor, Chief of Police, named as Examiners the before-named officers of the fleet, Cruz and Castro, and for interpreter of the English language, the citizen José Pereira Dias.

The said Examiners and interpreter swore on the Holy Evangelists to well and faithfully fulfil their tasks, truly declaring what they discover and may meet, and what, in their consciences, they understand.

And he exhorted them, the Examiners, that they should proceed to the search of all the vessel, having in view the Articles 32 and 33 referred to, which he read to them from the above-quoted Decree.

The tide-waiter then immediately broke the seals, and opened the hatches, and began the examinations, during which, and at the end, the Examiners declared as follows:—

1. That they found the hold of the ship almost entirely filled with casks, and without room for anything else.
2. That they had the greater part of these casks discharged (placing them in a lighter). That they found there were 104 casks (between casks and half-casks), including staves.
3. That some of these casks had inscriptions, showing they had been used for provisions; and that they found several having still within them some remains of provisions.
4. That the casks, being for the most part empty, could be used to keep liquids in. They did not, certainly, give indications of having served for this purpose, and in that agreed with the captain's declaration that they had not found whales.
5. That they had, besides, twenty barrels with meat, and two with biscuit, weighing about 600 lbs.
6. That some of these casks contained salt water, for ballast.
7. That the ship is 127 tons, American measure.
8. That the muster-roll, including the captain, contains twenty-one persons, twelve being Americans, and nine Portuguese, from the Azores.
9. That, according to the different questions put to several persons of the crew, they gather that three of the Portuguese, that are not on the muster-roll, were taken in from the Island of Das Flores in the course of the voyage, and since the vessel had sailed from the port of its departure in the United States.
10. That on the deck were constructed two stoves of tiles, with pans, and a cooler of copper, fit for making fish oil.
11. That in the proper places in the vessel were found all the preparations for whale-fishing, as harpoons, pikes, chains to intercept, line and implements for hanging up.
12. That there were also four whale-boats, three in good repair, and one damaged.
13. That they found pieces of the skin of the sea-wolf covering the oars and the rowlocks in the right places.
14. That, besides four muskets armed with bayonets, there was one more, intended for firing on the whales in the act of harpooning them.
15. That the deck of the vessel was caulked, as others are.
16. That at first sight it might appear that the deck was not caulked. That there is a division between the two masts to preserve the deck from damage by cutting up of the whales.
17. That, examining the log-book of the vessel, they found it agree with the route marked on the map, and with the evidences of the crew that they, as well as the Chief of Police, by interpretation, had collected from the crew, interrogated separately, and variously, and together.

18. That these replies from them were always given without hesitation, without change of countenance, and unmoved.

19. That, having discharged the casks from the ship, and having gone over her, I say, with a diligent search, they did not find any proofs pointed out by the Decree as evidences that she was engaged in the Traffic of Africans; not being able to take as such the casks that formed all the cargo of the vessel, and would be beyond the limits of the Decree.

That, finally, the above report is all the Examiners found to declare in their search, and having nothing more, they consider as concluded this ordered examination, and, from the whole, formed the present statement, and which I go to write and register by the Judge, and signed by the same Examiners, Interpreter, Consul, tide-waiter of the custom-house, and witnesses, with me, the Notary Public, M. Marques de Lima, which I made and wrote; all of which I testify.

I declare in time, on the first page, at the twentieth line, there will be found an interlineation of the words "consciences and changed," which ought to be understood.

I declare it, Marques de Lima.

WITH reference to your Lordship's despatch of the 30th June,* forwarding to me, with inclosures, copy of a letter which had been received at the Foreign Office from the Secretary of the Recife and San Francisco Railway, containing the answer of the Board of Directors to the charge that the contractors who have engaged to construct the works of the line intended to employ slave-labour, I beg to say that last month I wrote to Mr. Cowper, in obedience to the instructions conveyed in your Lordship's despatch of the 6th June, in order to inquire if that reported intention was still persisted in, but I have not as yet received an answer respecting it. Mr. Jerningham to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received September 8.)

My Lord,

Rio de Janeiro, August 12, 1856.

FOUR Africans arrived last month in a French vessel at Bahia, as free men, and making part of the crew.

The fact, upon being discovered by or reported to the authorities there, was explained thus: that the captain, not being able to complete his crew on the coast of Africa, shipped four free Bozal blacks, Her Majesty's Consul at Lagos having nothing to oppose to such shipment.

* No. 144.

Whether this is correct I know not; but that these Africans arrived at Bahia is quite certain, and the Brazilian authorities have not permitted them to land, having caused the master of the vessel to give security not to allow them to do so, and I believe, also, to take them back to their own country.

The other day M. de St. Georges, the French Minister, read me a note which he had received from the French Consul at Bahia, in which the obligation of giving bond in this case, and whenever any French vessel cleared out from that port for the coast of Africa, was animadverted upon as placing obstacles in the way of commerce.

Respecting this exaction of a bond when foreign vessels proceeded from hence to the coast of Africa, I told M. de St. Georges that it was a Brazilian regulation, with which it appeared to me most proper to comply, and that if such a requirement should be made with regard to any British ship about to clear out from Brazil for the coast, I should be the first to request that such security should be enforced. However, I told his Excellency that I then did not quite understand why a bond should be exacted of his countryman because he had four Bozals on board who were stated to be bond fide freemen.

Since my conversation with M. de St. Georges, who has had some talk on this subject with Senhor Paranhos, I have learnt from the latter gentleman that the preventive measure which has been adopted at Bahia relative to these four free Africans, is justified by the law of this Empire, which permits no Bozal black, be he free or bondman, to disembark on Brazilian soil.

WITH reference to your Lordship's despatch of June 30, in which is inclosed, for my information, copy of a memorandum with two inclosures, which had been placed in your Lordship's hands by the Brazilian Minister, Senhor Carvalho Moreira, and likewise copy of the answer which your Lordship returned relative to the representation which Senhor Carvalho Moreira was instructed to make to Her Majesty's Government with regard to the note which was addressed by me to Senhor Paranhos on the 7th of last March, in conformity with the orders contained in your Lordship's despatch of the 9th of January; I beg to state that I totally repudiate what Senhor Carvalho Moreira endeavours to establish, namely, that Her Majesty's Government were not informed of the circumstances respecting the capture of the Africans at Serinhaem by this Legation, and I have only to refer to my despatch of November 12, 1855,* with inclosures, in which I gave a whole account of it, and distinctly stated that 162 Bozal Africans had been captured by the Brazilians, and that orders had been issued by the President of Pernambuco to cause the pilot-boat and the said Africans to be brought from the place of capture to Pernambuco.

Not one single month has elapsed since November that I have not addressed your Lordship on this affair: as my despatches of December 14, January 14, February 12, March 14, April 12, and May 12, all can prove; and as I was determined that such a notion should not prevail here, I took all these despatches to Senhor Paranhos and read him a good part of my despatch of November 12. His Excellency listened to it and saw that I plainly stated the number of Africans, 162, which had been captured by the Brazilians and were ordered to be conveyed to Pernambuco; and that I even then also mentioned Colonel Drummond as the captor, and likewise the suspicion that some had been previously stolen before that event.

The shortness of the time left before the departure of the mail prevents me from dissecting Senhor Carvalho Moreira's memorandum.

However, Senhor Paranhos is now convinced that I reported upon the Serinhaem capture, and he spontaneously exclaimed after reading to him my despatch of November 12, "Oui, j'ai toujours cru que vous l'avez fait."

* Class B, presented 1856, No. 118.

Senhor Paranhos did not seem much inclined to discuss the Memorandum of M. Moreira, which, I told him, appeared to me not correct in some respects. His Excellency, however, said that Senhor Carvalho Moreira would be instructed to answer your Lordship's Memorandum.

Senhor Paranhos then asked me why the Prime Minister was averse so to Brazilians and Brazil, and that he never would allow them "d'avoir raison."

I replied that I believed that such was not the case; that on the matter of Slave Trade his Lordship's opinions were pretty well known; but that if Brazil proceeded to extinguish the Slave Trade entirely, I was convinced his Lordship would be ready to be on the best of terms with this country, and do anything that might tend to its prosperity.

Her Majesty's Consul writes from Pernambuco that everything relating to the Serinhaem affairs has come to a dead stop; that the Drummonds are still in prison untried; the twenty-nine remaining blacks in slavery have not as yet been found (one, however, I see by the papers, has been discovered by the new President); and an Irishman named Donelly has been interrogated without effect; and he supposes the Provincial Government are waiting orders from Rio de Janeiro.

I have had several conversations with Senhor Paranhos upon these trials, and have greatly stood up for Colonel Drummond, and stated to his Excellency that, having arrested this person, who was the chief captor of the pilot-boat, merely because he let the captain of the slaver escape, and did not perform all his duty, that such conduct, especially if Colonel Drummond was condemned, would expose the Imperial Government to very unpleasant remarks.

I beg to annex a translation of the Minister of Justice's speech delivered on the 14th of July, in the Chamber of Deputies, on the Serinhaem trials. Dr. José Bento, late President of Pernambuco, has also made his defence in the Chambers.

Senhor Paranhos still maintains that Dr. José Bento acted properly.

Extract from a Speech delivered on the 14th of July, 1856, in the Brazilian Chamber of Deputies, by the Minister of Justice.

(Translation.)

THE noble Deputy for the Province of Pernambuco, with his usual energetic and bold manner of discussion, has raised up a question relative to the affairs of Serinhaem; I allude to the disembarkation of Africans which took place there. The noble Deputy sees a series of mysteries connected with those affairs which, for the honour of the Government, ought to be unveiled. Happily, Mr. President, the noble Deputy was followed by the ex-President of that province, who placed that question in its proper light, in bringing to your knowledge all the circumstances, even the most recondite, all the official correspondence, even the most private. Nothing, therefore, remains for me to elucidate in this respect.

I must, however, tell the noble Deputy that I do not see any of the mysteries which he does. According to the noble Deputy it is a mysterious circumstance that the Government should have sent to eulogize Colonel Menezes, and that Colonel Menezes should now be imprisoned. Here, Sirs, there is no mystery; when the Government sent to praise Colonel Menezes, they only knew the fact of the glorious seizure of the Africans; they subsequently received information, which was duly ascertained to be correct, that Colonel Menezes had had the captain of the pilot-boat in his own house, that he did not arrest him, and allowed him to depart in peace, and to take the vessel's papers from on board, the documents of the crime committed; that he did not go to the spot for the effective seizure of the pilot-boat until 2 o'clock of the following day; that he did not adopt the necessary measures for the safe custody of the unfortunate Africans; inasmuch as when the captain of the detachment arrived on the spot, they were in a state of abandonment; what was to be done? The glory of the seizure was demoralized and destroyed by the purloining of 47 Africans; it became then the duty of the Government to order Colonel Menezes to be made accountable, because the Government are not only contented with the seizure of the Africans, but further wish to punish severely those who commit the crime of slave-trading; it was not in the power of an agent of the Government, for any reason whatever, to set at liberty, to let go with impunity and harmless, the principal criminal, the captain of the slaver.

Neither is it mysterious that the son of Colonel Menezes, whom the police had indicated as being a criminal, should have been afterwards acquitted. The Chamber knows that the proofs which are sufficient for an indictment are not enough for a condemnation.

I abstain from pronouncing a judgment respecting the sentence which has been published by the press: I will, however, say to the Chamber that I have great confidence in the present Chief of Police, who concluded that investigation.

I shall not add anything more upon this subject, because it appertains to justice and the tribunals to decide it.

Sirs, the question of the cessation of the Traffic is one of life and death to the Government, who will not compound with it. It is a debt of honour which they owe to the country, to the civilized world, and they will fully satisfy it, as they will not rest until they place before the bar of the tribunals all those who are connected with the introduction and abduction of Africans at Serinhaera, be they whom they may.

Further, Sirs, it appears to me that there is no mystery in the fact that, whilst the President was ordering the imprisonment of Colonel Menezes, that Colonel was being praised by the English Government; because, Sirs, the English Government may have been led into error, as the Brazilian Government were, from being dazzled by the glory of the capture before they came to be informed of the abduction and of its circumstances.

As soon as I received information of the praise bestowed by the English Consul on Colonel Menezes, I protested against it in an official note which I addressed on the 11th of April last, to the Minister of Foreign Affairs, because, in truth, the sanction which the Government have a right to exercise over the acts of their employés was thus evidently nullified, if they could be eulogized by a foreign Government for the very acts of which they were being censured by the Government of the country.

I BEG now to have the honour to forward to your Lordship copy of a note from Senhor Paranhos, in answer to a memorandum which I presented to him in June last on Slave Trade matters, in which his Excellency informs me that the Chief of Police of the Province of Paraná having proceeded to Guaratiba, had ascertained that the rumour of a disembarkation of Africans having been effected was perfectly groundless.

His Excellency also states that measures have been taken to defeat an attempt on the part of the brig "Pensamento," in case she should direct her course to any of the ports of this Empire.

Senhor Paranhos to Mr. Jerningham.

(Translation.)

Rio de Janeiro, August 26, 1856.

ACCORDING to the memorandum which your Excellency had the goodness to give me on the 21st of June last, you had received upon that date information of the following facts:—

1. Of a disembarkation of 180 Africans in Guaratuba.
2. The departure of the brig "Pensamento," from Teneriffe for Benguella, on the 2nd of May, having on board a brother of Francisco Riverosa.
3. Preparations for a disembarkation of Africans on the Ilha das Moças, near Ilha Grande.

Having brought this memorandum to the knowledge of the Minister of Justice, his Excellency informed me on the 26th of June, that he called upon the Presidents of the respective Provinces for information touching the first and third points, and recommended vigilance to those of the maritime provinces respecting the second.

To this information the said Minister added, in a despatch of the 11th instant, that the Chief of Police of the Province of Paraná having proceeded to Guaratuba, had ascertained that the report of the disembarkation of Africans having been effected there was entirely groundless.

The suspicion, therefore, of Africans having been landed at Guaratuba having vanished, and the necessary measures having been taken relative to the brig "Pensamento," in case she should direct her course to any port of the Empire, the fact of the preparations which are said to be made for a disembarkation on the Ilha das Moças, is the only one depending upon further information.

I shall hasten to transmit to your Excellency any elucidations which may be furnished to me by the Minister of Justice, not hesitating at once to assure you that said report is unfounded.

Mr. Jerningham to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received October 11.)

(Extract.)

Rio de Janeiro, September 11, 1856.

I BEG to have the honour to forward to your Lordship translation of a note from Senhor Paranhos, under date of September 5, in answer to a communication of mine of the 27th of February last, in which his Excellency states that, after a most scrupulous investigation, it has been ascertained that the rumour of the disembarkation of 1,400 Africans in the River Mucury, of which Her Majesty's Consul at Bahia had informed Her Majesty's Legation, was not correct.

Regarding the report of the commander of the Brazilian war-steamer "Don Pedro II," alluded to in his Excellency's note, as to the Rio Mucury not offering facilities for a disembarkation, I fear it is not possible to coincide with that officer, when one reflects that steam intercourse takes place between Rio de Janeiro and that river, and although a smaller steam-boat ascends it to a considerable distance from somewhere near the mouth, to which the larger Rio vessels repair, yet the bar cannot be so bad but that a slaver of light draught might enter; and from the fact of the Mucury being now the shortest line to Minas Novas, to which district from Santa Clara the Ottoni Company have cut a "picada," it would seem natural that this would be a convenient road for sending Africans up into the country without difficulty, or the danger of incurring observation. At the commencement of this year I heard such was the project of some slave-dealers, but that Senhor Ottoni, the enterprising chief of the Mucury Company, would not listen to such suggestions.

As I have not heard Mr. Morgan's rumour confirmed, I have no grounds for disbelieving the statements contained in Senhor Paranhos' note.

The number of Ladino blacks which have been imported into Rio from the northern ports, make me apprehensive either that something wrong has occurred somewhere, or that it will soon be the case; for how can the northern provinces, where negroes are most required, afford to supply the Rio and St. Paul's markets, when they themselves, decimated by cholera, stand more in need of those kind of labourers for sugar plantations under a hotter sun than in these provinces, where coffee and Indian corn, &c., requiring infinitely less toil, are chiefly cultivated.

A Brazilian gentleman, to whom I frankly communicated my suspicions, told me that he did not think at present Africans were imported into the northern provinces, but that the planters there, poorer than those in the southern ones, were compelled by necessity and debts to sell their slaves, which were greedily bought up at Rio de Janeiro and St. Paul's, where they fetch at present enormous prices. He also assured me that later on, if colonists were not imported into the southern provinces in a sufficient quantity, so as to force the black population up to the north, there would be great danger of the northern planters, for the sake of hands, embarking in contraband speculations.

One thing, however, is certain: the black population during the last year have suffered severely, and the prices paid here for Ladino slaves are enormous; those on the coast of Africa are excessively small. The people here have no great liking for Portuguese or Island-men; they prefer Creole blacks, and, if the truth were known, they would prefer Africans to Creoles. This, I am convinced, is the private feeling of most people, particularly those who are engaged in agriculture, whatever may be their ideas upon the heinousness of Slave Trade.

The Emperor, however, is decidedly an enemy to Slave Trade: and if he directs his great influence in the right quarter, he may keep it down; but to extinguish it completely, one of the best authorities on such a point, Senhor Euzebio, formerly Minister of Justice, said that it would take ten years.

I was told this evening that information had arrived by the "Paquete de Loanda," a vessel carrying on legal trade between Rio and Africa, that two North American vessels at Ambriz had taken on board slaves, and were destined for Havana. The names were promised me, but as yet I have not got them to transmit to your Lordship.

IN answer to the note which, on the 27th of February of the present year, was addressed to me by Mr. W. S. Jerningham, &c., in reply to mine of the 22nd of the same month, I have the honour to acquaint him that, having brought the same to the knowledge of the Minister of Justice on the 1st of March last, his Excellency, in a despatch of the 2nd instant, informed me that, having issued positive orders to the Presidents of the Province of Bahia and Espirito Santo to send and investigate, with the most severe scrupulousness, into the report given to Mr. Jerningham by the English Consul at Bahia, of the disembarkation of 1,400 Africans in the River Mucury, it is now known, from the reports officially rendered by those two Delegates of the Imperial Government, by the minute investigations conducted by the authorities of both provinces, and from what the commander of the war-steamer "Pedro II" asserts, that said report is groundless, because no disembarkation took place, nor could any be effected, the place not affording facilities for that purpose.

Mr. Jerningham to Senhor Paranhos.

Excellent Sir,

IT has been communicated to me that, from the present time up to the month of December, one or two vessels with Africans might endeavour to disembark their cargoes somewhere upon the coasts of St. Paul's and Paraná, between Ubatuba and Paranaguá; and I consequently hasten to forward this intelligence to the Imperial Government, in order that they may be upon their guard against any such unlawful attempts.

It has also been reported that 500 shirts, 500 hats, 500 cotton trowsers (striped), 500 women's dresses, and 500 handkerchiefs, have been already dispatched from hence in a small vessel plying between Rio de Janeiro and Caraguatuba and St. Sebastião; from which it might be inferred that these articles are probably intended for the use of the new blacks upon their arrival on the coast of Brazil.

It is further stated, that the knowledge of this alleged premeditated transaction has already reached the ears of the Municipal Judge of St. Sebastião.

Thinking that the information in question might be useful to the Imperial Government, I have considered it my duty to impart it to your Excellency in the state that it has been confided to me, hoping that, if it should prove to be correct, the Imperial Government will be able, by the adoption of efficient and successful means, to defeat any sinister machinations that may be contemplated in the above-mentioned localities.

(Extract.)

I TRANSMIT herewith a copy of a despatch which has been communicated to me by Senhor Moreira, containing the reply of Senhor Paranhos to the observations which, in my despatch of the 28th of April last, I instructed Mr. Jerningham to address to the Brazilian Minister, explaining the grounds of the remonstrance which Her Majesty's Government addressed to that of Brazil, in January last, with regard to the conduct of the Brazilian authorities in the matter of the vessel which brought a cargo of Africans to the River Serinhaem, in October 1855.

In my despatch above-mentioned, I observed to Mr. Jerningham that Her Majesty's Government perceived some evidence of a change in the course of opposition to the Slave Trade which had been pursued in Brazil for three years previous to October 1855; and I stated that Her Majesty's Government had come to this conclusion on observing the want of vigour on the part of the President of Pernambuco in the affair of Serinhaem.

The reasons alleged by Senhor Paranhos in defence of the President of Pernambuco, are as follows :

1st. That no one imagined the possibility of an attempt being made to land slaves at Serinhaem ;

2ndly. That so soon as the President received positive information that some of the slaves had been carried off, he ordered every effort to be made to recover the stolen Africans, and also to arrest and to bring to justice the captain and crew of the vessel, and the other guilty parties.

The remaining portion of Senhor Paranhos' exculpation of the President consists solely of statements relating to the conduct of Colonel Vasconcellos Drummond, who, it appears, was a landed proprietor in the neighbourhood of the Serinhaem, and on learning what was the nature of the cargo which had arrived there, resumed the office of Delegate of Police, which he had held in 1849, and proceeded to rescue and deliver to the Brazilian authorities 162 negroes. Senhor Paranhos says, that although Colonel Drummond seemed at first to have acted in the business with good faith, yet it appeared afterwards that 10 of the Africans had been previously stolen from the vessel by Colonel Drummond's own son, and the Colonel is accused of having wilfully allowed the captain of the slaver to escape, and of having resorted to fraud and evasion for the purpose of screening his son, and of concealing his own suspicious intrigues in this affair ; and Senhor Paranhos states that for these reasons the Imperial Government ordered that Colonel Drummond should be dismissed from his office of Delegate of Police.

I have to instruct you to observe to Senhor Paranhos that it cannot be maintained that the attempt to land slaves at Serinhaem took the Brazilian authorities by surprise, because, as early as the 5th of July, 1855, instructions were publicly issued by the President of the Province, directing the police authorities of Serinhaem and Rio Formoso to be vigilant, as the Government had received information of an intended landing of slaves at or near the mouth of the River Serinhaem.

You will say that Her Majesty's Government are at a loss to find in his Excellency's despatch to M. Moreira, of the 13th of June, any satisfactory evidence of vigorous conduct on the part of the President of Pernambuco, but they find therein ample confirmation of the alleged fact that the President directed his endeavours principally to the implication of the two Messrs. Drummond in the Serinhaem affair, and that he neglected to use due diligence in order to arrest Colonel de Barros, who was the consignee of the slave-vessel, and as such the chief delinquent.

You will remark that this person has not yet been brought to trial. And with regard to the observation of Senhor Paranhos that inasmuch as the 47 negroes who were stolen from the slave-vessel passed into the hands of persons who were not the parties concerned in the adventure in question, those parties derived no advantage from that adventure, and, consequently, that Her Majesty's Government were not borne out in representing that the affair at Serinhaem would afford encouragement to the slave-dealers ; you will state to his Excellency that the representation in my despatch to Mr. Jerningham, did not relate merely to the slave-dealers concerned in the vessel which came to the Serinhaem, but that I observed that the want of vigour on the part of the President of Pernambuco, and the indifference with which that remissness had been viewed by the Imperial Government, indicated a change of policy that must serve as an encouragement to slave-traders in general.

In the concluding portion of Senhor Paranhos' despatch he instructs M. Moreira to complain that after Colonel Drummond, the Delegate of Police, had resigned his office, and after the Government had given orders that he should be held responsible, Mr. Cowper, Her Majesty's Consul at Pernambuco, expressed to Colonel Drummond, in the name of the British Government, their approval and acknowledgments of his conduct in the affair of Serinhaem : and Senhor Paranhos goes on to state that inasmuch as Mr. Cowper has been the cause of all the misunderstandings which have arisen respecting this affair, the voluntary withdrawal of that officer would be the least that the British Government could do, in order to neutralise the effect of acts which have so deeply afflicted the Brazilian Government, and have excited the resentment of the Brazilian nation.

You will state to Senhor Paranhos, in answer to this suggestion, that the notion of offering the acknowledgments of the British Government to Colonel Drummond, originated with Her Majesty's Government and not with Consul Cowper; and when it is borne in mind how lamentably the late President of Pernambuco neglected his duty in not immediately arresting Colonel Barros, the principal offender in this criminal attempt to import African slaves into Brazil, and chose rather to direct the action of the laws against the Messrs. Drummond, one of whom already stands acquitted of the charge brought against him, and the other probably owes his imprisonment merely to a sentiment of personal resentment, it is a perversion of the real facts of the case to call Mr. Cowper the prime mover and author of the scandal which has attended this affair: that scandal has been caused not by the representations of Her Majesty's Government, but by the apparent impunity which has hitherto attended the real originators of a criminal attempt to land slaves in Brazil.

You will therefore state that the conduct of Mr. Cowper has merited the approbation of Her Majesty's Government, and that the suggestion of Senhor Paranhos that he should be removed from his post cannot be entertained.

You will acquaint Senhor Paranhos that Her Majesty's Government are concerned to think that the animosity displayed against Mr. Cowper, who has done his duty in a manner that must be approved by all persons who sincerely desire to check the revival of the Slave Trade in Brazil, is a corroboration of the opinion expressed by Her Majesty's Government that the course pursued by the Brazilian Government in the Serinhaem affair would serve as an encouragement to slave-dealers; and you will request that the Imperial exequatur recognising Mr. Cowper's new Commission may be forthwith issued.

Senhor Paranhos to Senhor Moreira.

(Translation.)

Rio de Janeiro, June 13, 1856.

MR. JERNINGHAM, on the 5th instant, communicated to me a despatch from Lord Clarendon, dated the 28th April last, and afterwards sent me the inclosed extract, accompanied by a private letter.

Although that despatch appears to have been written with the intention of softening the disagreeable impression which the Imperial Government must receive from the proceeding of the British Government, manifested in the threat held out to us of executing the Bill of 1845, nevertheless it is affected by the same errors, and by the false or incorrect information which gave rise to that unjustifiable menace.

After so many explanations given relative to the occurrences which took place at Serinhaem, after so many endeavours made to apprehend and liberate the few slaves taken away from the vessel which brought them, and to prosecute and punish the persons guilty of taking them away, it is still asserted in that despatch—1st, that some evidence was perceived of a change in the course of opposition to the Slave Trade which had been pursued in Brazil for three years previous to October 1855; and 2ndly, that there was a want of vigour on the part of the President of Pernambuco, and that the indifference with which that conduct of its agent had been viewed by the Imperial Government indicated a change of policy which must serve as an encouragement to slave-traders.

Your Excellency, then, making use of the information with which I have furnished you relative to the affair of Serinhaem, will endeavour to remove the false prepossessions which gave rise to the despatch of Lord Clarendon.

With this object, your Excellency will ask for a particular interview, and after having proved that the Imperial Government follows, and has constantly followed, in respect to the Traffic, the same policy which was begun in 1850, will observe that the repeated steps ordered to be taken by the Imperial Government for the complete ascertainment and punishment of the act done at Serinhaem, show that the accusation of indifference made by the British Government is gratuitously offensive, and merely proves the ill-will which seems to actuate it towards the Brazilian Government.

You will also observe that there is an error in the assertion that the attempt at Serinhaem must serve as an encouragement to the slave-traders.

The fact of the abduction of the 47 Africans out of those who formed the lading of the vessel which arrived at that point of the Empire is certainly to be lamented. But it is not less certain that the traders made no profit or advantage out of this attempt. Those 47 Africans were stolen by persons who appear to have been strangers to the speculation, and they did not do so with impunity, for they were pursued and prosecuted, and 21 of these unfortunate men have already been rescued from their custody.

And, therefore, the encouragement is absolutely imaginary, which it is thought might be given to the slave-traders, by the simple flight of the captain and crew, effected with the total loss of the cargo.

Finally, your Excellency will observe that the Imperial Government is of opinion that the accusation of want of energy made to the President of the Province of Pernambuco in regard to the landing at Serinhaem, is not deserved.

The first information given to the President of the attempt at Serinhaem, was communicated by the Delegate Gaspar de Menezes Vasconcellos Drummond.

No one imagined the possibility of such an attempt, and as a proof of it there is the fact that the British Consul in Pernambuco had dispatched from the waters of this province one of the ships of the British navy which had been a short time before in the harbour of Recife.

The first information given to the President by the said delegate did not state that a single one had been carried away of the Africans belonging to the cargo of the vessel he had ordered to be seized. And the number of Africans found on board, with the smallness of the vessel, did not afford any presumption of the diminution that had been effected.

So soon as the President received information which showed the abduction of part of the cargo, of his own accord, and afterwards in pursuance of the commands of the Imperial Government, he ordered every effort to be made, as well to apprehend the Africans taken away, as to arrest the captain and crew of the vessel, and to punish all the guilty parties.

The goodwill exhibited by the Delegate in assuming his office, as he said, to effect the arrest, turned away from him all suspicion of want of truth in his information.

The subsequent fact of its being ascertained that the first carrying off of 10 Africans had been effected by the own son of the Delegate, explained his silence in regard to it, the negligence which he exhibited in the emergency, and his failure to co-operate with the Chief of Police, when that magistrate, by the command of the Government, went to the place to proceed against the guilty parties.

It was then remarked that the Delegate had omitted taking the contrabandist captain, who had gone to his very house, and who fell at his feet when he knew that he was in office.

It was remarked that the Delegate did not go immediately on board the slaver with his own servants (whom he had in abundance), or with the national guards of the place, who might have been called; but that in order to make the arrest, he sent to demand force from the troop of the line, when the latter was at a great distance from the port of Serinhaem, leaving the ship to itself in the meantime, and thus facilitating the flight of the captain and crew, as well as the abduction of part of the Africans.

This abduction would have been greater if the Commandant of the force of the first line had not used extraordinary efforts to get to the place of arrest.

The Delegate admitted the diligence of the Commandant, and in writing to the President of the Province, he expressed his approbation on this account, saying he was surprised at his having made the journey so rapidly. But when he saw that the Commandant had begun to suspect the abduction of some of the Africans, and was endeavouring to discover the guilty authors, he did not hesitate to write to the President, asking for the removal of the Commandant.

It was from all these motives and suspicions that the Imperial Government ordered Senhor Drummond to be deprived of his office of Delegate of Police.

The ex-Delegate, his son, and perhaps other guilty persons, angry with the President in consequence of the steps taken against them, endeavoured to annoy him, sometimes abusing him in the opposition papers, and making unjust insinuations against him, sometimes plotting against him, and accusing him to the English Consul, who seemed desirous of finding accusations against him in order to excuse his own proceedings.

This is the best opportunity for your Excellency to speak to Lord Clarendon of the following fact, which is a matter of astonishment to the Imperial Government.

It is known that the British Consul in Pernambuco, after the demission of the Delegate, and subsequently to the order sent from the Imperial Government to put him on his trial, communicated to him the approbation and thanks of Her Britannic Majesty's Government for his proceedings in the affair of Serinhaem.

Your Excellency will observe to Lord Clarendon that this fact, if it be true, as it is believed, is more likely to encourage slave-traders than the indifference, which is not proved, imputed by the British Government to that of Brazil.

The Imperial Government considers that this act, by which the British Government constituted itself judge between the Government of Brazil and its subordinates, interposing in a process awaiting the decision of the magistrates of the country, besides being an encroachment on the independence of Brazil, tends to diminish the moral force of the Imperial Government in repressing the Slave Trade.

Her Britannic Majesty's Government must be aware of the character and tendency of the step taken by it, for which the Imperial Government has a right to demand, and does demand, a just and frank reparation. The voluntary withdrawal of the British Consul in Pernambuco, the cause of all these misunderstandings, and who has other past circumstances against him, would be the least that the British Government could do to neutralize the effects of the acts which so deeply afflict the Imperial Government, and excite the resentment of the nation.

Your Excellency will have also an opportunity in this conference to remark to Lord Clarendon, that the proceeding of the British Government is so much the more unjust inasmuch as it has not taken efficacious measures to restrain the fitting out of vessels by the slave-traders in the ports of the United States.

After the conference your Excellency may offer a copy or extract of the present despatch to Lord Clarendon, and you will duly advise this Ministry of everything.

I repeat, &c.

The Earl of Clarendon to Mr. Jerningham.

(Extract.)

Foreign Office, April 28, 1856.

THAT nothing can be further from the intention of Her Majesty's Government than to be either harsh or unjust. They have, on the contrary, taken every occasion, both in Parliament and in official despatches, to render justice to the honourable and humane conduct of the Brazilian Government, and it was therefore with sincere regret that they perceived some evidence of a change in the course of opposition to the Slave Trade which has been pursued in Brazil for nearly three years previous to October 1855, and that unmistakable symptoms of the revival of slave-trading had become apparent.

The want of vigour on the part of the President of Pernambuco, in the affair of the slaves landed at Serinhaem in October last, and the indifference with which that conduct has been viewed by the Imperial Government, indicate a change of policy that must serve as an encouragement to slave-traders; and it was upon this ground that Her Majesty's Government desired to address a timely warning to the Imperial Government.

However grateful Her Majesty's Government may feel to the Brazilian Government for its successful endeavours to extinguish the Slave Trade, however anxious they may be to cultivate the most friendly relations with Brazil, they have yet a duty paramount to all others to perform; and they are determined to spare no exertion, and to use all the means at their command, to prevent the revival of this inhuman Traffic.

Her Majesty's Government will with pain and reluctance resort to measures which they know must be repugnant to Brazil; and they earnestly hope that they may be relieved from the necessity of adopting such a course by the proceedings of the Imperial Government, which possesses now the same power that it has so well exercised for the last few years, to suppress the Slave Trade, and to punish those who engage in it.

The Hon. P. C. Scarlett to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received November 12.)

My Lord,

Rio de Janeiro, September 24, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to report to your Lordship that after the arrival at Rio de Janeiro of the "Paquete de Loanda" from Angola, I received information that on the 4th of August last, two United States' vessels, one a pilot-boat the other a schooner, took on board cargoes of slaves, the first 390, the second 300 to 380.

These cargoes are reported to be the property of João Pedro da Costa Coimbra, and Francisco Riverosa, slave-traders, who were sent out of Brazil by the Imperial Government. They are supposed to have sailed for Cuba.

There is no slave movement at Angola, but at Benguella, under pretext of instructing them, there are, in different depôts, 2,000 slaves, chiefly female.

I am informed that Guilherme, the person who shipped the Africans on board the "Mary E. Smith," and was part owner of that vessel, is building a pilot-boat at Boma, in the River Congo, where he has a quantity of merchandize, and 1,500 slaves in the barracoons.

Also at a small village near Cabinda, 500 slaves are being taught to row in the boats employed in the Slave Trade.

Numerous Slave Trade Agents are said to be at Loango, who trade with the American ships and the Island of St. Thomé, having their slaves in depôts. Among these agents, I understand, many are old Brazilian slave-dealers.

There is no expectation of any attempt to land slaves in this province, which has lately been supplied with cargoes of Ladino and Creole blacks from the northern ports; on account of the high price given here for slave labour. The consequence is, that the want of hands on the sugar and cotton estates in the northern provinces is greater than ever, and this fact will probably lead to further slave-dealing speculations from Africa, unless great vigilance is used by the Brazilian Government to prevent the Traffic.

I am informed by the agent of a London house, that Brazilian sugar and coffee in this market is higher at this moment than in London, and that at the present prices he would, if he exported his coffee to the London market, lose at least 10 per cent. This is, no doubt, the result of the scarcity of hands affecting the price of labour.

The Hon. P. C. Scarlett to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received November 12.)

My Lord,

Rio de Janeiro, October 13, 1856.

WITH reference to your Lordship's despatch to Mr. Jerningham dated August 19, instructing him to bring under the consideration of the Brazilian Government the transfer of Creole slaves from the northern to the southern provinces, with the view of inducing the legislature of this country to put a stop to this domestic traffic, I took the opportunity to-day of speaking to Senhor Paranhos on this subject.

Upon my stating the fear entertained by your Lordship, that when slaves were thus imported in any quantity and sold at Rio de Janeiro, the diminution of so many hands from whence they come, might hold out a temptation to renew the African traffic, as a substitution for those taken away, his Excellency assured me in the most emphatic manner that there was no cause whatever for such a supposition, and he then gave me the following explanation.

He said that the high price of labour and want of hands on the sugar and coffee estates in the southern provinces had occurred precisely at a time when the agricultural affairs of the northern districts had failed to offer the usual advantages to the slave-holders. The northern sugar-planters, said his Excellency, have found themselves lately in embarrassment from being unable to compete with the other sugar-growing countries: many of them were forced in consequence to limit their operations, and were too glad to sell their slaves at high prices to the more flourishing planters of the south.

Senhor Paranhos gave as one reason for the production of sugar being unprofitable in the northern provinces, the discredit in foreign markets which a system of adulteration practised in the warehouses had for some time past brought upon the Brazilian sugar. This, he said, had brought into bad repute the sugar exported to Hamburgh and other European ports from the northern ports of Brazil.

His Excellency then observed that every attention had been paid that humanity could dictate in providing for the wants of the slaves so deported, and that he considered public opinion so strongly pronounced all over Brazil against the African Slave Trade that no attempt would ever be made again to renew it.

Time only will show whether these sanguine expectations will be realized.

My Lord,

Rio de Janeiro, October 13, 1856.

PREVIOUS to the arrival of your Lordship's despatch to Mr. Jerningham dated the 18th August, instructing him to demand the freedom of those slaves who were emancipated by the Mixed Commission at Rio de Janeiro, I had already addressed to Senhor Paranhos a note on this subject.

To this note I have received, as yet, no written reply, but Senhor Paranhos adverted to it to-day in conversation with me.

His Excellency admitted the fact of the retention of these blacks in slavery, and he promised to give a written reply to my note before the November packet sails, which, owing to a press of business, he had been unable to do in time for this packet.

He then said that, as there was a settled determination to abolish slavery in Brazil, I ought not to doubt the sincerity of the Government; and that, although it was not expedient or safe to do so too suddenly, I might rely upon this determination being carried out. It was impossible, he said, with safety, to emancipate many at once, both on their own account and for political reasons, as it would cause too great a sensation among creole slaves; but, as a proof of their good faith, he adverted to the conduct of the society called "Ypiranga," of which his Excellency is a member, and which is protected by the Emperor.

This society, formed in memory of the independence of Brazil, is in the habit of releasing annually a certain number of slaves, making use of its funds for presenting them with their freedom; and on the 7th of September last, at an anniversary meeting, some slaves were publicly and solemnly liberated in the church of the Carmo, in the presence of the Emperor and Empress, after the

The Earl of Clarendon to the Hon. P. C. Scarlett.

Sir,

Foreign Office, November 25, 1856.

I TRANSMIT to you herewith a copy of a despatch from Mr. Cowper, &c.,* respecting the Slave Trade which is carried on coastwise between the northern and southern ports of Brazil, and with reference to the conversation on this subject which you had with the Brazilian Minister for Foreign Affairs, as reported in your despatch of the 13th ultimo, I have to instruct you to appeal to the humanity of the Brazilian Government to take measures for mitigating the horrors of the internal Slave Trade, if it cannot at once be abolished.

Her Majesty's Government wish particularly to draw the attention of the Brazilian Government to that part of Mr. Cowper's despatch which is underlined in the copy inclosed to you, and which strongly sets forth the inhumanity of this Traffic.

You will inform the Brazilian Minister for Foreign Affairs that in the British Act of Parliament which was passed in 1833 for the emancipation of slaves in the British Colonies, provision was made that if, during the period of one year which was to intervene before that measure was fully carried into effect, the services of the apprenticed labourers should be transferred to other places within the Colony, such transfer was not to have the effect of separating those labourers from their wives or husbands, parents or children, or from any person or persons reputed to bear any such relation to them.

And you will suggest to his Excellency that the adoption in Brazil of some humane regulations of this nature would redound greatly to the credit of the Brazilian Government.

The Earl of Clarendon to the Hon. P. C. Scarlett.

Sir,

Foreign Office, November 25, 1856.

IN a despatch which I received by the last mail from Mr. Cowper, &c., he informs me that Colonel Drummond, his son Dr. Antonio Drummond, and Manoel Fidelis, the captors of the Serinhaem slaver, are still in prison; that Colonel João Manoel de Barros, the consignee of that vessel, is still at large; and that the 29 Africans stolen from the slave-vessel whilst she was at anchor in the Serinhaem river are still in captivity, from which there would appear to be little chance now of their being redeemed.

Mr. Cowper further reports that the only step lately taken by the Brazilian authorities in this case, is one in the wrong direction, namely, the committal for trial of Colonel Drummond by the Chief of Police, in the face of the most convincing evidence of his innocence, inasmuch as all the evidence produced was not only not criminatory of Colonel Drummond, but in the highest degree favourable to him; and Mr. Cowper adds that at the date of his despatch Dr. Drummond and Manoel Fidelis had been upwards of eleven months in prison, and Colonel Drummond himself upwards of four months.

On the other hand, the President of the Province and the Chief of Police, the two officers whose duty it was to have provided for the capture of the slave-vessel immediately on her arrival in Brazilian waters, and to have arrested the parties implicated in this nefarious attempt to introduce slaves into Brazil, not only remain unpunished, but one of them is rewarded by promotion.

I have to instruct you to bring the facts above recited to the notice of the Brazilian Government as a complete verification of the view taken by Her Majesty's Government of this case, that the course pursued by the Brazilian authorities in punishing the persons who are innocent, and leaving unpunished those who are guilty, must operate as a direct encouragement to slave-traders.

The Hon. P. C. Scarlett to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received December 9.)

My Lord,

Rio de Janeiro, October 26, 1856.

INFORMATION has been received at this Legation of an intended attempt to land slaves in December next from the coast of Africa, at Sergipe in Brazil, and at certain other places indicated to the north of Bahia, where preparations, I am assured, have been made for their reception.

I embodied the information which had been thus given to me in a note to Senhor Paranhos and in a despatch to Admiral Johnstone, copies of which I inclose; and I herewith transmit also copies of the replies I have received to my communications, by which your Lordship will perceive that measures will be taken both by the Brazilian Government and the Commander-in-chief of Her Majesty's squadron to watch those suspected places, and prevent, if possible, the continuation of the Slave Trade.

Your Lordship will observe that Senhor Paranhos takes occasion, in his note, to deny the truth of a projected attempt to land slaves at Turyassu, mentioned by Mr. Jerningham in his despatch of August 12.

M. le Ministre,

Rio de Janeiro, October 21, 1856.

I HAVE reason to think, from information which has been given to Her Majesty's Legation, that a disembarkation of slaves from the coast of Africa has been effected at Assu or its neighbourhood, in the Province of Bahia.

It is also reported that in December next one or more slave-vessels will attempt a landing on the coast of Brazil in the Province of St. Paul's, as full preparations for their reception are made, particularly at the small islands of Trigo and Das Moças, which, as well as the mouths of the Rivers Una, Bertioga, and San Francisco, should be vigilantly watched.

Large canoes are ready at the above-mentioned islands, from whence slaves can be passed over to the main, and landed in small creeks, during the night, thirty or forty at a time.

No population exists there; and they could be easily marched through the woods into the interior without being seen.

A sailor who arrived at Santos the other day from Oporto reports that a Portuguese schooner had sailed from the last-mentioned port on or about the 24th of August for the coast of Africa.

This vessel was to touch at the Canary Islands, and is destined to return with slaves to Brazil.

* Inclosures 4, 5, and 6 in No. 279.

† A similar despatch, mutatis mutandis, was addressed to Rear-Admiral Johnstone.

She carries a signal at her foretop, red and white, and is sixty-five days out at this date : name unknown.

The same sailor states that the authorities at Oporto had taken away the rudder and sails of another small vessel, for the same purpose and bound to the same places as the first-mentioned schooner.

The destination of these vessels is supposed to be the Ilha do Trigo, near Santos, or Caravellas, a little to the north of the Abrolhos.

It is my duty to inform your Excellency of the reports above mentioned, which have been made to me in order that the Government of His Imperial Majesty may take what measures they may deem necessary for preventing these attempts to renew the Traffic in Slaves.

"Indefatigable," Rio de Janeiro, October 22, 1856

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Excellency's letter of yesterday's date, respecting the report that a disembarkment of slaves from the coast of Africa has been effected at Assu or its neighbourhood, in the Province of Bahia; and likewise informing me that it is also reported that in December next one or more slave-vessels will attempt a landing on the coast of Brazil, in the Province of St. Paul's.

In reply I beg to assure your Excellency that every means at my command will be used to frustrate any such attempts, and I have this forenoon sent the "Syren" to the Islands of Porcos and St. Sebastian, to try and obtain further information as to the report relative to the probability of a landing at the Province of St. Paul's; and I shall dispatch the "Spy" to Bahia on the 24th instant to communicate with Her Majesty's Consul at that port, with orders to her Commander to touch on his return at different places on the coast between Bahia and this port, according to the information he may obtain with respect to the reported landing in that province.

Senhor Paranhos to the Hon. P. C. Scarlett.

(Translation.)

Rio de Janeiro, October 22, 1856.

I ACKNOWLEDGE the receipt of the note dated yesterday, which Mr. Peter Campbell Scarlett, &c., addressed to me.

In this note Mr. Scarlett informs me that he has received information which induces him to believe that a disembarkation of slaves from the coast of Africa will be effected at Assu, or in its neighbourhood, in the Province of Bahia, and makes mention of a rumour that in December next one or more slavers will attempt to do the same on the coast of the Province of St. Paul's.

He adds that great preparations were being made for the reception of slaves at different points on the southern coast, and principally in the small islands of Trigo and Das Moças, which it would be expedient to keep a watch over, as likewise over the mouths of the Rivers Una, Bertioga, and San Francisco:

That there are large canoes in those islands which can convey from thence as many as thirty or forty slaves to small ports at a time, and easily send them inland without being perceived:

That a sailor recently arrived at Santos from Oporto, states that a Portuguese schooner had sailed from thence on the 26th of August, or thereabouts, for the coast of Africa, was to touch at the Canary Islands, and that her destination was that of Brazil, with slaves:

That the said schooner carries, as a signal, a red and white flag at the head of her main-mast, and is now fifty-five days out on her voyage, but that her name is not known:

That the destination of this and other vessels is supposed to be the Island of Trigo, near Santos, or Caravellas, a little to the north of the Abruolos.

In answer I have the honour to state to Mr. Scarlett that I hastened to bring his note to the knowledge of the Minister of Justice, requesting his Excellency to take into consideration the communications of which it treats, and to inform me of the result of his investigations.

Meanwhile, I must avail myself of this occasion to observe to Mr. Scarlett, that Mr. Jerningham having on the 21st of June of the present year made an identical communication of the disembarkation of 180 slaves in Guaratuba, and of preparations being made in the Ilha das Moças, near Ilha Grande, for the same purpose; and in a letter of the 27th of July, of an attempted disembarkation at Turyassu, the Imperial Government immediately ordered the most minute investigations to be instituted, and from the result of these it was ascertained that the information given to Her Britannic Majesty's Legation was entirely groundless.

With reference, therefore, to the information which Mr. Scarlett was pleased to bring to my knowledge, I call his attention to the letter which on the 26th of August I addressed to Mr. Jerningham in reply to the above-mentioned communication.

I HAVE received information that a landing of slaves from Africa is contemplated this month on the coast of Brazil north of Rio de Janeiro, between the Juparatuba river and Alagoas.

I have therefore communicated to Senhor Paranhos in a note, the copy of which I inclose, the particulars which have come to my knowledge on this subject; and I have also addressed to Rear-Admiral Hope Johnstone a similar note.

Your Lordship will observe also that I have requested Senhor Paranhos to take measures for arresting a notorious slave-trader named Pareto, banished from this country on account of having been unlawfully engaged in that Traffic, but who, I am informed, seeks a pretext for returning here again; his real object being to assist in the slave transaction above alluded to in my communication to the Brazilian Minister for Foreign Affairs.

M. le Ministre,

FROM information lately received from Africa it seems probable that a person named Cavalcanti Bandeira, a native of the Province of Alagoas, may soon attempt to land Africans in Brazil.

His vessel, which is capable of carrying 300 blacks, may be expected off the coast of Brazil after the 20th of the present month, and till the end of the next.

The landing will probably take place near the mouth of the Juparatuba river, twenty miles to the south of the River St. Francisco, in the Province of Sergipe.

Another person, named Botelho, is engaged in this affair as the partner of Cavalcanti.

In a short time I hope to be able to forward to your Excellency further particulars respecting the rig and appearance of this vessel, and the exact date of her departure from Africa.

I have the honour also to inform your Excellency that an Italian named Pareto, who was banished from Brazil on account of his participation in Slave Trade ventures, and who has been residing, since his expulsion, in Africa, is making preparations to return to Brazil. His desire to return at this moment is most suspicious, and leaves no doubt in my mind that he is connected with the speculations of Cavalcanti and Botelho. I cannot doubt that your Excellency will take immediate steps for his arrest or expulsion should he appear in Brazil.

MR. VINES, Her Majesty's Consul at Pará, has transmitted to me a copy of the despatch which he addressed to Mr. Jerningham on the 17th of October, explaining the state of a case which has been pending before the Judge of Orphans at Pará respecting the children and property of a British subject named Alexander Dickson, and respecting 3 slaves who belonged to Mr. Dickson's deceased wife.

You will have learnt, from Mr. Vines' despatch, that he has referred this case to a Brazilian advocate, who has stated it to be his opinion that Mr. Dickson has been unjustly and illegally treated, inasmuch as the Decree issued, on the 4th of June, 1855, by the late Acting Judge of Orphans at Pará, ordering Mr. Dickson to deliver up to his wife's father his two children, and the said slaves along with them, was contrary to the law of Brazil.

You will therefore state to the Brazilian Minister for Foreign Affairs that Her Majesty's Government trust that the Government of Brazil will see justice done to Mr. Dickson in this affair without further delay, and that they will direct the authorities of Pará to restore to that gentleman the guardianship of his children, and the exercise of such rights with regard to his slaves as may enable him to carry into effect his intention to secure their manumission.

Rio de Janeiro, November 14, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of the note which Mr. P. Campbell Scarlett, &c., addressed to me on the 11th instant, communicating the information received by him that an individual named Cavalcanti Bandeira, a native of the Province of Alagoas, intends to effect a disembarkation of Africans, from the 20th of the present month to the end of next December, at the mouth of the River Juparatuba, twenty miles to the south of the River São Francisco, in the Province of Sergipe or Alagoas, and that another individual of the name of Botelho is a partner of the said Cavalcanti.

In the same note Mr. Scarlett states that an Italian named Pareto, who was sent out of this Empire for having been concerned in the Slave Trade, and who since then has been residing in Africa, is disposed to return to Brazil, which at the present moment causes much suspicion, and the more so as Mr. Scarlett does not doubt that this individual is concerned in the speculations of Cavalcanti and Botelho.

Mr. Scarlett manifests the hope that the Imperial Government will take the necessary measures against that individual, in the case of his appearing in Brazil.

In thanking Mr. Scarlett for the communication addressed to me in his said note, I hasten to state to him, in reply, that I immediately transmitted it to the Minister of Justice, who had been forewarned of the information given to me at our interview on the 7th instant, respecting the delation of an early attempt to disembark Africans on the coast of the Province of Sergipe and Alagoas, and had immediately sent orders to the Presidents of those provinces, as well as to those of Pernambuco and Bahia, in order that they, by every means in their power, may prevent the perpetration of that crime.

My Lord,

Rio de Janeiro, November 15, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to your Lordship copy of a correspondence I have had with Mr. Vines at Pará, relating to a law-suit still pending concerning the interests of Mr. Dickson, a case about which Mr. Vines has already been in communication with your Lordship.

I have, &amp;c.

(Signed) P. CAMPBELL SCARLETT.

Inclosure 1 in No. 196.

Consul Vines to Mr. Jerningham.

Pará, October 17, 1856.

I HAVE had a tedious case in hand respecting the children and property of a British subject, named Alexander Dickson, who has been for sixteen years resident in this province, who married into a family of position here (that of Colonel Lourenço Loucidora da Motta), and who lost his wife about two years and a-half ago. Mr. Dickson had two children left him by his wife, and these children with himself, inherited the property of his deceased wife.

The property in question consisted of a landed estate in this province, and of three slave-children called Jacinto, Ildefonso, and Lazaro.

According to Brazilian law, the slaves, forming part of the personality, should have been apportioned to Mr. Dickson, and the lands to his children.

But in compliance with a petition addressed to the Judge of Orphans, for the time being, by Colonel da Motta, above named, the functionary in question reversed the regular course of law, and apportioned the slaves to the children, and the lands to Mr. Dickson, and also removed the children from the control and guardianship of Mr. Dickson, so as thereby to secure to Colonel da Motta the services of the slaves, together with the custody of his grandchildren. Accordingly in the month of May 1855, Mr. Dickson appealed to me to protect him against this resolution of the Judge of Orphans as arbitrary and illegal.

I, however, felt much difficulty in the matter on account of his share of the property consisting of slaves; and I explained that I could not interfere except upon the understanding that the slaves should be manumitted.

In order to facilitate such a consummation, I agreed to give Mr. Dickson the sum of 100*l.* as an equivalent for the enfranchisement of the slaves, as they severally should attain the age of twenty-one years, reserving, however, the condition that this arrangement should be wholly dependent on the determination of the Earl of Clarendon thereupon.

I communicated with his Lordship and received his Lordship's reply, to the effect that the arrangement in question could not with propriety be carried out, and instructing me to give up possession of the slaves.

The slaves, together with Mr. Dickson's children, were then seized by Colonel da Motta.

Mr. Dickson now commenced a law-suit to be reinstated in the guardianship of his children, and to be enabled to recover possession of the slaves; and after various proceedings in that behalf, he came to me and complained that he could obtain no justice, offering to secure the manumission of the slaves as they should respectively attain the age of twenty-one years, without consideration, provided that I would interfere.

I accordingly wrote to the Earl of Clarendon under the date of the 29th of April last (1856), a despatch explaining to his Lordship that I believed the freedom of the slaves in question might be secured if Her Majesty's Government would interfere to procure justice for Mr. Dickson, by insisting on the lands being apportioned to the children, and the slaves to the father, and that Mr. Dickson should be reinstated as guardian of the said children.

To this despatch I received, in reply from his Lordship, the despatch under date of 8th of July last, and from which I inferred that if it could be clearly shown that justice had been denied to Mr. Dickson, his Lordship would interfere with a view to securing the manumission of the slaves Jacinto, Ildefonço, and Lazaro, upon their respectively attaining the age of twenty-one years.

Before I received this reply, the proceedings in the Court of Orphans had terminated by formally depriving Mr. Dickson of the guardianship of his children, apportioning the slaves to the latter.

Mr. Dickson had also applied to the President of the Province, General de Beurepaire Rohan, to do him justice, and had been assured by his Excellency that the matter should be properly investigated, and that justice should be done. During the succeeding two months, also, Mr. Dickson had had two interviews with the President, the whole case had been fully explained to his Excellency, and Mr. Dickson had made repeated applications for a reply, and for copies of all the documents relating to the matter, but without effect.

About this time, and during an interview with the President of the Province on other business, I cursorily alluded to Mr. Dickson's case, telling his Excellency that I did not feel authorized to speak officially on the subject, but that Mr. Dickson had complained to me of vexatious delays, and that I should feel obliged to his Excellency if he would arrive at some determination on the case. To this his Excellency replied, that he had resolved not to interfere, because he had heard that Mr. Dickson was an habitual drunkard. Upon my reporting this reason privately to Mr. Dickson, he obtained a certificate signed by sixty of the most respectable foreign and native merchants, and by all the Consuls in the city, affirming that for the last fourteen years he had borne a most exemplary character, being sober and industrious in his habits. In fact, I found that the charge of drunkenness made against him was calumnious and maliciously untrue.

At this juncture I received the Earl of Clarendon's last-mentioned despatch, and feeling, that in point of fact, there was prima facie ground for believing that justice had been denied to Mr. Dickson, I addressed myself formally to the President, in a despatch bearing date the 8th of September last, copy of which I have the honour to inclose, inclosing the above-named certificate of character, and requesting to be supplied with the copies of the papers relating to Mr. Dickson's case. I then consulted Dr. Paes de Souza on the legality of the proceedings before-mentioned, and as to whether, in his opinion, justice had been denied to Mr. Dickson.

To this Dr. Paes, after carefully perusing all the records relating to this matter at the Court of Orphans, replied that there was no doubt but that Mr. Dickson had been, throughout, unjustly and illegally treated, and moreover that the Judge of Orphans, Dr. M. Francisco Duarte, had repudiated all prior proceedings as wholly informal, and had promised to reinstate Mr. Dickson in the guardianship of his children, and to apportion the lands to the said children, and the slaves to Mr. Dickson, as the law required; adding, that all prior proceedings had been the acts of former judges of the Court of Orphans who had only held the office ad interim, and who were not lawyers.

Dr. Paes also assured me that there would be no further difficulty or delay in this matter, because the above-named Judge of Orphans had incurred very serious penalties by not reversing the illegal decision referred to.

Believing that this opinion, and these official admissions, brought the case completely within the condition reserved in the Earl of Clarendon's despatch as above mentioned, I at once got Mr. Dickson to execute a deed of enfranchisement drawn up by Dr. Paes, and by virtue of which the slaves in question will become de facto free as they respectively attain the age of twenty-one years, and in addressing the Earl of Clarendon further on this subject, in a despatch bearing date the 29th ultimo, I had the honour of forwarding a copy of this deed to his Lordship.

Since that time more than a month has elapsed, and notwithstanding the declaration of the Judge of Orphans above referred to, Mr. Dickson is put off from day to day, on all sorts of frivolous pretexts: first the Judge of Orphans is engaged on some other business; then the Escrivão is engaged, and so on.

Vexed by having such reports daily brought to me, I addressed myself to the President, in a despatch bearing date the 10th of the present month, of which I have the honour to inclose extract, in which I requested his Excellency to bring about some prompt decision. His Excellency favoured me with a despatch in part reply, bearing date the 13th of this month, but in which he did not allude to Mr. Dickson's case at all.

I have not thought it necessary to address the Earl of Clarendon further on the subject, as, being clear from all doubtful points, I save time by submitting it to you directly.

I regret, however, that I cannot forward you copies of the documents which relate to this case, and which are amongst the archives of the Court of Orphans, as I have vainly applied for them both to the Judge of Orphans and to the President, and as Dr. Paes has been equally unsuccessful, and declares himself in despair in the matter. It is somewhat important that I should obtain copies of all those documents, because I am cognisant of their proper tenor, and it is necessary, for the ends of justice, that I should know whether or not they have been tampered with.

But if the Imperial Government should send a peremptory order to the local authorities to do full and immediate justice to Mr. Dickson's above-mentioned claims, so as to secure Mr. Dickson's rights of guardianship, and his possession of slaves, whereby he may carry out the provisions of his deed of enfranchisement, there will be an end of the matter.

Inclosure 2 in No. 196.

Consul Vines to the President of the Province of Pará.

Most Excellent Sir,

Pará, September 8, 1856.

HAVING received by the last mail-steamer a despatch, under date of the 8th of July, 1856, addressed to me by the Earl of Clarendon, Her Britannic Majesty's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, upon the subject-matter of Mr. Alexander Dickson's complaint that justice had been denied him by the Judge of Orphans of this city, the circumstances of which your Excellency has already been made acquainted with, it becomes my duty to solicit, on behalf of Her Majesty's Government, and for the express purpose of forwarding to the Earl of Clarendon, copies of all the documents relating to this case, which are lying in the archives of the Court of the Judge of Orphans at Pará, beginning from April 1854, which I am informed was the month in which the inventory of Mr. Dickson's property was filed in that Court, up to the present date, including the proceedings which have taken place before Senhor Maximiano Francisco Duarte, the Judge of that Court, by virtue of which Mr. Alexander Dickson, a British subject, has been deprived of his children and his property. I beg leave to call your Excellency's attention to the inclosed copy of certificates of character which the above-named Mr. Dickson has maintained during the sixteen years he has been residing in this city. It is signed by sixty persons, including the most respectable Brazilian merchants, as well as British, French, United States, German, and Portuguese merchants, and several Consuls, besides my own Consular certificate of his character; and your Excellency will see how completely these certificates of character refute the allegation which your Excellency informed me had been made to you, that Mr. Dickson was an habitual drunkard, which was the reason of your Excellency's refusing to interfere to have his children and property restored to him; but as Mr. Dickson's cause of complaint that justice has been denied him, is so shortly to form a subject of discussion between the Governments of Her Britannic Majesty and of His Imperial Majesty of Brazil, I feel that I am relieved from the necessity of expressing any opinion upon the judicial treatment which Mr. Dickson has received from the authorities which have adjudicated in this case, or from soliciting from your Excellency any other favour than that you will instruct the Judge of Orphans to furnish me, at his earliest convenience, with complete copies of all the documents which are contained in the archives of this Court, having reference to Mr. Dickson's case.

I have, &c.

Inclosure 3 in No. 196.

Consul Vines to the President of the Province of Pará.

(Extract.)

Pará, October 10, 1856.

I NOW proceed to the second case above referred to, namely, that of Mr. Alexander Dickson, in which also I am obliged to complain that the Judge of Orphans has failed to do his duty.

On the 8th ultimo I addressed a despatch to your Excellency, in obedience to instructions received from the Earl of Clarendon, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, in which I requested to be supplied with copies of all the proceedings relating to Mr. Dickson's case, in order that Her Majesty's Government might be able to examine into Mr. Dickson's complaint that justice had been denied him in the Court of Orphans.

I was induced not to press your Excellency for a reply to that despatch, both because I knew that your Excellency was overwhelmed with important matters for consideration, and because the Judge of Orphans had voluntarily assured me that he would not sustain the illegal acts of his predecessors in office; that he had, in fact, issued an order for the delivery to Mr. Dickson of his children and property, and that this order was in the hands of the "Escrivão," who was to carry it into execution on the following day.

This happened on the 26th ultimo. Since then the execution of the order has been delayed from day to day on all kinds of unintelligible and frivolous pretexts, until at last I am informed that tardy justice is again deferred in deference to some petition presented by Colonel da Motta, Mr. Dickson's father-in-law.

Inasmuch as the Judge of Orphans has admitted that the acts of his predecessors in office in this matter are wholly illegal, and has further confirmed this admission by the order above mentioned, I feel no delicacy in demanding the execution of the order in question at your Excellency's peremptory instance.

Moreover, I must still urge your Excellency to give such instructions in the proper quarters that I may receive copies of all the proceedings in reference to this case, as before mentioned; because, in the event of my being driven to the unpleasant alternative of "protesting" in the matter of the Hesketh Estate, the documents relating to Mr. Dickson's case will serve to give Her Majesty's Government an insight into the proceedings of the Court of Orphans.

My Lord,

Rio de Janeiro, December 4, 1856.

WITH reference to Mr. Jerningham's despatch dated October 13, 1853, to Mr. Howard's, dated May 1, 1855, and to subsequent correspondence on the subject of the 3 slaves, the property of the late Mr. John Craven, who were declared free by the Judge of a Tribunal of First Instance, but whose detention as slaves was protracted after an appeal to a superior Court at Rio de Janeiro, on the plea that the authorities who became curators of the property of the deceased had not paid certain costs and fees, I am now informed by the Brazilian Minister for Foreign Affairs (a copy of whose note to me on this matter I inclose) that the Court of Appeal of this city has recently confirmed the sentence which declared the freedom of Maria Angola and her children.

In any other country but in Brazil, that such inexcusable delay should have been interposed until now to deprive these poor people of their liberty, would be thought impossible, considering that Mr. Craven granted them their freedom at Marianna, in the Province of Minas Geraes, at the commencement of the year 1853.

As I have no means of ascertaining here whether the slaves in question have received the benefit at last accorded to them by the laws of the country, I have desired Mr. Morgan, the translator to Her Majesty's Legation, to write to a friend of his at Marianna, to learn whether they are actually free.

WITH reference to my despatch of October 26, relating to a reported landing of African slaves in the Province of Bahia, of which I had heard, and of which I, in consequence, informed the Minister for Foreign Affairs, as well as Admiral Johnstone, I have the honour now to inclose copy of a note from Senhor Paranhos containing an assurance that, after due inquiry, no such landing has yet occurred in the Province of Bahia as was reported to me.

IN conformity with the communication which I had the honour to address to Mr. P. Campbell Scarlett, &c., I brought his note of the 21st of October last to the knowledge of the Minister of Justice, and which, amongst other news, treats of a disembarkation of Africans which, it was said, had taken place at Assu, or in its neighbourhood, in the Province of Bahia.

I am now informed by that Ministry, that a communication has been received from the President of Bahia, containing the assurance that no such disembarkation has been effected at Assu. The said President grounds his asseveration upon the reports of the local authorities, and of the commander of the yacht of war "Montserrate."

In bringing this information to the knowledge of Mr. Scarlett, I avail, &c.

I HAVE received a despatch from Mr. Cowper at Pernambuco, informing me that the Court called the "Relação," which sat in judgment on all those persons who were accused before it of having a hand in the landing and theft of African slaves at Serinhaem, has absolved the parties so accused, including those who are known to be guilty, and those who are considered by Mr. Cowper as innocent of the charges which were made against them.

This iniquitous decision, according to Mr. Cowper, has been arrived at by an equal division of the votes of the six Judges who tried the case, the parties being then by law entitled to an acquittal on account of the doubt.

Against this decision the Promotor Publico, or Attorney-General of Pernambuco, appealed to the Superior Tribunal of Rio de Janeiro; but I am informed that Brazilian law does not admit of any appeal under such circumstances, and those who were accused stand for ever absolved.

The Minister of Justice, however, Senhor Nabuco, in consideration of a strong opinion he entertains of the injustice of the decision, and of the bad effect it will have in setting at liberty those who are believed by the Brazilian Government to be guilty, has determined to dismiss from their offices all the judges who were engaged in the cause; and as this act is an arbitrary one, he means to appeal to the Chamber in the ensuing session for a justification of his own conduct.

I HAVE received information that a Portuguese vessel (name unknown), of about 380 tons, sailed from the port of Santos on the 29th ultimo in ballast, having cleared out for Pernambuco.

From the circumstance of this vessel having kept on board thirty-seven extra water-casks, it is suspected that she is bound on a slaving voyage to the coast of Africa, and may not in such case call at Pernambuco; but if she should arrive there, I have to instruct you to watch her movements, and, if you should collect sufficient information to lead you to conclude that the suspicion is well founded, that you will concert measures with the Brazilian authorities for the purpose of frustrating her evil intentions.

With regard to the first part of your Lordship's despatch about the Serinhaem affair, I have already informed your Lordship, in my despatch of the 11th instant,* that all the parties accused, including Colonel Drummond, have been acquitted by the tribunal before which they were arraigned.

at learning that the Brazilian Government have viewed this acquittal with displeasure, and it appears to Her Majesty's Government that the determination of Senhor Nabuco to dismiss the Judges is an evidence of his sincerity in this matter.

I have received from Consul Cowper a despatch suggesting that Her Majesty's Government should propose to the Brazilian Government to sanction the appointment of a Mixed Commission, to sit in Pernambuco, in order to investigate the conduct of the late President of that province, and the truth of Mr. Cowper's statements with regard to the Serinhaem affair; and Mr. Cowper states that he will be ready to abide the result of the proposed inquiry.

I have to instruct you to make such a proposal to the Brazilian Minister for Foreign Affairs, in answer to the charges made by the Imperial Government against Mr. Cowper, and as a proof that Her Majesty's Government are desirous that his conduct, which they think honourable and praiseworthy, should be investigated.

The Hon. P. C. Scarlett to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received February 14.)

(Extract.)

Rio de Janeiro, January 11, 1857.

SENHOR PARANHOS alluded, yesterday, in conversation, to information given by the Brazilian Consul at Brussels last year to Her Majesty's Government, of the intention of some French mercantile firm to carry on the Slave Trade with Brazil from the coast of Africa, by engaging negroes on the coast to enter their ships as sailors, and to register them as such in order to facilitate their landing in a Brazilian port, where they might then be left without exciting any suspicion.

Whether this French firm had any serious intention of violating the Treaty engagements with other Powers and infringing Brazilian law, which forbids the landing of blacks in Brazil who are not natives of this country, does not appear; but the fact of a French vessel called the "Jeune Elise" having lately anchored at Bahia from the coast of Africa with four blacks on board, registered sailors, seems to have excited the suspicions of the Brazilian authorities.

In consequence they exacted from the captain of the vessel, Senhor Paranhos informed me, a sum of money, by way of precaution, as a guarantee against their escape into the country.

Against this measure the French Consul appealed, and M. de St. Georges has since received instructions from Paris to demand peremptorily the repayment of the money, and a promise that a similar vexation to French commerce should never be renewed under the same pretext.

I have conversed on this subject with my French colleague, who assures me he believes that the parties connected with the vessel in question have had no sinister views about Slave Trade, and that the English Consul at the African port at which they were embarked, there being no other, gave the captain a certificate of their freedom before they were taken on board as sailors.

The Hon P. C. Scarlett to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received February 14.)

My Lord,

Rio de Janeiro, January 12, 1857.

ON receiving your Lordship's despatch of November 25, inclosing the copy of a despatch from Mr. Cowper, Her Majesty's Consul at Pernambuco, relating to the Slave Trade of native Brazilian blacks carried on coastwise between the northern and southern ports of the Empire, I took an early occasion to submit to Senhor Paranhos the contents of that despatch, and especially that part of Mr. Cowper's despatch underlined, wherein he describes the horrors of that Trade.

In reply to the observations I had to make on the subject, his Excellency assured me that the Brazilian Government would endeavour to mitigate as much as possible the evils by which this system of separating families was attended; and, to show that although this Traffic is permitted by law, it did not meet with his approbation or sympathy, he said that very recently he had caused a Brazilian naval officer, commanding a ship of war, to be dismissed from the service for taking slaves on board his vessel in a northern port to bring them to Rio de Janeiro; and, to indicate the opinion of the Imperial Government, the circumstances of the case had been officially mentioned in a newspaper.

As long, however, as this Traffic in Slaves is tolerated by law, and until the Legislature has resolved to put an end to this system altogether, I fear there is little chance of seriously ameliorating the condition of these unfortunate people.

Rio de Janeiro, January 12, 1857.

AT my interview with Senhor Paranhos yesterday I communicated to him the contents of your Lordship's despatch of November 25, with reference to the imprisonment of Colonel Drummond, his son Dr. Antonio Drummond, and Manoel Fidelis, the captors of the Serinhaem slaver, whilst other parties, considered by Mr. Cowper as the real culprits, were at large.

Your Lordship is now aware that the Relação of Pernambuco acquitted all the accused, including Colonel Drummond, and that the Government here instantly dismissed the Judges of that Court on account of their decision.

I regret to say, however, that, although the tribunal above mentioned appears to have confounded both guilty and innocent in one acquittal, Mr. Cowper writes to me that Colonel Drummond, of whose innocence he has never entertained a doubt in his correspondence, appears, since that decision, to have been condemned by the Juiz de Direito of Rio Formoso for doing too little in the Serinhaem affair, and is to be fined to the amount of one-quarter of his income.

As this information from Mr. Cowper is not official, I am in the hope that he may have been erroneously informed.

Senhor Paranhos, to whom I mentioned this report, did not deny the truth of it, but appeared to be ignorant of the details.

One of the vessels in question, a small schooner called the "Sophia," took in a cargo of slaves at Ponta de l'Este, on the coast of Africa.

YESTERDAY came to hand your esteemed favour of the 4th of this month, in which you tell me that in Cunha's boat goes eighty-eight bales on our account. I shall be glad that they arrive safe and we may be lucky. In consequence of news which came from Rio I know that from that place is going to begin some adventure. The "lamenting" Bernardino ought to arrive here shortly in the brig "Progresso," and he comes to arrange shipments. The partner of the dead José Fortunato da Cunha says that for this vessel he is going to send some "pontos" (blacks); seeing this, I have thought that as soon as you receive this, you should buy a patacho or palhabote of the size of 400 bales, which should be a good sailer; although she should be old it is the same,—making one voyage is enough; and after having bought her, fit her out complete, except beef, for here fish can be got. You know well that the voyages to Rio seldom average more than 30 days, or less; with 45 pipes of water to 50 can be loaded 400 to 450 bales; by this you will calculate the requisites for 400 to 450. It is not requisite to recommend you to make a good purchase, for you well know what you have to do. The vessel in Baltimore will be cheaper; the ship will come with the American flag and will here repair if necessary.

It would be well that you obtain Miller, for you know he is very lucky and acquainted with Brazil. I thought of this, for I expect we shall do a very good business; what balance remains to us of our bales, you can send to me by way of Salem or New York to Ambriz, to the care of Junqueira to buy us people on our account; you will come in the vessel and will go in her to Brazil. I hope to receive a sure notice of the day of your arrival in order to have the cargo ready, correspondence, &c.

In New York everything is dearer; and I apprehend it is more difficult to fit out vessels. However, with all secrecy, you will see what is best to be done. No more at present.

I wish you perfect health, and am, &c.

(Signed) GME. JOSE DA SA. CORREA.

P.S.—This goes to the care of Messrs. J. M. and Co., and if these gentlemen wish to take a share in the vessel, you can give it them, and understand with them for the same, for in this sense I write to them.

No. 220.

Consul Morgan to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 16.)

My Lord,

Bahia, April 6, 1856.

IN my despatch of the 8th ultimo, I had the honour to transmit to your Lordship, copies of two documents found on board of the American slaver "Mary E. Smith."

I have now the honour to inclose herewith, translated copy of the American register of that schooner. It cannot be in the exact wording of the original, as I only received it in the Portuguese language, into which it had been translated. All the original documents were sent to the Minister of Justice at Rio de Janeiro, on the capture taking place.

I likewise inclose translation of the sentence passed by the Auditor of Marine, declaring the said "Mary E. Smith" a good prize to the Imperial cruizer "Olinda," and as freemen all the Bozal Africans found on board.

The master of the slaver, Cranowitch, died on the 26th ultimo in the hospital, from a disease contracted on the passage from the coast of Africa. With regard to the criminal process instituted against the remainder of the crew and the two passengers, the Chief of Police has acquainted me that the sentence has been purposely delayed by him, in order to obtain further confessions from the latter as to who are their accomplices in Rio de Janeiro. He states he is in possession of some facts compromising certain individuals residing in that capital, who would be little suspected of associating in these nefarious transactions, but, as yet, has not sufficient evidence to convict them.

I am happy in being able to bear testimony to the desire and zeal displayed by his Excellency the President, Senhor Moncorvo e Lima, and the Chief of Police, Senhor Francisco Liberato de Mattos, to frustrate any attempt to revive this infamous Traffic in this province.

I have, &amp;c.

[Temporary, No. 275. Seal of office.]

IN virtue of an Act of Congress of the United States of America, entitled an "Act relating to the Registry and Entry of Ships or Vessels," Vincent D. Cranowitch, of Dennisonville, State of Louisiana, having sworn to and signed an oath prescribed by the said Act, and having sworn that he is the sole proprietor of the ship or vessel called the "Mary E. Smith" of New Orleans, of which Vincent D. Cranowitch is actually master, and citizen of the United States, as sworn by him, and that the said ship or vessel was built at Essex, in the State of Massachusetts, in 1853, in conformity with the Register No. 160, entered in the books of this Department on the 15th of April, 1854, now by these cancelled, having changed owners and district. And the said register certifying that the said ship or vessel has one deck and two masts; that her length is 70 feet 6 inches, her breadth, 22 feet 4 inches, her depth of hold 8 feet 3 inches, and her tonnage  $122\frac{9}{5}$  tons; that she is a schooner with square poop, and her bows of wood. And the said Vincent D. Cranowitch approves the description and measurement aforesaid, and a sufficient bond having been furnished in the terms of the aforesaid Act, the said schooner was duly registered at the port of Boston. Given under our hands and seal of office at the port of Boston, this 23rd day of August, 1855.

Sentence in the case of the "Mary E. Smith."

(Translation.)

AT sight of the documents, &c., proving by the official informations at folios 5 to 8, from the informations and interrogations folios 9 to 18, folios 24 to 44, and 252, witnesses folios 46, &c., that the schooner "Mary E. Smith" was captured on the 20th January last at half-past 5 in the afternoon, being at anchor off the bar of St. Matthew's, Province of Espirito Santo, two miles distant from land, with Africans on board to the number of 384; it being further proved, from some of the interrogatories and note found attached to document at folio 142, on examination of log-book at folio 229, that the aforesaid schooner was positively bound for that province; and finally it being verified by said interrogatories and opinions of competent arbitrators at folio 223, that notwithstanding two of said captured Africans spoke the Portuguese language, and some few understand one word or another of that language by reason of having on the coast of Africa had communications with individuals of that nation, the greater part of the other Africans found on board ignore that language entirely, and are consequently all Bozal negroes, and had come for the first time to Brazil imported against the dispositions of the Law of the 7th November, 1831; in conformity with the Law No. 581 of 4th September, 1850, and the Regulation No. 78 of 4th October of same year, I condemn the schooner "Mary E. Smith" as a good prize, with all its accessories mentioned in the inventory after folios 7 to 9, and determine that after valuation and put up at auction the proceeds be placed in the public coffers to be, with the premium marked in Article 5 of the above-mentioned Law of 4th September, deducted the percentage treated on by the Decree No. 731 of the 14th November, 1850, divided in accordance with Article 5 of the Alvará of 7th December, 1796, between the Commander and crew of the brig of war "Olinda," who are entitled to the above premium in its totality, for the seizure of those Africans. I also judge the said Africans free men, who are to remain at the disposal of Government, with their tickets of liberty, which are to be passed, but not delivered until this sentence is confirmed by the Council of State, to whose decision I appeal. The latter part of Article 6 of the Regulation No. 708 of the 14th October, 1850, was faithfully fulfilled relative to the christening of the Africans. The scrivener will note the names of the Africans who have died, as mentioned in the muster-roll, and described at the margin at folio 230. Let the required intimations be made, and I mark the period of eight days for the extraction and copies of this process in order to its being transmitted to the Council of State, through the medium of the Secretary's Department of the Presidency, from which it will recover a receipt, and will join it to the copy. The steps taken and terms of this process are open for inspection: from them it will be seen that, besides the criminal process resulting from the same fact or apprehension, and from the commencement of these labours as seen at folio 223, some time elapsed; the capturer, the brig of war, on board of which were placed the captain, crew, and passengers of the schooner, arriving several days after the prize; and if some delay took place in the ultimatum of this process it appears justifiable.

Bahia, April 7, 1856.

I CONSIDER it proper to acquaint you that I have communicated to Her Majesty's Legation at Rio de Janeiro, that information has reached me of some intended speculations from the coast of Africa to disembark Africans on the southern shores of this province.

These ventures are, I am sorry to say, undertaken by petty shopkeepers, who, clubbing together, have been incited by the high prices of slaves at present.

No fear is entertained of any attempt on the northern coast of this province, or Sergipe, where no good ports or points exist for such infamous transactions; but I am of opinion that a good look-out should be had on all the small ports and rivers south of Ilheos to Caravellas, being the more convinced of the necessity of such a step, as the slave-dealers stand much more in awe of the British than of the Brazilian cruisers.

I do not mean to say there is any want of activity or goodwill on the part of the officers of the latter; but my information leads me to believe the slave-dealers conceive they are more likely to be evaded than those under the British flag.

My Lord,

Bahia, April 18, 1856.

THE Chief of Police has just sent me a certified copy of another letter found amongst the papers of the passenger João José Vianna from on board the captured slaver "Mary E. Smith."

It refers to the one written by Guilherme José da Silva Correa, transmitted to your Lordship in my despatch of the 8th ultimo.

I apprehend that the first part relates to some transaction to the coast of Brazil, but the latter part evidently has connection with the cargo shipped on board the Spanish vessel "Dolores," manifest of which was likewise forwarded to your Lordship.

Consul Morgan to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 16.)

My Lord,

Bahia, April 19, 1856.

WHEN I wrote to your Lordship in my despatch of the 6th instant, stating that the Chief of Police had formed suspicions of several persons residing at Rio de Janeiro, as being implicated in the slaver "Mary E. Smith," I little thought so much had already been done towards bringing some of those individuals to justice.

On the arrival of the "Avon" this morning, I received a private letter from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires, requesting to know whether the Commandeur Bernardino Ferreira de Faria had been sent up to this city to answer in the criminal process instituted against the passengers and crew of that slaver.

On inquiry of the Secretary of Police, I found every desire to satisfy my wishes, and was informed that not only had Senhor Liberato de Mattos requested, some time ago, of the Government at Rio de Janeiro the imprisonment of that individual, but that yesterday's steamer took down the order for his immediate removal to this city; and furthermore, from the confession of the two passengers of the "Mary E. Smith," the said Commandeur has been sentenced by the said Chief of Police as having incurred the penalty marked out in the Law of the 7th of November, 1831, Article 2, as also in Article 179 of the Criminal Code.

It is extremely satisfactory to me thus to prove the zeal of the distinguished President of this province, who is so ably seconded by the Chief of Police, to put down this nefarious Traffic in this part of the Empire.

Inclosure in No. 228.

Certificate of the Sentence in the case of the "Mary E. Smith."

Translation.)

I, LADISLAU PEREIRA PINTO, Knight of the Imperial Order of the Rose, Registrar of the Board of Trade of this city of Bahia, and of the Court of Audit of Marine in this Province, by His Imperial Majesty Don Pedro II, certify to all whom these presents may concern, that in my office exist the criminal deeds between parties: Plaintiff, the Court of Justice, and Defendants, Vincente Daniel Cranotich, master of the American schooner "Mary E. Smith," and others; and on examining them as regards the points requested to be certified, the following is therein found:—

Sentence passed in the Deeds, folio 194.

On reference to the Register of Obituary, folios 149 and 192, I declare the accusation against Vincente Daniel Cranotich and Manoel Antonio da Silva Leitão as extinct, the former as master, and the latter seaman of the schooner "Mary E. Smith."

The said accusation, however, prevails against Manoel Basilio da Cunha Reis, Guilherme José da Silva Correa (Brazilian subjects residing, the latter in Africa, the former in New York), João José Vianna, Manoel Alves da Costa Bastos, Bernardino Martins Ferreira (merchant in Rio de Janeiro), Manoel da Silva, Nathaniel Stanton, Joseph Sisson, William Black, William Bussley, Dablemont Eugene, and José Alves da Costa (merchant in Carahipe, in the Province of Espirito Santo).

Whereas the schooner "Mary E. Smith," having been captured on the 20th January of the present year by the brig of war "Olinda," whilst at anchor at the bar of St. Matthew's, in the aforesaid Province of Espirito Santo, with 384 slaves on board, the importation of which being prohibited by the Law of the 7th November, 1831, they were declared free, and the vessel condemned as a lawful prize, as is shown by the sentence folio 146, proved by the interrogations contained in folio to folio , folio 178 to folio , documents folio 150-158 to folio , and other documents annexed to the deeds.

That to Manoel Basilio da Cunha Reis, Guilherme José da Silva Correa, and João José Vianna, belonged in equal parts the aforesaid schooner, which vessel having been purchased and fitted out at Boston, left thence for the coast of Africa, where she took in a cargo of slaves, and proceeded to the coast of Brazil, bringing on board the third accused, João José Vianna, as supercargo, for the better management of the enterprise, and that the fourth, Manoel Alves da Costa Bastos, also came on board from Africa as supercargo of a portion of the cargo of slaves belonging to different parties, in order that at Carahipe, conjointly with his brother, José Alves da Costa, he might effect the discharge in that quarter, not only of the slaves brought by the schooner, but also of those that might be forthcoming.

That the fifth, Bernardino Martins Ferreira, long since given to the Traffic of Slaves, wrote to Guilherme Correa, apprizing him that it was a fit opportunity for the importation in the Brazils, pointing out the quarter, Carahipe, and others, for discharging, offering his services to receive the vessels and cargoes to his consignment, and was in fact the consignee of the captured vessel and the greater part of her cargo, thus being interested in the affair.

That the sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth, tenth, and eleventh accused were mere seamen of the said schooner, on board which vessel they came from Boston, with the exception of the sixth, who was shipped on the coast of Africa.

That the twelfth, José Alves da Costa, was the manager at the discharging place, Carahipe, pointed out for the purpose, who being aware that the said landing could not be effected there, owing to the measures taken by the local authorities, of this he apprized his brother, Manoel Alves da Costa Bastos, on going on shore to consult with him; he consequently ordered the schooner to proceed to St. Matthew's to effect the discharge of the slaves there, thus encouraging this criminal act, and endeavouring to prevent the slaves being apprehended, or the authorities having any knowledge thereof, &c.

By all which, and in conformity with Articles 3 and 4 of the Law No. 531 of the 4th September, 1850, and of that, No. 731, of the 5th June, 1854, I commit to prison, for being under the second Article of the Law of the 7th November, 1831, with reference to Article 179 of the Criminal Code—the authors, Manoel Basilio da Cunha Reis, Guilherme José da Silva Correa, João José Vianna, Manoel Alves da Costa Bastos, and Bernardino Martins Ferreira de Faria; the accomplices, Manoel da Silva, Nathaniel Stanton, Joseph Sisson, William Black, William Bussley, Damblemont Eugene, and José Alves da Costa: not proceeding, however, against Antonio Francisco Guimarães Pinheiro, Carvalho, and Rocha, and João Augusto Ferreira d'Almeida; not against the first, because the doubt which is manifest in the letter folio 158 of his being or not the consignee of the schooner "Mary E. Smith," the same having been negatived by the declaration, folio 179-80, of João José Vianna, part interested and supercargo of the said schooner; not against the second, because the simple fact of the letters, folio 148, addressed to them, which contain an order to receive and remit to sundries in Europe, amounts which others had to liquidate and deliver to them, unaccompanied with previous circumstances relating to the crime, therefore in the face of the deeds they cannot be considered responsible for the crime in question; not against the third, because he spontaneously presented the documents, folio 158, which gave grounds, folio 171, on the 11th December last year, desisted voluntarily, expressly and opportunely, from the crime, and thus ceased to be responsible for the same, according to the rules of criminal imputation.

For ulterior judgment in this respect, I appeal to the Supreme Tribunal of Judicature, in conformity with Article 26 of the Regulation No. 708 of the 14th September, 1850.

Let the Registrar inscribe the names of the parties found guilty in the list of the culpable, recommend well those which are already imprisoned, and pass orders for the apprehension of those still at large.

Let the due intimations be made, and the costs paid respectively.

The obligations of specifying the reasons of the delay in these proceedings, imposed by Article 25 of the said Regulation, I fulfil, by referring to those already given in the judgment of the seizure, folio 146, the conclusion of which interested those presents, and to which is to be added the necessity that existed of waiting for further proofs and valuable documents, which came to strengthen the responsibility of the parties whom I have found guilty, and committed.

Let these presents be sent to the Public Promoter, in order to present his libel in the first Audience.

Bahia, April 16, 1856.

(Signed)

FRANCISCO LIBERATO DE MATTOS.

Nothing further was contained in the said sentence, from which the present certificate has been taken, and is by me subscribed, together with another Registrar.

Conferred and signed in this city of Bahia, this 23rd day of April, 1856.

I, Ladislau Pereira Pinto, Registrar, subscribe the present.

My Lord,

Consul Morgan to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received August 11.)

My Lord,

Bahia, July 11, 1856.

I COMMITTED an error in my despatch of the 17th of May last when, on transmitting to your Lordship copy of the "pronuncia," or finding of a true bill against the individuals implicated in the affair of the American schooner "Mary E. Smith," I styled that "pronuncia" the sentence given in the case by the Auditor of Marine.

Such was not the fact, as I have now the honour to forward the final sentence on the authors and abettors of that criminal speculation.

João José Vianna, Manoel Alves da Costa Bastos, and the Commandeur Bernardino Martins Ferreira de Faria, are each condemned to four years' imprisonment, and to pay a fine corresponding to a third part of that period; besides the further fine of Rs. 76,800$000 or 8,920*l.* sterling, being at the rate of Rs. 200$000 for each African found on board the "Mary E. Smith."

By Brazilian law the penalty in money of the third part of the original sentence of four years' imprisonment, is calculated at what the individual convicted would be able to earn per diem, in his station of life, were he free to occupy himself in his ordinary avocations; but if not willing or capable to pay, the fine is commuted at the same ratio into a further detention.

Thus in the same manner is calculated the further penalty each of those convicts will have to pay in the sum of Rs. 76,800$000, thereby rendering the sentence now passed on them by the Auditor of Marine equivalent to imprisonment beyond the natural existence of man.

The Commandeur Bernardino Martins Ferreira de Faria has appealed from his sentence to the "Relação" of this District, and, in case of confirmation, there is a further appeal to the supreme Tribunal of Justice at Rio de Janeiro. Considering, however, the powerful support he appears to have in that capital, from the number of letters of introduction he brought with him thence when conveyed to this city to stand his trial as implicated in this nefarious transaction, I should not be surprised if he is eventually absolved.

I have, &c.

Smith*," and others; and on examining the said "autos," of which a certified copy has been requested, the following sentence is found therein:

Sentence, folio 244.

Having examined these "autos," &c., in which are defendants João José Vianna, Manoel Alves da Costa Bastos, Manoel da Silva, Nathaniel Staunton, Joseph Sisson, William Blake, William Bushley, Damblemont Eugene, and Bernardino Martins Ferreira de Faria, accused at folio of having incurred the penalty of the 2nd Article of the Law of the 7th November, 1831, with reference to Article 177 of the Criminal Code, the first, second, and third defendants as authors of the crime of importing Africans, and the others as accomplices. Of these defendants the last-mentioned alone defends himself, as at folio, all of which, seen and examined, demonstrate, by the documents and interrogatories inserted in the "autos," that the first defendant is one of the owners of the schooner "Mary E. Smith," which was captured on the 20th January of this year off the Bar of St. Matthew's with 384 Africans on board, and that he was, besides, the supercargo of the said vessel belonging also to Manoel Basilio da Cunha Reis and Guilherme José da Silva Correa (defendants absent, equally guilty); that the second defendant was also supercargo of part of the cargo of Africans of said schooner belonging to several interested parties; that the third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, and eighth defendants were seamen of the said schooner that brought the Africans to Brazil, and that, by documents at folios 150 and 158, combined with the entries at folios 178, 186, and 203, the ninth defendant was the consignee of the said criminal negotiation; and whereas the replies at folio cannot prevail, because, if doubts existed as to his being the identical individual to whom the letter at folio 150 was addressed, none whatever exists as to his being the person referred to in the one at folios 178 and 186, namely, of Manoel Basilio da Cunha Reis having entrusted, by letters at posterior folios and folios; and, at folio 158, the liquidation of part of the cargo belonging to him to João Augusto Ferreira de Almeida does not exclude that the defendant was not the consignee of the other part, which he was, and is proved at folio, when Vianna, who, in Africa, received all orders and instructions relative to this criminal undertaking, expressly declares that, in fact, two were the consignees, namely, the said João Augusto, and the defendant Bernardino Martins Ferreira de Faria; and judging, as I do now judge, as proved the accusation against the above-mentioned defendants, I condemn João José Vianna, Manoel Alves da Costa Bastos, and Bernardino Martins Ferreira de Faria, as authors, and as having incurred the penalty of the 3rd Article of the Law of the 4th September, 1850, and of the 5th June, 1854, to four years' imprisonment, and fine corresponding to the third part of that period (medium degree of Article 179 of the Criminal Code), and to a further fine of Rs. 200$000 for each of the 384 Africans imported, with the obligation, at their own expense, to re-export them when the Government shall so determine it; in the same penalty incur, with the deduction of the third part of period of fine, the accomplices, Manoel da Silva, Nathaniel Staunton, Joseph Sisson, William Blake, and Damblemont Eugene; the other accomplice, William Bushley, to two years' imprisonment, with the corresponding fine of a third part of that period, as he has in his favour the extenuating circumstance of paragraph 10 of Article 18 of the above-mentioned Criminal Code; and all the defendants I condemn to pay costs.

The voyage I had to undertake on the public service to the south of this province delayed but by a few days the final judgment of this case.

Acting Vice-Consul Krause to Consul Cowper.

Sir,

Paraiba, July 4, 1856.

I BEG to inform you that a few days ago I received intelligence, from a trustworthy person, that in the latter end of May (date uncertain) two vessels, with African blacks, approached the coast to the northward of this city, at a place called Barra de Caramatuba, and had communication with the shore; but a detachment of soldiers having arrived at Bahia de Traição, close to the said Barra, a day or two previously, in consequence of informations that I had given to the President that slavers might be expected on the coast, the vessels, after having got bullocks, farina, and cod-fish from the shore, put out to sea, where they remained until they could receive instructions from this city how they were to act, and one is said to have gone to a place called Pipa, and the other to Macão, both, I believe, in the Province of Rio Grande do Norte.

The vessels are said to have had 600 blacks on board of each, all young and healthy, averaging from fifteen to twenty-five years, and the greater part of them speaking Portuguese.

Another vessel, with a similar cargo, is said to have landed them at Goraima, where they were all sold at Rs. 400$000 each.

I imparted this intelligence to the President and Chief of Police, who knew nothing at all about the matter, but they promised to make every inquiry on the subject. It seems to me very surprising that they should be ignorant of this, as my informant tells me the thing is publicly spoken of in the whole neighbourhood.

Two more vessels are said to be expected, and I would take the liberty of suggesting that one of Her Majesty's ships be sent to cruize on this coast as soon as possible.

Most Excellent Sir,

Bahia, July 18, 1856.

I HAVE this day received information from Pernambuco and Paraiba, from which it appears that three slave-vessels were seen off the coast of the latter Province, there being suspicions that the cargo of one of these was landed and sold at a place called Goraima.

I have likewise received copy of a despatch addressed by the President of the Province of Pernambuco, communicating to Her Britannic Majesty's Consul in that city, that on the 2nd of May had started, from Teneriffe, a brig called "Pensamento," for Benguella, going in her a brother of the celebrated Riverosa, and it is suspected that this vessel is intended for the Traffic in Africans.

I feel convinced that your Excellency will be glad to receive this information, inasmuch as it shows that the traffickers are in communication with various parts of the shores of Brazil, and are not yet convinced that the country repels such undertakings, and as no such attempts have been made in this Province, I confide in the anxiety your Excellency has always shown to eradicate this pestiferous sore.

Consul Morgan to Mr. Jerningham.

Sir,

Bahia, July 18, 1856.

I BEG to hand you herewith copies of despatches received from Her Majesty's Consul at Pernambuco, relative to three suspicious vessels that were seen off the coast of Paraiba.

I have communicated their contents to the Commander of Her Majesty's ship "Spy," and I believe he will immediately proceed northward.

I have equally advised the President of this Province of this fact, and his Excellency promises to exert his usual vigilance on this coast.

I should not be surprised if one of the vessels in question was the one seen off the point of Itacar, in the Rio das Contas, in the month of June last, which was the subject of my despatch to you of June 24.

I must again beg permission to call your attention to the number of British cruizers on this station, now solely confined to the "Spy." The whole of this coast is unprotected, and who can foresee a landing on some isolated point, even with all the vigilance and honesty of this Provincial Government, when no cruizer under the British flag is visible?

I was about to request the Commander of the "Spy" to cruize southward, when Mr. Consul Cowper's despatch reached me this day, but as her presence is more required northwards, we remain here without any cruizer to supply any urgent necessity that may arise.

Declarations made by the late Master of the "Mary E. Smith."

(Translation.)

CERTIFICATE passed by official order, and at the request of Her Britannic Majesty's Consul, the tenour of which being as follows, viz. :

I, Ladislau Pereira Pinto, Knight of the Imperial Order of the Rose, Registrar of the Board of Trade, and Audit of Marine, in this Province of Bahia, by His Imperial Majesty, &c., do hereby certify, to all whom these presents may come, that in my office exist the deeds of the capture, by the Brazilian brig of war "Olinda," of the American schooner "Mary E. Smith," with 384 slaves on board, and on reviewing said deeds as regards the topics pointed out, and requested to be certified by superior order, the following is therefrom extracted :—

Interrogation made to Captain Vincente D. Cranotich.

On the 8th day of March, in the year of our Lord 1856, in this city of Bahia, and Hospital of Invalids, where appeared the Chief of Police and Auditor of Marine, Francisco Liberato de Mattos, together with me, Registrar, attending said Chief, there being present Vincente D. Cranotich, master of the schooner "Mary E. Smith," where he was sick and free from irons, and without the least constraint, the said Judge proceeded in putting to him the following questions :

On being asked if he knew the four letters presented to him to be the handwriting and signature of Manoel Basilio da Cunha Reis, two of which addressed to Carvalho and Rocha, merchants of Rio de Janeiro, one under date of 18th September, and the other of the 2nd October, 1855, and the other two of the latter date addressed, one to Augusto Ferreira d'Almeida, and the other to João José Vianna, replied that from the knowledge he had of the handwriting and signature of the said Reis, recognizes the aforesaid letters as having been written and signed by him.

On being asked why he said on previous interrogations that the schooner "Mary E. Smith" had no other owner but himself, when the contrary appears by the letters from said Cunha Reis, by which it is evident that others, and not himself, are the owners of the said vessel, replied that, in truth, the schooner "Mary E. Smith" belongs to Cunha Reis, Guilherme José da Silva Correa, and João José Vianna, the latter of which having come on board as supercargo, he, the said deponent, covering the property with his name to enable the vessel to be dispatched as American, and to use the respective flag, his real capacity being that of master of the said schooner, for which service he earned the sum of 8,000 dollars.

On being asked who was entrusted with the purchase and fitting out of the schooner, and who treated with him, deponent replied that it was Manoel Basilio da Cunha Reis alone.

On being asked if besides the port of Carahipe, of which he had already spoken in his last interrogatory, other ports were not pointed out to him for the discharge of slaves, and which were they, replied that, on the coast of Africa, the only port that was pointed out to him was Aldea Velha, or Carahipe, in Espirito Sancto, as appears by a note found in an almanac, but that when Manoel Alves da Costa Bastos went on shore at Carahipe, on his return said, that his brother (whose name is unknown to him, deponent) not being able to receive the cargo of slaves owing to the tumult, and steps taken by the authorities on shore, ordered the vessel to proceed to St. Matthew's, where he was going to give directions for the discharge of the slaves.

On being questioned if Bastos declared who was to take the management of this affair at St. Matthew's, replied in the negative.

Deponent being asked if he knew any other ports in the Brazils where it was intended to send slaves, and who were the owners or managers of such coves, replied that in Espirito Sancto there was, besides the Carahipe, the Guariperi, adjoining Nossa Senhora da Penha, to the south of Capitania, and in Porto Alegre, the Bahia dos Tigres (Tiger Bay), the owners or managers of such coves being unknown to him.

On being questioned who gave notice to the coast of Africa of the places at which slaves could be discharged at present, and who offered to receive them, replied that when Cunha Reis treated with him, deponent, he mentioned that Guilherme Correa had written to him declaring that he had received instructions from Brazil regarding the places at which slaves were to be landed, but did not declare to him, deponent, the names of the parties who induced said Guilherme to be party in the Traffic which was going to recommence.

On being questioned who were the parties in the Brazils that were to receive the cargo, to whom was it addressed, and the vessel to be consigned, replied that he knew nothing further than that Manoel Alves da Costa Bastos' brother was the party who should receive the slaves at Carahipe, and that once discharged, the schooner was to proceed to Montevideo to complete her voyage, and thence to return to Boston.

On being questioned whether he knew the parties in Brazil to whom the letters were addressed respecting the vessel and her cargo, replied that he did not, nor did he see the letters, but that the same must have been brought by Vianna and Bastos, who mentioned that the slaves belonging to venturers were to their consignment, therefore they must have been in possession of the respective orders, as the contract that he, deponent, had made with Cunha Reis, was merely to undertake the navigation of the vessel.

On being questioned whether Bastos or Vianna had not mentioned to him, at least, in the course of conversation, that Bernardino Martins Ferreira, João Augusto Ferreira d'Almeida, and Antonio Francisco Guimarães Pinheiro, partner of the deceased José Fortunato da Cunha, had induced Guilherme José da Silva Correa to send slaves to their consignment, and pointed out the places where he should send them to, replied in the negative.

On being questioned whether he knew by any other means that the individuals above referred to have been addicted, and are actually employed in, the Slave Trade, replied that their having traded a great deal to Africa is notorious; that it was generally reported in the United States that they promoted the Traffic anew; and that even Bernardino Martins Ferreira had sent orders to the Portuguese Consul at Baltimore for the purchase and fitting-out of vessels for the Traffic of Slaves for the coast of Brazil.

On being questioned as to the name of the Portuguese Consul at Baltimore, and if he, deponent, knows that the said Consul executed, or was about to execute, such orders, replied that the said Portuguese Consul was called a Mr. Almeida; that he is generally known by his official title; that he is a Brazilian subject, as he, deponent, presumes, and was on the eve of executing said orders, which he knows, because he, deponent, was invited by the said Consul to take charge of a vessel belonging to the aforesaid Bernardino Martins Ferreira, who mentioned to him that the Traffic to the Brazils was going to recommence, and which he, deponent, declined on account of his having been already engaged with Cunha Reis.

On being questioned whether Guilherme Correa and Cunha Reis were Brazilian subjects, replied in the affirmative.

On being questioned if he knows Carvalho and Rocha of Rio de Janeiro, and if they have traded, and continue to trade, in slaves for the Brazils, and also what he knows of them with respect to the schooner "Mary E. Smith," and her cargo, replied that he knows Carvalho and Rocha, merchants of Rio de Janeiro, who, in former times, as he was informed, were parties in the Traffic, but that now he is not aware that they follow it, nor that they are compromised, directly or indirectly, as regards the schooner "Mary E. Smith."

On being questioned to whom belonged the cargo of slaves captured, replied that the greater portion belonged to Cunha Reis and Guilherme, and the others to different venturers, whose names were unknown to him.

On being questioned who threw overboard all the correspondence that came by the schooner, replied that it was Vianna and Bastos, at St. Matthew's, as soon as they saw the brig-of-war's boat approaching the schooner.

No further questions were put, and the above interrogations being read to and signed by him, and subscribed by the Judge, as being in conformity, all which I faithfully attest.

And I, Ladislau Pereira Pinto, Registrar, wrote these presents.

(Signed) FRANCISCO LIBERATO DE MATTOS.
VINCENTE DANIEL CRANOTICH.

Nothing further was contained in the aforesaid interrogations, which I had faithfully extracted from the original deeds, and which is by me subscribed, and conferred by another Registrar.

Conferred and signed in this city of Bahia, this 29th day of July, 1856.

I, Ladislau Pereira Pinto, Registrar, underwrite the present.

Conferred by me.

I HAVE the honour to acquaint your Lordship that the Chief of Police of this city has just informed me that the brother of Manoel Alves da Costa Bastos, one of the supercargoes of the American slaver "Mary E. Smith," who, as resident at Aldea Velha in the Province of Espirito Santo, was to have received the slaves destined to be landed there from the said schooner, has been captured by the authorities of that province, and is expected here in the first steamer from Rio de Janeiro to take his trial, and will, I trust, receive the reward due to his participation in that nefarious transaction.

The Chief of Police is in hopes of some further discovery in the impending trial, so as to enable Government to uproot the whole of the nest of pirates who, at Rio de Janeiro, intended to recommence slave-trading ventures to Brazil.

Consul Morgan to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received November 11.)

My Lord,

Bahia, October 4, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to communicate to your Lordship that, in consequence of a letter from Her Majesty's Minister at Lisbon, respecting the departure for Bahia, on the 4th of May, of the Portuguese brig "Africano," formerly the "General Rego," I acquainted the Brazilian authorities of there being strong suspicions that she was about to be employed in Slave Traffic.

Upon the arrival of the "Africano" at this port on the 20th of June, she was minutely searched by the police, as was also the cargo on board, but nothing was discovered to implicate the vessel.

After her discharge she loaded a cargo consisting of rum, tobacco, &c., and sailed, on the 1st instant, for the coast of Africa.

The proceedings of the parties connected with the "Africano" during her stay at Bahia have been carefully watched by the authorities, who are ever ready to adopt any measures to prevent the resumption of the Slave Trade.

Consul Morgan to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received November 11.)

My Lord,

Bahia, October 10, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to lay before your Lordship copy of a letter I considered it my duty to address to Mr. T. Giolma, a British subject and a native of Gibraltar, on the occasion of the establishment in this city of the "Previdencia" Company for insuring the lives of slaves, and of which he figures as manager, having affixed his name to the prospectus issued through the public papers.

I conceived that the very fact of a British subject figuring as manager of such an institution was illegal by our law, and the more so as one of the conditions imposed by the statutes of the said Company declares that the assured, besides the stipulations of the general insurance, were bound to pay an extra  $\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. to the agency, and 1 per cent. for the risk incurred by a change of residence of the slaves from one province to another of the Empire; and that thereby the aiding and abetting, as pointed out by the Act 5 Geo. IV, cap. 113, sec. 8, appeared to me self-evident.

Mr. Giolma, in his reply, tries to oppose the sense implied in the Company's prospectus, because the word "embark" is not mentioned; but your Lordship, from the inclosed translation of the paragraph in question, will, no doubt, find that I have not forced the interpretation which that article evidently intended to convey to the public; and this is further grounded on the fact that the Previdencia Company has no other branch but the one now established in this city, and that they are about to establish another at Pernambuco, also under the management of a British subject, by name Mr. Charles Nathan.

Your Lordship is aware of the number of slaves that are annually sent coastwise, both from this city and Pernambuco, to Rio de Janeiro. This legalized Traffic was first mentioned by me in my despatch of the 17th February, 1853, and has gone on steadily increasing ever since; but if British subjects are to be interested parties as managers of such institutions, it may hereafter tend to give greater force to such unprincipled speculations, on the plea that British agents in Brazil have not thought proper to denounce its existence.

If slavery has been stigmatized as inconsistent with the principles of Christianity, and the attainment of its abolition the constant aim of Her Majesty's Government, the insurance of the lives of slaves will of itself, in my humble opinion, be the greatest bar to that blessed boon, as it will create such a powerful interest in the preservation of slavery that it must ultimately defeat its so much wished-for extinction.

Inclosure 1 in No. 244.

Consul Morgan to Mr. Giolma.

Sir,

Bahia, October 1, 1856.

I HAVE seen in the public papers the prospectus of the Previdencia Company, established at Rio de Janeiro for the insurance of the lives of slaves, and of which a branch has likewise been formed in this city, under your management and inspection.

It is not my purpose to enter into the merits of such an institution, or to question the rights of the subjects of the Empire to further their own interests in the manner proposed, but when I see the name of a British subject styling himself manager of a Company for the insurance of the lives of slaves, I conceive that he is exposing himself, perhaps unknowingly, to the penalties attached by his participation in such acts, which are prohibited him to perform, even in a foreign country.

Although the Acts of Parliament do not positively make mention of the "insurance of the lives of slaves," but merely refer to the insurance of slaves, yet I hold that every British subject is bound to respect the spirit of that law, which never could contemplate any equivocation as to its intent or purport. But were I wrong in my interpretation, the fact alone that the Company include in their risks the insurance of the lives of slaves when they embark from one province to another of the Empire, for which an extra per-centage is demanded, appears to me to be more than sufficient to prove that, whatever position you hold under the Company, whether as manager or clerk, you aid and abet in performing an act clearly prohibited in 5 Geo. IV, cap. 113, sec. 8.

The Act 6 & 7 Vict., cap. 98, is equally stringent on the same point.

In calling your attention to this subject I conceive I am only performing a public duty; but, in order that I may justify the step I have taken, it is my intention to lay the question before the Earl of Clarendon, for his information, and ulterior instructions.

I have, &c.

Mr. Giolma to Consul Morgan.

Sir,

Bahia, October 2, 1856.

IN reply to the letter you were kind enough to address to me relative to the Previdencia Negro Life Insurance Company, I have only to state that my management of the branch established in this city, merely has reference to the accounts to be rendered to the directors at Rio de Janeiro. The medical men for the examination of the slaves, the directors have appointed, for which purpose they sent up an especial agent, and who likewise appointed the cash-keeper, collector, and other clerks. I have nothing whatever to do with the slaves, further than to see that the life policy be made out and delivered to the proprietor afterwards; the medical men being the parties who accept the risk offered, and it is upon their certificate that the policy of insurance is made out. I send you a medical certificate, but cannot give you a policy, as they are bound in a book and numbered to conform to the register.

The orders all come from Rio, and I here transmit them to the directors or any other persons for whom they may be intended. I keep the statistics of the insurances and mortality here, and forward same to the directors at Rio at the end of every month—copies of everything; not even a journal or ledger is kept here, all being written up at Rio from the copies mentioned.

Relative to the article you refer to as being in the conditions, you will see that the additional 1 per cent. is not as a sea risk: it says merely “pelo risco da mudança da huma provincia á outra ;” this refers either to sea or land, and is an additional per-centage to the annual premium. The Company do not undertake maritime risks upon slaves: your expressing “embark” alters the meaning of the sentence.

I am not a shareholder, nor have I any influence over the directors at Rio de Janeiro, but am simply a chief clerk for the accounts, without even being the book-keeper.

I trust, therefore, that you will in your correspondence with the Earl of Clarendon, clearly point out my position in the Company, as it would be exceedingly disagreeable to be obliged to resign my post, and which I accepted with the firm conviction that I was in no way aiding or abetting the continuation of slavery.

The published conditions I inclose for your government, to which, you will see, is only subscribed the name of the Secretary of the Directory.

I have, &c.

(Signed) THOS. GIOLMA.

BESIDES the premiums stipulated in these conditions, the assured will make a further payment of  $\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. to the agency, and 1 per cent. for the risk incurred by a change of residence from one province to another. This change can only take place after a previous participation, and to such places only where agencies of this company are established.

My Lord,

Bahia, November 11, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to transmit herewith to your Lordship, a translation of a correspondence I have lately had with the President of this province, consequent on the arrival in this port of Her Majesty's brigantine “Spy” from Rio de Janeiro, with the report that information had been given to Her Majesty's Legation of a disembarkation of slaves at Assu, forty miles to the northward of this city.

Although I saw there was not the slightest foundation for such a report, inasmuch as the traders have no chance in this province, from the good faith and vigilance evinced by its authorities in the suppression of the Traffic, I nevertheless had no option left me in this instance but to communicate with the President on the subject, as the "Spy" was specially dispatched to this port, to inquire into the affair, by the Rear-Admiral Commander-in-chief.

From the reply of the President, your Lordship will see that this Provincial Government did not hesitate one moment to take steps to verify the report in question by sending a force to Assu, and the result is, as I had expected, that no such landing there ever took place.

Your Lordship will also observe that the President was likewise cognizant of the sailing of the slaver said to have left Portugal on the 26th of August last, and which was expected to attempt a landing either at Caravellas to the southward of this province, or at Ilha do Trigo in St. Catherine's.

Illustrious and most Excellent Sir,

Bahia, November 4, 1856.

ALTHOUGH I am rather surprised at the information I have just received from the commander of Her Majesty's brigantine "Spy," of a disembarkation of Africans having been effected at Assu, in this province—information that has reached Her Britannic Majesty's Legation at Rio de Janeiro, but to which I cannot give credence—it is my duty, notwithstanding, to make it known to your Excellency.

I feel persuaded that if such a disembarkation had taken place, the truth could not have been kept secret, especially at so short a distance from this city.

I have also to add, that it is equally reported that a vessel is shortly expected from the coast of Africa, having left Oporto on the 26th of August last, and which vessel is supposed will call either at the Ilha do Trigo, near St. Catherine's, or will attempt a landing near Caravellas, in this province. This slaver is to hoist at her foremast a signal flag, red and white, and a number of canoes are to be ready at each place, to assist the projected landing of Africans.

(Translation.)

ALTHOUGH I have no grounds to enable me to credit the correctness of the information given to Mr. J. Morgan, Jun., Her Britannic Majesty's Consul, by the commander of the brigantine "Spy," of a disembarkation of Africans at the port of Assu, which opinion the said Consul appears likewise to entertain, nevertheless, desirous that upon a matter in which the Imperial Government is so interested to prevent and to punish, no doubt should exist thereon, I ordered, yesterday, the Government pilot-boat "Montserrat" to proceed to that point, with troops on board, to inquire into the fact, and to seize the persons of such individuals as may be found connected with so nefarious a crime; and I have transmitted instructions as shall not leave the slightest doubt of the inexactness of such a report. To the Delegate of Police of Abrantes, to whose district belongs that port, I have communicated that report, and have ordered him to co-operate with the force now sent, and to prosecute inquiries in the sense of the discovery of the truth.

With reference to the information of a slaver suspected to be destined for Caravellas, which Her Britannic Majesty's Consul also mentions in his despatch of the 4th instant, I have to state that an equal denunciation was already received at the Police Court of Rio de Janeiro, which has been communicated to this Presidency by the Minister of Justice, and which I have made known to the authorities of the south. I have also ordered one of the vessels of war belonging to this station to proceed thence, and to make a vigorous cruize along the suspected points.

I thank the Consul of Her Britannic Majesty for the goodness he had in promptly acquainting me with the information he received from the commander of the "Spy;" and on this occasion I renew to him my assurance that this Presidency is not disposed to spare any means at its disposal to repress and to punish the Traffic, should it, by any misfortune, be ever revived in this province, because this is its duty, as it is by orders and recommendations received from the Imperial Government.

Sir,

Foreign Office, January 27, 1857.

I HAVE received your despatch of the 10th of October last, inclosing copies of a correspondence which you have had with a British subject named Giolma, who has undertaken the management of a Company established for insuring the lives of slaves; and I have to acquaint you that I have consulted the proper Law Officers of the Crown with regard to the question of the legality of Mr. Giolma's proceedings in this affair, and that they are of opinion that the enactments of the Act 5 Geo. IV, cap. 113, secs. 2 and 8, are directed against the insurance of adventures in slaves, and not in terms against insurances effected on their lives, and that therefore Mr. Giolma is not liable to the penalties imposed on those who "insure or contract for the insurance of slaves and their procurers, counsellors, aiders, and abettors."

It seems clear, however, that a British subject in assuming duties connected with effecting insurances on the lives of slaves, is acting against the spirit of the statute; but in order to affect Mr. Giolma criminally, he must be shown to come within its direct enactments, which in this case cannot, it would appear, be done.

My Lord,

Pará, April 29, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's despatch dated the 19th January last,† desiring me to inform your Lordship whether the 3 slave children, Jacinto, Ildefonso, and Elena, belonging to Mr. Alexander Dickson, of Pará, the guardianship and temporary possession of whom I had assumed, are now entirely free, and if not, what arrangements have been made with regard to them.

On receipt of your Lordship's despatches of the 12th and 20th of October last,‡ instructing me to give up possession of the slaves in question, I immediately placed myself in communication with the above-named Mr. Dickson, and the Judge of Orphans of this city, Senhor Maximiano Francisco Duarte, and it was arranged, as I had the honour of reporting to your Lordship in my despatch of the 1st of January last,§ that the Judge of Orphans should receive from me the slaves Jacinto and Ildefonso, and that the girl Elena should be registered free, and a minor in the Court of Orphans. She has been given over to the charge of Colonel Lucidoro Lourenço da Motta, the grandfather of Mr. Dickson's children, during her minority, with whom also Jacinto and Ildefonso, as well as the slave boy Lazaro, have been placed, as the property of Mr. Dickson's infant children.

The little girl Elena obtained her manumission from her original owner, Mr. Dickson's late wife, having a short time before her death signed a paper expressing her wish that Elena should be free; and this document, requiring the signature of Mr. Dickson to legalize her freedom, when he applied to me in May 1855, to prevent his children and slaves being taken from him by the Court of Orphans, I made it a condition of my interfering, that he should fulfil the intentions of his wife towards freeing Elena, which he did by executing a deed, a copy of which was contained in Inclosure No. 4 in my despatch to your Lordship of July 30, 1855.||

In reference to the poor boys, Jacinto, Ildefonço, and Lazaro, their fate is, in some measure, pending the issue of a lawsuit between Mr. Dickson and his father-in-law, Colonel Lucidoro Lourenço da Motta, in which the former is endeavouring, first, to be reinstated by the Judge of Orphans as guardian of his own children, which will again place him in possession of the above-named slaves during the minority of his children; and secondly, to obtain a redistribution of the property left by his wife, apportioning the slaves to himself, and the landed estates to his children, it being now vice versa. He has offered me to sign any document, securing the freedom of the three boys on their attaining their twenty-first year, if I would interfere with the authorities here, to procure for him the accomplishment of his objects.

I beg leave to refer to the despatch which I had the honour of addressing to your Lordship on these matters, dated the 30th July, 1855, wherein I mentioned, that in an interview I had with the then Acting President of Pará, Dr. Moraes, I stated to him Mr. Dickson's case; and his Excellency admitted, that the division made by the Judge of Orphans of the late Mrs. Dickson's property was not strictly in accordance with Brazilian law, and he promised me that he would endeavour to persuade the Judge of Orphans to apportion the lands to the children, and the slaves to the father. Shortly afterwards Dr. Moraes expressed to me his regret, that having retired from the Presidency, he was unable to fulfil his promise to me.

Your Lordship will pardon me for adding, that I have no doubt of the freedom of these slaves being secured on their arriving at the age of twenty-one, if the Judge of the Court of Orphans here were instructed by the Imperial authorities at Rio de Janeiro to apportion the slaves to Mr. Dickson, and the lands to his children.

I HAVE received your despatch of the 29th of April last, in which you express an opinion that the freedom of the 3 slaves, Jacinto, Ildefonço, and Lazaro, who belonged to Mr. Dickson's late wife, might be secured, on their arriving at the age of twenty-one, if the Judge of the Court of Orphans at Pará were instructed by the Imperial authorities at Rio de Janeiro to apportion the slaves to Mr. Dickson and the land to his children.

I have to state to you, in reply, that it appears to me that Her Majesty's Government would not be justified in making suggestions to the Brazilian Government, or in undertaking any ex parte interference with regard to the lawsuit relating the late Mrs. Dickson's property which is now before the Brazilian Law Courts, unless it can be shown that justice has been denied to Mr. Dickson.

Pará, July 30, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to report to your Lordship that, on the 4th instant, a vessel, under the flag of the United States of North America, named "Eliza Jane," entered this port.

She is a fore-and-aft rigged schooner, of 127 tons burden, American measurement.

She was immediately suspected of being a slaver, and an armed boat was placed alongside of her to watch her movements.

The statement of the master, Leander West, to the custom-house officers, that he had been on a cruize for the last seven months in search for whales, without finding any, and having an unusually large crew for so small a vessel, a great number of which were Portuguese, tended to confirm these suspicions.

It was reported that the police authorities had laid an embargo on the vessel as a slaver, and afterwards, that the United States' Consul had satisfied them that the "Eliza Jane" was a whaler, and had embarked in a legitimate trade, and that, on completing her shipment of fresh provisions, she would again put to sea.

I addressed a private note to the President of this Province, General Henrique de Beaurepaire Rohan, under date of the 10th instant, soliciting information relative to the "Eliza Jane," and his Excellency courteously complied with this request, sending me, as well as replies to my inquiries, a copy of the report of the examinations held by the Chief of Police on board the "Eliza Jane," translations of which documents I have the honour herewith to inclose to your Lordship.

It appeared to me that, if the circumstances which gave rise to the suspicions that this vessel had been fitted out for the Slave Trade were not sufficient to justify the authorities here in detaining her, it would seem almost impossible to detect vessels engaged in that Traffic unless captured with Africans on board; for that nothing could be easier than to assume a disguise (as the "Eliza Jane" probably had done) which consisted merely in a few implements for fishing, occupying no greater space than a boat's oars, with utensils on deck for the alleged purpose of boiling oil, which might be used for cooking food for slaves; that the statement contained in the report of the Chief of Police, that the hold of the vessel was filled with casks, was intended, no doubt, to convey the impression that there was no room for slaves, but these casks, when taken to pieces, would occupy only a small space as staves; and it struck me that the vessel might even have landed a cargo of slaves on this coast, else why visit this port, so altogether out of the latitude of the whale fishery, this being the single instance of a whaler ever visiting Pará; and this appeared a point which had escaped the notice of the police authorities in their report of the examinations. It was, too, extraordinary that the police magistrate should make an exception in this case to the usual practice of searching the persons and private papers of the master and crew, suspected, as they were, of the crime of being engaged in a nefarious Traffic.

During an interview which I had with the President, I stated to him the foregoing impressions on my mind.

His Excellency evinced a laudable anxiety to elucidate the matter, and assured me that he was deeply interested in detaining the "Eliza Jane," if he could prove that she was embarked in a Slave Trade expedition; for that he had received most positive instructions from the Imperial authorities before leaving Rio de Janeiro for the government of this province to use his best efforts to suppress that Traffic.

He read to me a description of a slaver, the main features of which, he observed, were wanting in the "Eliza Jane," namely, unusually-large hatchways, decks not caulked, and a great number of firearms, with chains and manacles to secure the slaves.

The "Eliza Jane" cleared the custom-house here for Edgartown on the 14th instant, and sailed from Pará on the 16th; but as it was generally known to have been the master's intention to proceed in a southerly direction, to resume, as he alleged, his search for whales, I reported this case to Mr. Jerningham, Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Rio de Janeiro, in a despatch under date of the 16th instant, transmitting therewith copies of the inclosures.

No. 258.

Consul Vines to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received December 6.)

My Lord,

Pará, September 29, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's despatch dated the 8th of July last, informing me, in reply to the opinion which I had expressed in my despatch of the 29th April, that the freedom of the 3 slaves, Jacinto, Ildefonso, and Lazaro, might be effected on their completing their twenty-first year, if they were apportioned to Mr. Dickson, and the land to his children, that with regard to the law-suit relating to this property, Her Majesty's Government could not interfere unless it could be shown that justice had been denied Mr. Dickson.

To enable me to lay before your Lordship a clear and ample detail of Mr. Dickson's law-suit, I employed one of the most eminent lawyers of this city, Dr. John Paes de Souza, to furnish me with a legal opinion upon the subject of Mr. Dickson's complaint that justice had been denied him, and to procure from the Court of Orphans copies of all the documents relating to the case. Dr. Paes de Souza, after examining into the affair, informed me that there could be no doubt that Mr. Dickson had been unjustly deprived of his children, and that as to the division of the property, the law certainly recommended that the slaves, being personal property, should be allotted to the father, and that the uniform practice had been departed from in this instance; that on pointing out to the Judge of Orphans, Senhor Dr. Maximiano Francisco Duarte, the injustice done to Mr. Dickson and the irregularity of the proceedings, that functionary admitted there was reason to complain, but said they were the acts of his predecessors, who had been merely judges pro tem., not belonging to the legal profession; that he would not be bound by their judgments, and would, as early as the forms of the Court permitted him, reinstate Mr. Dickson as guardian of his children, and if it could be shown that their interests would not be injured by an alteration in the distribution of the property, that he would apportion the land to them, and the slaves to the father.

I then explained to Dr. Paes de Souza, that my object was to secure the freedom of the slaves, and that I did not feel myself authorized to interfere further in the matter than to transmit to your Lordship copies of those illegal proceedings, unless that object were attained. Dr. Paes de Souza assured me in reply that he had no doubt of my being able to accomplish the manumission of the slaves, as the Judge of Orphans would do everything in his power to remove all cause of complaint that Her Majesty's Government might have, that justice had been denied to Mr. Dickson.

It appears, and Dr. Paes de Souza hinted as much to me, that Dr. M. F. Duarte, who for the last year has held the office of Judge of the Court of Orphans in this city, is most anxious to prevent these illegal proceedings becoming a subject-matter of intervention, between Her Majesty's Government and that of Brazil, lest he should be called upon by the latter to explain why he allowed so long a period to elapse since entering upon his functions, without reversing the illegal decisions of his predecessors.

I hope that in the course of a month or two, I shall be able to report to your Lordship the satisfactory termination of these proceedings, pending the settlement of which, I thought it desirable to obtain from Mr. Dickson a deed of enfranchisement of the slaves Jacinto, Ildefonso, and Lazaro, on their attaining respectively the age of twenty-one, a copy of which I beg leave herewith to transmit to your Lordship.

I have, &amp;c.

Declaration.

I, THE Undersigned, declare that as soon as the competent Judge apportioned to me the slaves as my share, conformably to law, which, by the division of the effects of my deceased wife Doña Antonio Florinda Freire da Motta, were apportioned to my sons, the said slaves named Jacinto, aged 16 years, Lazaro, aged 15 years, and Ildefonso, aged 9 years, I will consider them entitled to their freedom arriving at the age of 21 years; by this, Jacinto will be considered free in 1862, Lazaro in 1863, and Ildefonso in 1868, the said slaves being obliged to remain with me until the period that I mark for their manumission.

To testify which I write this with my own hand, and sign it with two witnesses.

Sir,

Foreign Office, December 8, 1856.

I AM directed by the Earl of Clarendon to acknowledge the receipt of your despatch of the 29th of September last, by which it appears that the Court of Orphans at Pará acted irregularly in depriving Mr. Dickson of the custody of the young slaves who belonged to his late wife.

Lord Clarendon trusts that the present Judge of the Court of Orphans will lose no time in doing justice to Mr. Dickson in this matter; but if it should not be soon settled satisfactorily, his Lordship desires me to state that Her Majesty's Government must bring the whole case before the Brazilian Government.

I am, &c.

Consul Vines to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received December 9.)

My Lord,

Pará, October 30, 1856.

IN reference to the despatch dated the 29th ultimo, which I had the honour to address to your Lordship, respecting the manumission of the 3 slaves, Jacinto, Ildefonso, and Lazaro, forming part of the personal property Mr. Alexander Dickson, of this city, a British subject, I am sorry to have to report to your Lordship that I have been grievously disappointed in the hope I then expressed, of being able, shortly, to transmit to your Lordship an account of the favourable termination of those proceedings.

Notwithstanding that Mr. Alexander Dickson had executed a deed of enfranchisement in favour of the 3 slaves above-mentioned, and that, after much tergiversation, the Judge of Orphans, Dr. Maximiano Francisco Duarte, to whom the matter stood referred, had issued a formal order that the 3 slaves should be placed at the disposition of Mr. Alexander Dickson, that order remains unexecuted to this day.

I found, indeed, that the Judge of Orphans, as well as the President of this province, General Henrique de Beaurepaire Rohan, had been trifling with me in this matter, as it was reported to me that Colonel da Motta, Mr. Dickson's father-in-law, who holds illegal possession of the 3 slaves in question, was intending to sell those slaves; wherefore I considered it my duty to lose no time in requesting the President to enforce the order of the Court of Orphans, as just mentioned, and in submitting the matter (by the earliest mail) to Her Majesty's Legation at Rio de Janeiro.

I accordingly included a representation on this subject in a despatch which I addressed to the President on the 10th of this month, in which I complained of the needless delays with which I had been met in this matter, and demanded the execution of the Judge's order above referred to.

An extract, being a copy of that portion of the despatch in question which relates to this particular matter, I have the honour to transmit to your Lordship in the Inclosure No. 1.

To this representation I have received no reply. Nevertheless I am under no immediate apprehension that the sale of the slaves will be effected, as slow legal formalities would have to be gone through, and as I addressed a despatch on this subject to Mr. Jerningham, Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Rio de Janeiro, under date of the 17th of this month (a copy of which forms Inclosure No. 2).

As I recapitulated the whole of the case, and stated it in detail, up to the date of that communication, and as your Lordship is already in possession of the antecedent particulars in this matter, I have thought that your Lordship would prefer that I should not re-enter into details.

I have, &c.

Sir,

Foreign Office, December 19, 1856.

WITH reference to your despatch of the 30th of October, I have to inform you that I approve of the steps which you have taken for the purpose of obtaining the reversal of the decree pronounced by the late Acting Judge of Orphans at Pará, which deprived Mr. Dickson of the guardianship of his children and of the custody of his late wife's slaves. I have to acquaint you that I have instructed Mr. Scarlett to make a representation to the Brazilian Government, in conformity with the statement of facts contained in your letter to Mr. Jerningham of the 17th of October, and to request that the authorities of Pará may be directed to restore to Mr. Dickson the guardianship of his children, and the exercise of such rights with regard to his late wife's slaves, as may enable him to carry into effect his intention to secure their manumission.

Consul Vines to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received March 24.)

My Lord,

Pará, January 21, 1857.

I HAVE the honour to inform your Lordship that, during the year ending on the 31st of December, 1856, no vessel has arrived at this port from the coast of Africa, and that no vessel has left this port for the coast of Africa.

The number of slaves who have obtained their freedom during the past year is officially stated at 15 persons; but this return is most imperfect, owing to the fact that very few emancipated slaves are at the pains to "register" their manumission.

The number of slaves imported into this province from the southern ports of Brazil, is officially stated at 212 persons; and the number exported from this province to the other ports of this Empire, is officially stated at 167 persons.

The fugitive slave settlements, mentioned in my despatch of the 28th of January, 1856, continue to be maintained, notwithstanding every effort of the Government against them. I am told that some of them have removed their cantonments to more distant and inaccessible positions; and that the authorities of this province, despairing of any successful foray against them, have resolved not to molest them, unless they should attempt piratical excursions upon the navigable part of the Amazon and its confluent.

Inclosed herewith I have the honour to transmit to your Lordship a Return of the nominal quantities of produce, obtained by means of slave-labour, in the Provinces of Pará and the Amazons, and exported from this port during the past year. But although the declared value of this produce exhibits a great increase over that exported in 1855, no inference can be drawn from this fact respecting the number of slaves employed. The difference of quantities and value has been purely the result of a far more advantageous and prolific season, and of a very active demand in foreign markets (at greatly increased prices) for the produce in question, especially as to cocoa for the French market.

The health of the slave population, since the extinction of the cholera at the close of 1855, has been generally satisfactory; but these provinces have not recovered from the loss of such numbers of their labouring population as fell during the fatal season of 1855; and it is evident, on all hands, that the numbers of slaves owned by the proprietors in these provinces, is still as much reduced as it was at the beginning of last year.

I have, &amp;c.

Consul Vines to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received March 24.)

My Lord,

Pará, January 24, 1857.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's despatch dated the 8th of December last, respecting the unlawful detention of the children and slaves of Mr. Alexander Dickson, notwithstanding a nugatory legal decision in his favour in the Court of Orphans of this city.

I beg leave also to thank your Lordship for the assurance that your Lordship would represent the whole case to the Brazilian Government, unless the law should be promptly complied with, so as to restore Mr. Dickson to the guardianship of his children and slaves, all of whom are minors.

Fortified with your Lordship's above-named despatch, I waited upon the President of this Province, General Henrique de Beaurepaire Rohan, on the 14th of this month, and then reopened the case with his Excellency, by explaining the resolution which your Lordship had taken in the matter.

The President then promised me that he would instruct the Judge of Orphans to do his duty in the matter promptly; and on the 22nd of this month I received a private note, of which the inclosed is a copy, from his Excellency, assuring me that the decision of the Court of Orphans should be definitively pronounced, in conformity with my wishes, as soon as the vacation was over, that is, in the beginning of next month.

On the 23rd of this month, having occasion again to wait upon his Excellency, I took the opportunity of thanking him for his attention respecting Mr. Dickson's case; and I then received from the President a formal permission to use his above-named note as an official communication, and to forward a copy thereof to your Lordship.

The President admitted to me in this last-named interview, that the case of Mr. Dickson was as clear as possible, and that the complainant had been most shamefully treated by the Court of Orphans.

Under these circumstances, I now trust I shall shortly be able to report to your Lordship that this troublesome case has been so far satisfactorily closed, inasmuch as the deed of affranchisement, executed by Mr. Dickson in favour of the 3 young slaves, Jacinto, Lazaro, and Ildefonso (a copy of which deed was inclosed in my despatch of the 29th September, 1856), will come into force.

Consul Cowper to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 16.)

My Lord,

Pernambuco, April 15, 1856.

I DEEM it desirable that the following fact should be brought under the consideration of your Lordship :

A liberal rate of interest upon all monies actually employed, in its formation, has been guaranteed by the Imperial and Provincial Governments to two British subjects, for the purpose of constructing a railway from this city to Agua Preta, and, ultimately, to the Rio San Francisco ; upon this guarantee a Company has been formed in England, the necessary capital subscribed, and the contractor for the formation of the line is actually engaged upon it.

One of the conditions of the Imperial concession was, that none but free people should be employed by the Company, and the prospectus, a copy of which I inclose, holds this fact out as an inducement to the people of England to embark their capital in the undertaking.

I find, however, that the contractors do not intend to carry out this arrangement, and contend that they may employ slaves indirectly, without infringing it ; thus, that if they employ a sub-contractor, being a free man, to construct any portion of the road, and he does so by slave labour, no breach of engagement can be charged against them.

This course of argument appears to me to be an evasion of their contract with the Imperial and Provincial Governments upon the one hand, and with the British public upon the other, and is not supported, as they contend, by Article 12, or even by the plea of necessity, for his Excellency the President informed me yesterday, that he had offered and could obtain for them 1,000 Indians whenever they required them.

I take the liberty of submitting this case for your Lordship's consideration and judgment, for which purpose I inclose copies of the Articles in question, and would press upon your Lordship's attention the fact, that a new and extensive employment of slaves in this Province must inevitably offer additional encouragement to the African slave-traders.

I have, &c.

(Signed) H. AUGUSTUS COWPER.

CLASS B.

bucu, commencing at the port of the Recife* (Pernambuco), and terminating at the junction of the Rivers Una and Pirangi, near the town of Agua Prêta. The line has been carefully surveyed, and estimates have been made by Mr. M. A. Borthwick, assisted by other English engineers of local experience; and responsible contractors have undertaken, for a fixed sum, the construction of the entire line; provisional contracts have also been entered into for the purchase of the land required, at an agreed price. The conclusion of these and other contracts (the extent of the rolling stock being specified in the decrees) enables the Directors to assure the shareholders that the proposed capital of 1,200,000*l.* will not be exceeded; on that sum the Imperial Brazilian Government guarantee an annual interest to the Company of 5 per cent. for ninety years, and the Provincial Government of Pernambuco a further sum of 2 per cent. for the same period, making the minimum interest guaranteed thereon 7 per cent. per annum; the Company being required to complete and stock the line, and provide all means for efficiently working it within the term of six years, to date from the 2nd December, 1855. The Government has the power of purchasing the railway at the end of thirty years, on terms advantageous to the shareholders, by paying over to the Company such an amount of Brazilian stock as will give a rental equal to their mean net revenue during the five most lucrative of the preceding seven years, such revenues accruing either from the working of the line or the interest guaranteed by the Imperial and Provincial Governments.

Two years, ending 31st December, 1857, are allowed for the construction of the earthworks and bridges of the first section of the line, about 18½ miles, but they can be completed and the section opened in about one year. Six years are allowed for the completion of the remaining sections, varying from 12 to 20 miles each; and the Government guarantees come into operation on the opening for traffic of each section; the amount upon which the guarantee is paid bearing such proportion to the whole capital as the length opened bears to the whole line.

The plans have already been approved by the Brazilian Government.

The Company binds itself not to possess slaves, and not to employ in the work of construction other than free people, who, being natives, cannot be recruited, nor obliged to do active service in the National Guard, and, being foreigners, will be guaranteed all the advantages that the law concedes to useful and industrious colonists.

The city of Recife (Pernambuco) has at present a population of 150,000. It lies between Cape St. Roque and Cape St. Augustin, and is the most easterly point of South America. Owing to its geographical position it is unquestionably one of the most important ports of Brazil. The Province of Pernambuco contains above 500,000 of free inhabitants, irrespective of the slave population, and has upwards of 1,000 sugar estates in active operation, which send annually to Recife (Pernambuco) between 65,000 and 70,000 tons of clayed sugar.

Cotton, hides, and rum, in considerable quantities, are also sent from the interior to Recife (Pernambuco) for shipment, as well as large supplies of cattle for the consumption of the city, and for purposes of draft. To this will be added, when the railway is established, timber for ship-building, and ornamental woods, farm produce, and fuel. The imports at Recife (Pernambuco) for the interior of the country, consist of hardware, machinery, every description of cotton and other manufactured goods, jerked beef, salt fish, flour, &c.

The country through which the line will pass is singularly fertile; and, besides sugar plantations, abounds with maize, rice, and manioc fields, and with forests of the most valuable woods. Immediately beyond the cane district, lies the great cotton country of Brazil; and in the neighbourhood of the São Francisco salt is found, and is transported on pack-horses in large quantities to the surrounding provinces. Here, also, are the breeding-farms, where the horses and cattle that supply the coast-country are reared. The proposed railroad will serve for transporting almost the entire produce of the above districts to the market, and by diminishing the demand for labour for transport, will augment that applicable to the cultivation and production of the soil.

At present there is no made road through the country, and but few bridges; the difficulties of transport are consequently very great, and the charges enormous. All produce is forwarded on the backs of horses, except such as is grown in the immediate vicinity of the city, and a very inconsiderable portion that comes by sea. During the dry season the conveyance to market of sugar alone, gives employment to 20,000 horses and 10,000 men. The present rate of freight is 2s. per ton per mile for sugar ; and many articles are much higher.

After the completion of the distance between the Recife (Pernambuco) and the Pirangi, the Company have full powers to continue the railway in the same direction, until it reaches the great Rio de São Francisco, above the falls and rapids of Paulo Affonço, São Felix, &c.* This will open up from the coast the traffic of a great part of the interior of the Empire.

The concession confers many valuable privileges and immunities, amongst which are the following :

- 1st. The grant of the railway in perpetuity.
- 2ndly. A minimum guaranteed interest of 7 per cent. for ninety years.
- 3rdly. No competing line, within 20 miles on either side, can be constructed during the said term of ninety years.
- 4thly. The right to all minerals and precious stones discovered on the line of railway within 20 miles on either side.
- 5thly. The right to import into the Brazils all machinery, plant, and other materials, for the construction and maintenance of the railway, free of duty, during its construction, and for ten years after its completion ; and of coal for sixty years.

The amount of capital to be subscribed in Brazil will, to a great extent, cover the cost of native labour, while the capital subscribed here will be devoted to the purchase of the material required for the permanent way of the railway, as plant, machinery, rolling stock, &c., &c. ; thus an objection sometimes made to foreign railway enterprise, as causing a drain of gold, will not apply in this instance, the money received here being principally expended in this country.

The Company, under their deed of settlement, possess powers to borrow money to the extent of the calls that may at the time be unpaid, and should the Directors, instead of calling up the full amount of 20*l.* per share, deem it expedient, they will avail themselves of these powers.

The statistics obtained relating only to present traffic, show that a larger return than that guaranteed by the Brazilian Government may be confidently calculated on within a short time after the opening of the railway, while the progressive development of the resources of the country, consequent upon the establishment of a line of so much importance, will considerably augment, from year to year, the revenue of the Company.

The capital of 1,200,000*l.* covers the estimates sufficiently to admit of the payment to the shareholders of interest at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum during the construction of the line, and accordingly the shareholders will receive interest at this rate upon the amount of the calls, dating from the day of payment, as well during the construction of the works as afterwards.

No call will exceed 2*l.* per share, with an interval of at least three months between each call, of which one month's previous notice, by advertisement, will be given. But it is contemplated to extend the payment of the calls over as long a period as may be compatible with the interest of the shareholders.

The shareholders have the option of paying up at once 5*l.* per share on the number of shares allotted to them, and on such advances interest at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum will be allowed.

The statutes of the Company will at all times be accessible to the shareholders, at the office of the Company.

Applications for shares to be addressed to the Brokers of the Company, Messrs. Laurence, Son, and Pearce, Auction Mart, London ; and Messrs. Joshua Hutchinson and Sons, 39, Lothbury, London.

For the convenience of subscribers not residing in London, the following Bankers will receive deposits :—

Liverpool.—Messrs. Arthur Heywood, Sons, and Co.

Manchester.—The Bank of Manchester.

Edinburgh, Glasgow.—The Bank of Scotland.

* These Falls exceed in magnitude and extent those of Niagara. The difference of level between the upper and lower navigable sections of the river is 1,000 feet, and the extent of river obstructed by rapids and waterfalls is 300 miles. The São Francisco and its tributaries above the Falls are navigable for large vessels for nearly 1,000 miles.

Each applicant for shares will be required to pay into one of the Bankers of the Company one pound (1*l.*) per share, on the number of shares applied for, in part payment of the deposit of 3*l.*, in exchange for which a voucher will be given. In the event of the Directors allotting less than the whole number applied for, the amount paid in will be appropriated towards the deposit of 3*l.* per share payable on those allotted. Sir,

Foreign Office, June 30, 1856.

I HAVE to inform you that the statements contained in your despatch of the 15th of April, as to the alleged intention of the contractors who have undertaken the construction of the works of the Recife and São Francisco Railway, to employ slave-labour in carrying them out, have been communicated by my direction to the Board of Directors of that line; and I now transmit to you, for your information, a copy of a letter, with its inclosures, which has been received from the Secretary of the Company, in reply.

Inclosure 1 in No. 268.

Mr. Hammond to Mr. Bellamy.

Sir,

Foreign Office, May 28, 1856.

I AM directed by the Earl of Clarendon to request that you will state to the directors of the Recife and São Francisco Pernambuco Railway Company, that it has been represented to his Lordship that the contractors, who have engaged to carry on the works of that railway in Brazil, intend to employ slave-labour in their construction, notwithstanding that such a proceeding would be in direct contravention of the conditions upon which the Brazilian Government granted permission for the construction of the railway, and would also be contrary to the terms of the prospectus issued by the Company in England, by which they bound themselves not to possess slaves, and not to employ in the work of construction other than free people.

Lord Clarendon has been informed that the contractors contend that if they employ a sub-contractor, being a free man, to construct any portion of the road, and if the sub-contractor employs slave-labour, no breach of engagement can be charged against them; but such a course of argument appears to Lord Clarendon to be an evasion of the engagement entered into by the Company with the Brazilian Government and with the British public; and his Lordship trusts that the directors of the Company will take such steps as they may deem best calculated to prevent their agents from employing slave-labour either directly or indirectly in the works of the railway, as any new and extensive employment of slaves in Brazil must inevitably offer additional encouragement to the African slave-traders.

I am, &c.

*Recife and São Francisco Pernambuco Railway Company,
98, Gresham House, Old Broad Street,
London, June 17, 1856.*

Sir,

I HAVE not failed to lay before the Board of this Company the communication dated the 28th of May, which, by Lord Clarendon's directions, you addressed to me.

In reply, I am directed by the Board to transmit to you, for Lord Clarendon's information, a copy of the clause in the Contract by which the directors have bound the contractor to fulfil to the utmost every obligation imposed on the Company by the Imperial Government of Brazil. I have also to request you will bring under Lord Clarendon's notice the passage I have marked in the accompanying report of a speech delivered by the Chairman of the Board, at the first meeting of the shareholders of the Company, on the 22nd of April last.

These two extracts will, the directors are persuaded, satisfy Lord Clarendon of their good faith on the point to which he has called their attention.

At the same time, I am desired by the Board to state, that they had not heard of, nor do they believe the existence of, any such intention on the part of the contractor, who is an Englishman of undoubted character as well as respectability. From the brief period which has elapsed since he left England for Pernambuco, it appears to the Board scarcely possible that any information of a trustworthy character could have reached London at the date of your letter as to his alleged intentions; and equally strange how such a defence as that contained in your letter should have been anticipated.

The Board have not, however, failed to communicate to him what they cannot but regard as a serious charge; they have also directed the attention of their Treasurer, Major the Honourable S. P. Vereker, the authorized agent of the Company in Brazil, to the subject.

The directors would respectfully and earnestly request of Lord Clarendon not to give encouragement or credence to every rumour that may reach the Foreign Office from Pernambuco, where, as in other places, there are doubtless to be found persons who originate, or give currency to, reports without either ascertaining on what grounds they have to rest, or reflecting that their tendency, as in this case, might be to prejudice Her Majesty's Government against an enterprize which, if allowed to be successfully carried out, must greatly promote the objects of the Imperial Government of Brazil, by securing access to the interior of the country, whereby its resources may be developed, inducement afforded for immigration of colonists, and a field opened for the employment of free labour in lieu of that until recently supplied by the Slave Trade.

Extract from the Speech of the Chairman of the Recife and São Francisco Pernambuco Railway, April 2, 1856.

ONE of the great objects of the Brazilian Government in introducing railways is to facilitate immigration and the supply of free labour; a subject in which every Englishman must feel considerable interest. True it is that the calamity of slavery still exists there; but it cannot be denied that the Government of Brazil have behaved most honourably in executing the Treaties they have entered into for the suppression of the Slave Trade. I have ventured to make this incidental allusion to the question of slavery in the Brazils, inasmuch as some of us have been connected with what is known as the anti-slavery party in this country; and I think it rather explains our motives for having become connected with a railway in a country where slavery exists, believing that the introduction of railways is one of the best and most efficient means that can be employed, not only for developing the resources and capabilities of a country, but for promoting civilization and ameliorating and improving the condition of the people. That, at all events, is the view I take of the question.

Consul Cowper to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received September 8.)

My Lord,

Pernambuco, August 16, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's despatch of the 30th June, inclosing me the copy of a letter from Mr. Bellamy, Secretary to the Recife and São Francisco Railway Company.

The tenour of this letter greatly surprised me, for, as I had made your Lordship a mere statement of facts, transmitting copies of the Company's prospectus, the 5th Article of the Imperial Concession, and the 12th Article of the Statutes, which appeared to me to be in contradiction to the opinions and practice of their Agents here, I conceived that, unless those facts could be denied, my conclusion was incontrovertible. I will, however, state the case in greater detail than in my despatch of the 15th April.

According to the 5th Article of the Imperial Concession, the Messrs. de Mornay are bound not to employ slaves in the construction of their proposed railway. These gentlemen dispose of their concession to a Company, who so perfectly understand this that they bring the fact prominently forward in the prospectus which they offer to the British public. The Company contract with Mr. George Furniss for the formation of the railway; and, in October last, two gentlemen, Messrs. Gardner and Lowden, arrived here, immediately commencing operations; the first sod having been previously turned, in presence of all the authorities, upon the 7th September.

Upon hearing that slaves were engaged upon the line, I inquired of these two gentlemen by what authority this was done; and they replied, by Mr. Furniss', who had the right of doing so if the slaves were indirectly engaged; and, as your Lordship will perceive by the inclosures, this fact has since been confirmed by Mr. Lowden.

Subsequently to this, Mr. Alfred de Mornay, one of the Goncessionnaires and a Director of the Company, reached here; Mr. Furniss himself came out; and Mr. Tucker arrived as the representative of the chief engineer. Upon speaking to these gentlemen respecting the employment of slaves, the question assumed a more decided and, I may say, conflicting character, by Mr. de Mornay declaring that the contractor had the right of employing slaves directly or indirectly—in fact, whom he pleased—under the authority of the 12th Article of the Statutes, which he took the trouble to bring for my perusal; and when I observed that I did not think the intention of that Article was to apply to the condition of the labourers, or, indeed, to labourers at all, he replied that, as he had obtained the privilege himself, he of course knew what was intended by it.

This, of course, was unanswerable; but how can it be reconciled with the statement in the prospectus, or the tone of Mr. Bellamy's letter?

I have since spoken with Mr. Vereker, who now represents the Company, and who has convinced himself, by inquiry, of the employment of slaves upon the line, but who expresses an opinion that the Directors, many of whom are leading members of the anti-Slave Trade movement, do not claim, nor do they conceive that they possess, the right of employing slaves. If this be the case, they cannot have conferred a right upon another which they did not possess themselves; and yet Mr. de Mornay, one of the Concessionnaires and a Director, thinks otherwise, and Mr. Furniss, the contractor, agrees with him.

Mr. Bayliss, who now represents Mr. Furniss, declines the expression of an opinion upon his right, but he assures me that no slave is now employed upon the works.

The question, however, is one of principle rather than of fact. Is the railway to be completed under the obligations of the 5th section, and the prospectus, or under the privilege of the 12th Article? Of course it is greatly to be desired that the Company will abide by the pledge they have voluntarily made to the public; but if they have rights under the 12th Article, and find it impossible to complete their great undertaking without the employment of slaves, it were better openly to avow those privileges, and their intention to exercise them, for there exists no law of which I am aware which prohibits British subjects (not officers of the Government) from so doing.

It is very far from my intention to prejudice Her Majesty's Government against the undertaking; on the contrary, it has my best wishes for its success, and, whenever it may require it, shall have my hearty co-operation.

I have, &c.

Sir,

Pernambuco, August 1, 1856.

YOU will oblige me by stating if, during the period of your administration of the railway works here, you employed slaves, directly or indirectly, upon them; and, if so, whether you did so upon your own responsibility, or in consequence of orders received from Mr. Furniss.

You will also be good enough to state to me, as far as your recollection will enable you, the tenour of an argument which took place at my house in your presence, betwixt me upon the one part, and Messrs. De Mornay and Tucker upon the other, respecting the legality and propriety of thus employing slaves.

I am, &c.

Inclosure 2 in No. 272.

Mr. Lowden to Consul Cowper.

Dear Sir,

Pernambuco, August 2, 1856.

IN answer to your letter of the 1st instant, it was in consequence of instructions I received from Mr. G. Furniss, that I employed slaves in the construction of the railway. The letters containing such instructions I am unable to produce, owing to Mr. G. Furniss having surreptitiously obtained possession of them; but in one the words were these, "Tell Lowden to go down with De Mornay, and make arrangements at Villa de Cabo with the slave-owners for the employment of a thousand of their slaves, for De Mornay tells me that there are plenty to be got there." This letter was dated from London, March 8, 1853, signed by G. Furniss, and addressed to R. B. Gardner, his agent here.

On the 4th of April, at your house, in company with Messrs. A. de Mornay and Tucker, an argument took place as to the legality of the Company to employ slaves. You told De Mornay that should slaves be employed upon the line, it was your duty to represent it to your Government, as the prospectus stated that no slave-labour was to be employed, and that the Company, according to their concession, could not employ slave-labour; and being an English Company and British subjects, they could not possess slaves. De Mornay stated that he had been to Rio to get that clause altered, and that the contractor was not bound "not to employ slaves." You considered that the contractor was a servant of the Company, and could not legally employ slaves, having stated in their prospectus that they would not do so.

I am &c.

Consul Cowper to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received November 11.)

My Lord,

Pernambuco, October 9, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to report with much satisfaction that no further attempt at Slave Trade has been made within the district of this Consulate during the past quarter: indeed, the energetic measures adopted by the Government in consequence of the Serinhaem exposures, have rendered any such attempt utterly hopeless; but I do not entertain the slightest doubt that the vessels reported by the Acting Vice-Consul at Paraiba to have communicated with the shore, and to have received provisions from it, were engaged in that infamous Traffic, and proceeded, in all probability, to Cuba.

The Portuguese schooner "Ceres," as your Lordship will perceive by the inclosed Return, was the only vessel which left here during that period for the coast of Africa. There are circumstances of suspicion attached to this vessel, which nothing but the fact of her being consigned to a British mercantile firm can modify. She sailed from here direct for Angola in the month of November last, having left New York in October; the master was most urgent in requesting me to give him a certificate of the legality of his voyage, which I declined doing, and the Admiral, who was here at the time, approved of my determination. I subsequently received confidential information that it had been the intention of the master to have shipped a cargo of slaves, but that, foiled by the proximity of the cruisers, he returned here with one of palm oil, &c. He sailed again for Angola upon the 6th of July last, Messrs. Rostron, Rooker and Co. signing the requisite bond for 18,000 milreis (about 2,000*l.*). Upon this occasion also the master asked me for a certificate, which I again refused; I also declined certifying any document connected with the vessel, as, in addition to her small cargo of sugar and rum, I found that she had 407 empty casks or shooks on board.

I trust your Lordship will approve of these proceedings.

I have, &c.

Consul Cowper to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received November 11.)

My Lord,

Pernambuco, October 17, 1856.

I CANNOT abstain from recurring to the subject of the coasting Slave Trade carried on in this Empire, that your Lordship's good offices may be exerted in defence of that race, which has suffered, is suffering, and I fear has yet to suffer, such unmerited and inhuman treatment.

One of the arguments advanced in favour of the African Slave Trade is, that the slaves are removed from a state of barbarism and paganism, to one of civilization and Christianity, and notwithstanding the practical untruth of this assertion (for no slave ever made a further acquaintance with civilization than enabled him to contrast his own miserable state with that of the dominant race; or with the blessings of Christianity, further than the initiatory act of baptism), I am willing to allow the argument such merit as it deserves.

But it can have neither weight nor place in discussing the coasting Slave Trade; which presents its naked and corrupt body to the view without a healthy or redeeming spot. Children are torn from their parents, parents from their children, the tie of husband and wife, which no man is "to put asunder," is severed like the Gordian knot, the tenderest feelings of our nature, the love of country, with its thousand associations of home, love, or friendship, are all violated and disregarded, and the unfortunate descendant of the African victim finds that, notwithstanding the Christianity and civilization of his new country, the wrongs of his race have been transported across the Atlantic to be perpetuated in him.

A very extensive and increasing trade in slaves, amounting to many thousands annually, is now carried on betwixt Rio de Janeiro and the northern provinces of Brazil; the traders make periodical visits, and return with their unresisting victims, indifferent alike to the tears of the women and the curses of the men. Many of the young females are bought by these rascals for the express purpose of public prostitution in the capital: a case of this description fell under my own personal knowledge, when 2,400 milreis (nearly 300*l.*) were offered for twin sisters of fourteen years of age, which I am happy to be able to add their owner refused. A woman who had born thirteen children, and thus considerably increased the means of her master, is now threatened with eternal separation from them, by being sold for the south by this same master; and a young mulatto man was thus recently sold by his own father, a Portuguese. It is unnecessary to multiply these cases of human suffering, well worthy of the touching humanity of a Beecher Stowe.

I am aware that Her Majesty's Government possesses no right of interference in this essentially internal Traffic, but surely no Government could feel offence at the friendly suggestions of another with which it is at amity, when those suggestions are based upon the purest grounds of humanity and justice. This is not a question of political rights, or even of social rights, but one of human rights. Could not a law be enacted guaranteeing to the slave the right of country? for to him there can exist no real difference betwixt a voyage of 2,000 miles from Pará to Rio de Janeiro, and one of 2,000 miles from the coast of Africa to Brazil. The stringent provincial laws respecting the exportation of slaves, and the duty of 100 milreis, are insufficient to stop the evil, and are oftentimes evaded. Could not the law forbid the separation of man and wife, of parent and child, at least beyond the precincts of the province in which they reside? This would not only be an act of humanity, but of policy; it would dry the tears of thousands, and fill their hearts with contentment, and it would stop that drain upon the labour of the northern provinces which cannot fail to be shortly felt.

It would, indeed, be only a very small instalment of the crowning natural right of liberty, but it would render so many defenceless and oppressed creatures comparatively happy, and is so entirely devoid of all political bearing, that I cannot believe, were your Lordship to suggest such a measure, that the Imperial Government, with its otherwise mild and humane laws, and its enlightened and liberal course of policy, would refuse so just and charitable a proposition.

I have, &amp;c.

The Earl of Shelburne to Mr. Bellamy.

Sir,

Foreign Office, November 7, 1856.

WITH reference to your letter to the Earl of Clarendon of the 17th of June last, stating that the Directors of the Pernambuco Railway Company did not believe that the contractor for the works of that company intended to employ slaves upon those works, I am directed by Lord Clarendon to acquaint you, for the information of the directors, that his Lordship has instructed Mr. Cowper, Her Majesty's Consul at Pernambuco, to make inquiries as to this matter, and has received a despatch from that gentleman, by which it appears that he required Mr. Gardner and Mr. Lowden, two agents of the company, to state by what authority slaves were engaged to work upon the railway in question; and that Mr. Lowden informed him that this was done in consequence of written instructions from Mr. G. Furness, the contractor for the works, who directed Mr. Lowden to go with M. de Mornay to Villa de Cabo, and to make arrangements with the slave-owners there for the employment of 1,000 of their slaves.

Lord Clarendon desires me to remind you that the company are bound both by their engagements towards the Brazilian Government, and by the terms upon which their undertaking was recommended to the public in this country, "not to possess slaves, and not to employ in the work of construction other than free people;" and his Lordship trusts that the directors will see the necessity of instituting a searching inquiry into the facts of the charge which has been made as to the employment of slaves by their contractor.

Mr. Bellamy to the Earl of Shelburne.

*Recife and São Francisco Pernambuco Railway Company,
155, Gresham House, Old Broad Street,
London, November 12, 1856.*

My Lord,

IN accordance with my letter to your Lordship of the 8th instant, that which your Lordship did me the honour to address to me on the 7th, for the information of the Board, has been laid by me before them:

I am directed by them, in answer to it, to state that Mr. Gardner and Mr. Lowden are not agents of this Company.

That Mr. Furness, the contractor, happening to be at this moment in this country, the Board availed themselves of the opportunity of requesting his attendance before them, in order that they might learn from him what were the facts of the case, with reference to the statement which appears to have been made to your Lordship by Mr. Cowper, upon the authority of Mr. Lowden; viz., that the latter was directed by Mr. Furness "to go with M. de Mornay to Villa de Cabo, and to make arrangements with the slave-owners there for the employment of 1,000 of their slaves."

That, in reply to this, Mr. Furness informs the Board that the statement is not true; he denies ever having given any authority, either in writing or by word of mouth, for the engagement or employment of slaves upon the works. That Mr. Gardner and Mr. Lowden went out to the Brazils in his employ, but left it in May last, having acted for him for three months only.

The Board learn with some surprise, from Mr. Furness, that a heavy Consular tax, per head, is, as he informs them, levied by Mr. Cowper upon the introduction of labourers from this country.

They trust that Lord Clarendon will give direction that this impost shall be abandoned; and will point out to Mr. Cowper the inadvertence into which he has been led in communicating to his Lordship information so erroneous, and so calculated to leave upon his mind impressions unfavourable to this Company.

The Board regret that Lord Clarendon should have felt it necessary again to remind the Directors of "their engagements towards the Brazilian Government," or of "the terms upon which their undertaking was recommended to the people of this country."

Sir,

Foreign Office, November 18, 1856.

I HAVE laid before the Earl of Clarendon your letter of the 12th instant, in reply to one which, by his Lordship's directions, I addressed to you on the 7th of November, respecting the employment of slaves in the construction of the works of the Recife and São Francisco Railway Company; and with reference to that part of your letter in which you state that Mr. Furness, the contractor for the works, denies having given any authority, either in writing or by word of mouth, for the engagement or employment of slaves upon the works of the railway, I am directed by Lord Clarendon to transmit to you, to be laid before the Directors, the accompanying copies of a correspondence between Mr. Cowper, Her Majesty's Consul at Pernambuco, and Mr. Lowden,* an engineer who was for some time employed on the works of the Company, and from this officer's letter it would appear that the charge against the agents of the Company of having employed slave-labour is not without foundation.

I am to add that Mr. Cowper will be called upon for an explanation with regard to the Consular tax stated to be levied by him upon the introduction of labourers from this country, and as soon as his answer shall have been received, a further communication on this matter will be addressed to you.

*Recife and São Francisco Pernambuco Railway Company,

London, December 2, 1856.*

My Lord,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's letter of the 18th instant, addressed to me by direction of the Earl of Clarendon, and covering a correspondence between Mr. Cowper, Her Majesty's Consul at Pernambuco, and Mr. T. D. Lowden.

The Board of Directors have not failed to give to this communication all the consideration it deserves, and having desired Mr. Furness to be in attendance for the purpose of informing the Board upon the allegations made by Mr. Lowden, I am directed to offer Lord Clarendon the following explanations, which the Board are of opinion will completely dispose of the case which Mr. Cowper has deemed it to be his duty to transmit to the Foreign Office.

I have first of all to refer to an allusion in my former letter, viz., that Mr. Lowden went to the Brazils, and after three months Mr. Furness dispensed with Mr. Lowden's services, and to point out to your Lordship that the tone and spirit of his letter to Mr. Cowper indicate the existence of unfriendly, if not vindictive, feelings towards his late employer. The ill-will which existed at the date of this correspondence on the part of Mr. Lowden to Mr. Furness, the Board understand was notorious at Pernambuco amongst the English residents; and the reliance which Mr. Cowper placed on his testimony under such circumstances, appears to the Board to have been unwarranted.

Mr. Furness affirms, that the quotation affected to be given by Mr. Lowden from a letter of his, is garbled and incorrect; that the allegation of his having obtained possession of any letter "surreptitiously," is an untruth—the fact being, that letters addressed by Mr. Furness in the course of business to Mr. Gardner when in his employ as a surveyor, were, when Mr. Gardner's services were dispensed with by Mr. Furness, as a matter of course required to be given up.

Mr. Furness affirms positively, that since the commencement of the works the labourers employed consist indifferently of mulattoes, blacks, Indians, and * Inclosures 1 and 2 in No. 272.

Portuguese, and are worked in gangs, as in England, under the direction of skilled labourers as foremen or superintendents :

That they are, and have been from the first, engaged individually, at daily wages, which are paid to them, individually, in money, either weekly, or in the course of the week, as wished by themselves :

That each man finds his own victuals, is subject to no punishment at the hands of any one, is in no way, so far as Mr. Furness knows, under the control or authority of any one while engaged in his service, except that of himself or of his staff, and is employed or discharged, at any time, at pleasure :

That in fact the whole of the men employed upon the works are engaged, paid, treated, worked, and discharged in all respects as they would be in England, there being foremen or superintendents according to the number of men superintended.

For the correctness of the above statement, which was read over to him in draft in the presence of the Board, Mr. Furness distinctly vouches.

Scattered through the Province of Pernambuco, there exists a large body of free labourers of the races already referred to. The ordinary rate of wages paid in the interior for their labour averages from 1s. 6d. to 2s. a-day in English money. Mr. Furness, however, informs the Board that the rate of wages he pays for unskilled labour on his works is 2s. 3d. a-day. This increased rate of payment is, your Lordship will at once see, calculated to draw to his works all the able-bodied free labourers in the district; and another inducement to obtain employment under him, is the exemption of all native free labourers so engaged from liability to military recruitment and active service in the National Guard, which otherwise press heavily on free labourers.

And with reference to the assertion of Mr. Furness, that the letter from Mr. Lowden to Mr. Cowper, a copy of which accompanied my letter to you of the 18th ultimo, contains a garbled and incorrect version of the letter from Mr. Furness therein referred to, I am directed by the Earl of Clarendon to observe that the production of the letter in question would be the most satisfactory mode of testing the accuracy of Mr. Lowden's statement.

My Lord,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's letter of yesterday's date.

I have the authority of the Directors for stating that the Board have, out of respect to the Earl of Clarendon, taken much trouble in order to satisfy his Lordship that slaves were not employed on the works of the railway. The result of their inquiries was communicated to your Lordship in my last letter.

They decline further to pursue that part of the subject to which your Lordship's letter of to-day refers. They have no right to call upon the contractor to produce his private papers; and, even if they had the right, they do not consider themselves justified, for the attainment of no practical object, in taking a step which might have the effect of bringing him into collision with a person who is no longer in his service, and who is evidently influenced by no friendly feelings towards him.

Pernambuco, November 18, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to inform your Lordship that M. de Macedo has informed me that the statement contained in my despatch of the 29th ultimo was correct, and that the 3 Africans had escaped from the engenho Sibirô, belonging to Senhor José Francisco Accioli Lins, then a prisoner for the Serinhaem robbery; and I have now to communicate to your Lordship that that tedious and lamentable affair has at length been brought to a conclusion, in as extraordinary and unsatisfactory a manner as it has been conducted from its commencement.

Upon the 7th instant, Colonel Drummond was honourably acquitted, by the Court of Appeal, of the charges so absurdly and vindictively brought against him by the late President; and upon the 15th his son Dr. Drummond, and Manoel Fidelis, the fisherman, were also absolved by the same tribunal; but these acts of dilatory justice were also accompanied by the liberation of Senhor Francisco da Paula Cavalcanti Wanderley, surnamed Chico Caçador, and Senhor José Francisco Accioli Lins, surnamed Cazumba, the owner of the engenho Sibirô, and the robbers of the Africans.

M. de Macedo has, as your Lordship is aware, effectually prevented my addressing him upon this subject until I had received further instructions; but I would respectfully submit for your Lordship's consideration, whether the faith of Treaties is maintained, or the laws of Brazil honestly executed, by the above result. Let me briefly recapitulate the facts of this case:

1st. The Government was informed of an intended landing of slaves at Serinhaem, but when the vessel arrived at the very spot designated three months afterwards, the cruising had been suspended, and every police authority withdrawn from the district.

2ndly. Colonel João Manoel de Barros was declared to be the consignee of the slaver.

3rdly. Chico Caçador and Cazumba boarded the vessel, and stole from her 49 slaves.

4thly. Colonel Drummond, his son, and Manoel Fidelis, captured the slaver, and delivered her, with her remaining 162 Africans, to the Government.

The consequences of these acts to the parties concerned were:

1st. The Government, for their neglect of duty, escape with absolute impunity.

2ndly. Colonel Manoel de Barros is not arrested.

3rdly. Chico Caçador and Cazumba are arrested; the first, six months after the commission of his crime, and the latter, eight months; and they are now both unconditionally liberated.

4thly. Dr. Antonio Drummond and Manoel Fidelis are arrested immediately after their praiseworthy action, are refused bail for a bailable offence, and suffer eleven months' imprisonment; Colonel Drummond is arrested eight months after his, and suffers four months' imprisonment: they are now honourably acquitted, but without a word of compensation for their enormous losses.

5thly. Twenty-six Africans still remain in slavery, a reward to their fortunate robbers.

Is this an encouragement to Slave Trade, or not?

Colonel Drummond intends to lay his wrongs personally before His Imperial Majesty.

For myself, I can only say that I have been actuated in all my acts during this painful affair by neither personal enmity upon the one hand, nor friendship upon the other; but by a sense of duty, and a love of liberty and of my fellow-creatures. I have been censured by a Liverpool journal for attacking "one of our best customers," and by the Brazilian, in a manner which I did not expect from its generosity or deserve from my antecedents, for I prize Constitutional Government too much not to show towards it a partiality which I feel, and do justice to its many merits when in my power; but there still remains to me one thing of which no one can rob me, and that is the heartfelt satisfaction which I shall ever feel at having been instrumental to the liberation of many of my fellow-creatures and their descendants from hereditary slavery, and in having defended, to the best of my ability, an honourable and persecuted family.

MR. JERNINGHAM, my Lord, was kind enough to observe in one of his despatches to the Brazilian Government, that "he believed me to be a gentleman of honour, incapable of making a statement which I did not believe," and I now declare to your Lordship, upon my honour, that I have never ventured an accusation in this case, without having been fully convinced of its truth: all have been proved to be true by the decisions of the tribunals but the one great vital point in the affair, namely, the complicity of the ex-President; and this I have been prevented from proving by obstacles presented by the Provincial Government utterly impossible for me to have overcome; but to show your Lordship that I scorn to attack any man without giving him the opportunity of defence, I would request your Lordship to propose to the Brazilian Government to sanction the appointment of a Mixed Commission to sit in Pernambuco, to inquire into the conduct of the late President and the truth of my charges in reference to the Serinhaem affair; and I will abide by the result.

I HAVE received your despatch of the 22nd of December of last year, suggesting that Her Majesty's Government should propose to the Brazilian Government to sanction the appointment of a Mixed Commission to sit in Pernambuco, in order to investigate the conduct of the late President of that province, and the truth of your statements with regard to the Serinhaem affair, and in which you state that you will be ready to abide the result of the proposed inquiry.

I have to inform you that I have instructed Mr. Scarlett to make such a proposal to the Brazilian Minister for Foreign Affairs, in answer to the charges made by the Imperial Government against you, and as a proof that Her Majesty's Government are desirous that your conduct, which they think honourable and praiseworthy, should be investigated.

Consul Cowper to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received February 14.)

My Lord,

Pernambuco, January 6, 1857.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's despatch of the 8th ultimo, together with copies of a correspondence which has taken place, by your Lordship's command, between Lord Shelburne and the Secretary of the Pernambuco Railway Company.

This correspondence is very little creditable either to the Company or to the contractor. In Mr. Bellamy's letter to Lord Shelburne of the 12th November, he states "that Mr. Furniss declares Mr. Lowden's statement to be untrue; that he denies ever having given any authority, either in writing or by word of mouth, for the engagement or employment of slaves upon the works; and that Mr. Gardner and Mr. Lowden were employed by him for three months only."

Your Lordship having directed a copy of Mr. Lowden's letter to me to be forwarded to the Board, Mr. Bellamy, in his reply of the 2nd December, states that the quotation made by Mr. Lowden from Mr. Furniss' letter "is garbled and incorrect;" and when your Lordship naturally suggested that the production of the original letter would at once decide upon the accuracy of Mr. Lowden's statement, Mr. Bellamy, in his letter of the 6th December, declines doing so. The conclusion is obvious, namely, that Mr. Lowden's statement would have been confirmed, and not refuted, by the production.

It is not a fact that Messrs. Gardner and Lowden were employed for three months only by Mr. Furniss, and then dismissed; they were engaged, I believe, provisionally for three months, but they were actually employed for eight, when they voluntarily resigned.

I must, nevertheless, in justice to the contractor, repeat, that I believe no slaves to have been employed upon the works since May last, when Mr. Bayliss took charge of them; and, moreover, that it is his desire to finish the whole undertaking, if possible, by free labour.

It is, however, my duty to state to your Lordship my fear that the Article No. 12, obtained by Mr. De Mornay subsequent to the original Concession, does give the Company (strictly speaking, the contractor) the right of employing slaves; and that, consequently, it would be no breach of their engagements to the Imperial Government, or any infraction of the laws of England, were they to do so: but that which astonishes me, is that a Company possessing a privilege of this sort should have recommended itself to the notice of the British public by an assertion at variance with this fact.

Perhaps your Lordship would allow me to suggest that the opinion of the Imperial Government itself may be taken respecting this right, either of the Company or the contractor, for it has been argued that although the Company may not, the contractor may, employ slaves. M. Carvalho Moreira, who is ex officio a Director of the Company, may perhaps be enabled to answer the question authoritatively.

Consul Cowper to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received February 14.)

My Lord,

Pernambuco, January 14, 1857.

I SOUGHT an interview yesterday with M. de Macedo to arrange certain details respecting the treatment of British subjects at the Lazaretto, when his Excellency informed me that he had been ordered to inquire into the particulars of a complaint which I had made to your Lordship respecting the employment of slaves upon the railway.

I recounted the facts of the case to his Excellency, which it is unnecessary for me again to repeat to your Lordship in detail. I told him that slaves had been employed upon the railway when under the direction of Messrs. Gardner and Lowden; that these gentlemen, the Chief Engineer, and Mr. Alfred de Mornay, one of the Concessionnaires, not only did not deny this, but insisted upon their right to do so; that as the Company had recommended itself to the British public, chiefly, for the very reason that slaves were not to be employed, I considered this assumption of the right so extraordinary and so important that I deemed it an imperative duty to report the fact to your Lordship. That upon the arrival of Mr. Furniss and Mr. Bayliss, these gentlemen finding that free labour was obtainable, ceased to employ slaves, and I believed had continued to do so to the present day; but they insist upon the right with the same tenacity as the others, and in this they are supported by M. E. de Mornay, the joint Concessionnaire and Managing Director of the Company, upon the apparently unanswerable ground, that he himself obtained the introduction of the 12th Article of the Statutes to enable the contractor to employ slaves in case of need.

The President appeared to be much surprised at this statement: he assured me that nothing could be further from the intention of the Imperial Government than to permit the employment of slaves even in the most indirect manner; it indeed had no power to do so, for the Concession, which specifically forbids it, was granted upon terms approved by the Legislature, and those terms could not be invaded by any subsequent statutes; he begged me to point out Article 12, which I did, and his Excellency, taking my first view of its meaning, declared that it did not apply to labourers at all; he added that if M. de Mornay could speak authoritatively upon this point as Concessionnaire, so in like manner could he, as the Minister who had negotiated the Concession and the statutes. He gave me an instance of the determination of the Imperial Government, to prevent all evasions or quibbles: the contractors, carrying the argument ad absurdum, had urged that the enactments of the Concession were unnecessarily stringent upon the subject of the indirect employment of slaves, and inquired if they sent a piece of iron to a foundry for repair, and the work was performed by a slave, if they would be liable to the penalty, and the Imperial Government had disapproved of his having answered in the negative.

M. de Macedo promised to write by this mail to the Company in this sense; and he added, "If you become aware, Senhor Consul, of the further employment of slaves upon the railway, you need not complain to your own Government: do so to me, and I will enforce the penalty."

At the same interview his Excellency confirmed the reports of the expected arrival of some Portuguese slavers.

YOUR Lordship will be good enough to bear in mind that the Drummonds have been honourably and unanimously acquitted by the Judges of the Court of Appeal of all improper conduct in the Serinhaem affair.

I request your Lordship also to recollect that upon the 2nd July last, M. de Macedo in addressing me respecting Colonel Drummond made use of the following expression: "He may perhaps justify himself completely, or perhaps he will find a last resource in the clemency of the Emperor;" and that in my accompanying despatch of the 17th of July, I stated it to be my conviction that the Government had determined upon this as the course to be followed.

I have now heard that the Juiz de Direito of Rio Formoso has declared that Colonel Drummond, at the time of his capture of the palhabote, was the Delegate of the Police; that he did not perform that duty with sufficient alacrity; and that for this omission he condemns him to be deprived of his appointment (which in point of fact he has never held since 1849), to be rendered incapable of being employed for the future, and to be fined one-half of a year's income! This, the loss of 10,000*l.*, and five months' imprisonment, are the rewards of this venerable and honourable gentleman for delivering 181 of his fellow-creatures from captivity.

In a public point of view, I beg your Lordship to observe, that if anything can be more condemnatory of the late President than another, it is the decision that Colonel Drummond was, at the period in question, Delegate of the Police; if so, how can the ex-President satisfactorily account for not having given notice to the chief police authority of the district of the expected arrival of the slaver?

No. 290.

Consul Cowper to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received March 17.)

(Extract.)

Pernambuco, January 24, 1857.

I HAVE the honour to forward to your Lordship the following report upon Slave Trade and slavery for the year 1856 :—

During that period no attempt at foreign Slave Trade has proved successful, but that an extensive and regular organization amongst the traders for the renewal of the Traffic, embracing in its ramifications this country, the United States, Portugal, and Africa, was formed at the end of 1855, there can now exist no doubt. The drain upon the northern provinces of the Empire by the increase of the coasting Slave Trade to the south; the destructive effects of the cholera morbus upon the labouring population; and the impunity calculated upon, from the supposition that the vigilance of the Government would have relaxed at a part of its coast so long free from these pirates' visits, in all probability gave rise to this combination. Its first overt acts were those of the "Mary E. Smith" and the Serinhaem slaver, but the first was captured by a Brazilian cruizer and carried to Bahia, and the latter by a private gentleman of large landed property upon the coast of Serinhaem, Colonel Gaspar de Menezes Vasconcelles de Drummond.

The admission of the captain of the latter slaver, that he had left other vessels loading upon the coast of Africa belonging to the same owners, the appearance of three suspicious vessels upon the shores of the Provinces of Paraiba and Rio Grande do Norte, and, still more recently, of another upon that of Alagoas, proves that, had it not been for some opposing and unlooked-for causes, the Traffic would have been resuscitated in all its vigour.

I must beg your Lordship to consider the affair under the following separate heads :—

1. The speculation;
2. The capture;
3. The robbery of the Africans; and
4. The conduct of the authorities.

1. In the speculation, Colonel João Manoel de Barros, a proprietor already prosecuted for a former slave-trade transaction, has confessed himself, in the public journals, to have been her consignee, notwithstanding which, he is still at liberty, nor has he ever been arrested, and, in fact, no inquiry has been made into the affair as a speculation, or who were the parties concerned in it.

2. In the capture, Colonel Drummond, Dr. Antonio Drummond, and Manoel Fidelis were concerned, and they have all suffered a lengthened imprisonment, although now honourably acquitted.

3. In the robbery of the Africans, Chico Caçador and Cazumba were concerned, and these men have received 22,000 milreis (about 2,500*l.*) from the ex-authorities for the delivery of one half of the Africans whom they stole; they retain the remainder in perpetual slavery, and after having been condemned to six years' imprisonment, are set at liberty without having endured a month of that imprisonment.

4. The responsible authorities were the ex-President, the ex-Chief of the Police, and, according to a recent decision, Colonel Drummond: the two first suspected, upon the strongest grounds, of connivance in the speculation, have never been questioned; on the contrary, the former has been returned a member of the Imperial Legislature, solely through the influence of the Government; and the second has been elevated to the bench; whilst Colonel Drummond, who liberated 181 of his fellow creatures, has been imprisoned, persecuted, and condemned to deprivation of office, incapacitated from holding another, and fined one-half of a year's income, for having failed in his duty.

In a general point of view the African Slave Trade may be said to have ceased to exist in Brazil, and I most willingly attest the honest desire of the Government to suppress foreign Slave Trade, and to supply the wants of labour by other means and from other sources.

But there exists another species of Slave Trade, not less cruel in its details than the African, which is more difficult to deal with, inasmuch as it is permitted by law, is supported by the influence of the proprietors, the interests of the vagabonds engaged in it, and is beyond the legitimate sphere of foreign interference; I mean the coasting Slave Trade, to which I have already called your Lordship's attention. The coasting traders have their establishments at the ports, and purchase their slaves from men of the lowest order, generally horse-dealers, who bring them down from the interior; this is the real source whence the coasting traffic is derived.

Your Lordship may imagine the state of demoralization into which this trade, if encouraged or even permitted, will eventually plunge the rural population; man-stealing, the sale of children by their parents, and all the horrors of which we read as occurring in Africa, will be re-enacted here, and I am sure that Brazil has a greater interest in the suppression of this native trade than even that with the coast of Africa, whether she regards her progress in civilization, or feels a proper desire for the happiness and welfare of her people: otherwise, a native barbarism will be engendered more fatal to her prosperity than any she could import from abroad.

To the honour of her legislators, however, a measure has already been proposed to render the export of slaves from one province to another illegal: I regret to add without success; but as reforms are usually tardy under Constitutional Governments, I do not despair of its final triumph. The Provincial Government, dreading the effects of the loss of labour which results from this continual drain upon their population, have enacted stringent laws to check it; in this province the export duty upon a slave has been raised to 200 milreis (about 22*l.*), and the number allowed to accompany their masters as domestic servants is strictly limited: the law is nevertheless evaded to a very great extent, so much so that duty was paid upon only 37 slaves during the whole of last year, and yet passports were granted to 606, who actually left the province during the same period; and it is notorious that as many as 70 have left by one vessel. I consider the real number of slaves annually exported from this Consular district to amount to 1,500. The Vice-Consul at Alagoas informs me that 500 at least are exported from that province, and the Vice-Consul at Paraiba, although satisfied of its incorrectness, can obtain no higher return there than 30. I have not yet received returns from Ceará or Rio Grande do Norte.

I inclose a table based upon the official returns, which will be sufficient to show that upwards of 1,100 of the youngest slaves of these provinces are annually torn from their country, relations and friends, and the physical capital of the land reduced by the removal of that portion of its labour.

No laws have been enacted during the past year relating to slavery; and the state of the slave in Brazil, excepting those ills which the increase of the coasting trade has brought upon him, has neither ameliorated nor deteriorated. Acts of gross barbarity are rarely practised, but that disregard of his humanity, the inevitable consequence of slavery, still exists, and will exist until the hydra itself be finally destroyed.

I HAVE the honour to state that, during the year ended this day, there have been no new African blacks imported into this province, although it is my firm belief that attempts have been made to do so.

The epidemy of cholera morbus which prevailed here during the months of February, March, and April, caused great mortality amongst the slave population; and the want of field labourers is greatly felt by the sugar planters, the greater number of them not being able to grind all the canes which are in their fields ready to be cut for the present crop.

Free labourers are very scarce, and the wages paid are enormous, averaging from 800 reis to 1 milreis per diem, and even at those rates it is almost impossible to get them to work more than three or four days during the week.

Sir,

Maceio, January 1, 1857.

WITH reference to the Slave Traffic, I have the honour to inform you that during the last quarter two Brazilian war steamers and a brig of war, arrived in this port, and after remaining a few days, departed on a cruize to the north and south of the city.

The President and Chief of Police are extremely watchful and vigorous in their doings on the coast of this Province; detachments of soldiers are stationed in some places, and military delegates are still in power at the small ports.

During the true year no vessel of any description cleared out for the coast of Africa, or arrived from thence.

I have, &c.

Acting Vice-Consul Krause to Consul Cowper.

Paraiba, November 8, 1856.

IN compliance with your circular of the 17th October last past, I beg leave to inclose herewith a table, showing the number of slaves that have been dispatched through the public offices of this Province for exportation since the 1st January this year.

I must at the same time remark, that I consider this far below the number that really have been exported, because, in order to avoid paying the export tax, many slave-owners either take one or two slaves with them when they embark, as their servants on the passage, or manage to send them in the same capacity by one or other of their acquaintance who may be travelling alone.

The business was at first very lucrative, but since the cholera the prices of slaves of all descriptions have risen so much that it would be hardly worth the while to purchase them here, pay the export-tax, passage, &c, to Rio.

Sir,

Maceio, November 12, 1856.

I HAVE to acknowledge the receipt of your despatch of the 18th of October, requesting me to acquaint you of the number of slaves who have been exported from this Province, for sale, during the last twelve months, stating at the same time whether this species of Traffic has latterly been upon the increase, or otherwise.

In reply I have to state, that during the last twelve months the number of slaves exported from Maceio, San Miguel, and Perredo, to Rio de Janeiro, has not been less than 500 of the choicest description of slaves; that this inhuman Traffic has latterly been on the increase, caused by the high prices current for them in the Rio market.

Consul Cowper to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received March 17.)

My Lord,

Pernambuco, January 31, 1857.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of the printed correspondence between Great Britain and Brazil relative to the Serinhaem Slave Trade affair.

As the course which your Lordship has adopted has no doubt been based upon my reports of the facts of this case, it is my duty to your Lordship to repeat that I maintain the truth of every statement which I have made as a fact; that many of the assertions of M. Carvalho Moreira have been already, and others can be, disproved. Under the first category falls his accusation of Dr. Drummond, who has since been twice honourably and unanimously acquitted; under the second, his assertion that the police authorities were not removed from Serinhaem at the time of the slaver's arrival, for, if your Lordship deem it necessary, I will forward you translations of the official despatches which removed them; thirdly, I deny that Colonel Drummond ever confessed to me that he had permitted the slave-captain to escape; and lastly, every possible importance has been attached by him to my having transmitted to Colonel Drummond the thanks of Her Majesty's Government, whilst no mention is made of the important fact that he had previously received those of his own Government for the very same services.

I inclose a small pamphlet by Colonel Drummond, which contains in the appendix the official document alluded to. I crave your Lordship's pardon for not translating them upon this occasion, as the number of British deaths from yellow fever, and the heavy duties resulting from them, occupy my whole time.

I have, &c.

My Lord,

Rio de Janeiro, January 22, 1857.

IT gives me great satisfaction to be enabled to report to your Lordship that during the past year no slaves were landed in this province from the coast of Africa; and that the authorities continue to employ the most stringent measures to prevent any reappearance of the Traffic.

I transmit herewith, for your Lordship's information, a Return showing the quantity and value of the staple productions (the result of slave labour) exported during the year 1856.

My Lord,

Rio de Janeiro, January 22, 1857.

I HAVE the honour to transmit herewith, for your Lordship's information, a Return showing the price of slaves in this province during the six months ending on the 31st ultimo.

During the last year the value of slaves increased so much in this province that large numbers were purchased in Bahia, Pernambuco, and other ports, by unfeeling speculators, and brought to this city for sale. Many of these unfortunate beings were brought from estates where they were born, and torn away from relations and old associations in the most inhuman and cruel manner possible.

I have, &c.

Consul Parish to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received February 14, 1857.)

My Lord,

Buenos Ayres, December 31, 1856.

FOR some time past I have been made aware of suspicions being entertained by Her Majesty's Minister at Rio, that the facilities offered in the River Plate for fitting out vessels for slaving voyages were likely to lead to attempts being made by some suspected parties; and by last packet I was provided with a recommendation from the Mission at Rio to a Portuguese, Don José Alvarez da Cunha, who, I was informed, had been useful in procuring information there, and who could acquaint me with the intentions of several slave-traders as to fitting out vessels in these waters. This person had already communicated with Mr. Thornton, Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Montevideo, and had given him notice of a Spanish barque called the "Sultana," then lying in port, being fitted out for a slave voyage. He further stated that this vessel had landed, about four months previously, on account of the captain and a partner, a Dr. Sevilla, a cargo of 800 slaves near Matanzas in Cuba, who were sold at 32 ounces a-head. These suspicions were communicated, as I understand, to the Spanish Chargé d'Affaires at Montevideo, and the captain, from fear of being searched, threw overboard the boilers and feeding utensils he was provided with. This statement was made known to me by Mr. Thornton. The vessel subsequently obtained a charter, and proceeded up the River Uruguay to load a cargo of jerked beef, on account of Messrs. Sybils, Bujares, & Co. a Spanish house of business of Montevideo and Buenos Ayres. I have made since then, endeavours to obtain some corroboration of the suspicions of my informant, but as yet without any success; but as I have been continually assured since of the intentions of the captain of the "Sultana" to prosecute a voyage for slaves, and hearing at length that the vessel was seen lying off the port of Gualeguaychu near the mouth of the Uruguay, I thought it prudent to report all the circumstances to Commander Derriman, of Her Majesty's ship "Harrier." On my doing so, he agreed to dispatch Her Majesty's surveying schooner "Indian" with a proper officer and crew to obtain information respecting the whereabouts of this vessel, and if it were possible and advisable on the information obtained to search her, to do so. The result of this inquiry I will report to your Lordship. In the meantime I think that some watch should be kept on this vessel, which, if she is on a slaving voyage, might, if not prevented, reach the coast of Africa in about forty days from this date, from whence my informant states she would proceed direct to a part of the coast of Cuba, near Matanzas, where Dr. Sevilla holds, as he says, some three leagues of land on the coast, where he landed his last cargo. I shall be glad to have any special instructions which may be applicable to the searching of vessels in the River Plate to provide for any cases that may occur.

Sir,

Foreign Office, March 6, 1857.

I HAVE received your despatch of the 31st of December last, and with reference to the concluding paragraph of that despatch in which you state that you will be glad to receive any special instructions which may be applicable to the searching of vessels in the River Plate, I have to acquaint you, in reply, that I cannot perceive what the circumstances may be which call for special instructions in the case referred to in your despatch.

You acted rightly in communicating the circumstances relative to the "Sultana" to Commander Derriman of Her Majesty's ship "Harrier," who seems to have had no doubt as to his right to detain that vessel if it should appear that she was equipped for the Slave Trade; and I am not aware why any such doubt should be entertained, as the Treaties for the suppression of the Slave Trade, concluded between Great Britain and the Argentine Confederation, and between Great Britain and the oriental Republic of the Uruguay, authorize the Commanders of British cruisers to detain slave-vessels under the flags of those Republics without limitation as to the places where such vessels may be found whether in the River Plate or elsewhere. And with regard to slavers under the Spanish flag, the only limitation in the Treaty between Great Britain and Spain is, that "the reciprocal right of search and detention shall not be exercised within the Mediterranean Sea, or within the seas in Europe, lying without the Straits of Gibraltar, and which lie to the northward of the 37th parallel of north latitude, and also within and to the eastward of the meridian of longitude 20° west of Greenwich."

My Lord,

WITH reference to my despatch of the 28th of February last,* I have the honour of inclosing a translation of a note, dated the 24th instant, which I have received from Viscount d'Athoguia, informing me that no report had been received by the Marine Department from the Governor-General of Angola, with respect to the embarkation of a settler with 10 slaves on board the American vessel "Seamew," bound for St. Thomas, which formed the subject of my note of the 25th of February, but that orders have been dispatched to that functionary to send every information concerning it. Considering that, as it is evident that the Governor-General takes an erroneous view of the stipulations of Article V of the Slave Trade Suppression Treaty of the 3rd July, 1842, between Great Britain and Portugal, further infractions of them might take place during the interval which must elapse before Viscount d'Athoguia can receive Senhor Amaral's report, I addressed to his Excellency this day, the note of which the annexed is a copy, requesting him not to delay transmitting instructions to the Governor-General not to allow settlers, removing from the territories under his administration, to take with them other slaves, in the specified numbers, than such as are their bonâ fide household servants.

WITH reference to the note which you transmitted to me on the 25th February last, I have the honour to acquaint you that a communication was made to me from the Marine Department on the 13th instant, to the effect that no information could be given with respect to the embarkation of a colonist with 10 slaves on board the American vessel "Seamew," bound for St. Thomé, which formed the subject of the documents which you sent to me, because no report had been received from the Governor-General of Angola of that transaction, though possibly it might have come by the brig "Oriente," which was unfortunately shipwrecked on entering the port of Lisbon. Nevertheless, in order to meet the wishes of Her Britannic Majesty's Government expressed by you, the necessary orders were dispatched at that date to the said Governor-General to send every information, which will be transmitted to you as soon as it comes to the knowledge of His Majesty's Government.

THE Undersigned, &c., has the honour to acknowledge the receipt of the note addressed to him, under date of the 24th instant, by his Excellency Viscount d'Athoguia, and acquainting him that no report had been received by the Marine Department from the Governor-General of Angola, relative to the embarkation of a settler with 10 slaves on board the American vessel "Seamew," bound for St. Thomas, which formed the subject of the note of the Undersigned of the 25th of February last, but that orders had been dispatched to that functionary to send every information respecting it.

The Undersigned, in thanking Viscount d'Athoguia for this communication, begs to submit that his Excellency has already had the means of judging, from the Governor-General's letter of the 7th September last to Sir George Jackson, of which a copy was inclosed in the above-mentioned note of the Undersigned, that Senhor Amaral takes an erroneous view of Article V of the Treaty of the 3rd of July, 1842, between Great Britain and Portugal, for the suppression of the Slave Trade, inasmuch as he does not consider himself called upon, as has been shown in the case of the "Seamew," to prevent the shipment of slaves, to be employed as field labourers, to the enumerated Portuguese islands; whereas that Article expressly provides that the 10 slaves by which a settler removing definitively from his residence in a Portuguese possession on the coast of Africa shall be permitted to be accompanied, shall be bond fide his household servants.

The Undersigned therefore begs to express the hope that Viscount d'Athoguia will not await the reply of the Governor-General before acting up to the wishes which the Undersigned has had the honour of conveying to him on the part of Her Majesty's Government, but that in order to obviate any infraction, in the meantime, of the stipulations of Article V of the Treaty, he will at once transmit orders to Senhor Amaral not to allow settlers, removing from the territories under his administration, to take with them other slaves, in the specified numbers, than such as are their bond fide household servants, according to the literal acceptation in which the term of "bond fide household servants" is used in the Treaty.

My Lord,

IN answer to a question addressed to Viscount d'Athoguia in the sitting of the Chamber of Deputies of the 29th ultimo, his Excellency confirmed the fact of the disappearance, about two months ago, from the port of St. Martinho, in this Province, of a Portuguese vessel, the "Roberto," under suspicions, arising from the large quantity of articles of food she had taken on board, and from her having left her papers behind her, that she was destined for the Slave Trade.

His Excellency stated that immediately on learning the fact, he had ordered a strict inquiry into the case, and the suspension, pending it, of the Captain of the Port and Harbour Master, and that he had likewise given directions, through the Departments of Marine and of Foreign Affairs for the capture of the vessel in whatever part of the Portuguese dominions she might make her appearance.

Under these circumstances, I addressed to Viscount d'Athoguia, on the 1st instant, the note of which I have the honour to inclose a copy, stating my wish to co-operate with His Most Faithful Majesty's Government on this, as well as on all other occasions which may present themselves, towards the objects of the Treaty of the 3rd of July, 1842, for the Suppression of the Slave Trade, and requesting his Excellency, with that view, to be so good as to furnish me with a description of the "Roberto," in order that I might transmit it to Her Majesty's HAVING observed from the explanations given by your Excellency in the Chamber of Deputies on the 29th ultimo, that about two months ago a patacho, called "Roberto," had disappeared from the port of San Martinho, under suspicions, arising from the large quantity of articles of food she had taken on board, and from the circumstance of her having left her papers behind her, that she was destined for the Slave Trade; and being desirous of cooperating with His Most Faithful Majesty's Government on this occasion, as well as on all others which may present themselves, towards the objects of the Slave Trade Suppression Treaty of the 3rd of July, 1842, between Great Britain and Portugal, I shall feel obliged if your Excellency will be so good as to furnish me with a description of this vessel, as well as with the particulars in your possession relative to her nationality, her master and crew, her tonnage and fittings, and her presumed destination, in order that I may transmit such desirable information to Her Majesty's Government and to Her Majesty's Representative at Rio de Janeiro, for the use of Her Majesty's cruisers on the coast of Africa and of Brazil respectively.

In addressing this request to your Excellency, I need not, I feel persuaded, remark upon the valuable assistance which might be rendered by the Commanders of Her Majesty's cruisers towards attaining the object which your Excellency stated you had in view, of effecting the capture of the vessel in question, in case of the suspicions attached to her being realized.

Sir,

Lisbon, April 5, 1856.

THE Portuguese subject, Antonio Severino d'Avellar, a notorious slave-trader, who has lately been expelled from Brazil under strong suspicions of having been connected with a landing of slaves which took place last autumn on the coast of that Empire, having, as I have been informed, arrived in this capital, and there being reason to fear, from the experience of the past, that he may engage in some new slave-trading speculations, I take the liberty of suggesting to your Excellency the expediency of causing his proceedings to be watched, and in case he should proceed to any other part of the Portuguese dominions, of transmitting orders to the authorities of such places to exercise similar vigilance.

I beg to remark that Avellar was formerly a resident at the Island of Terceira, whence, according to the information given to Her Majesty's Government, he was in the habit of directing slave-trading undertakings.

Although I am fully aware of your Excellency's anxiety to take every measure calculated to suppress the Slave Trade, yet, thinking it possible that your attention might not have been directed to the nature of this individual's antecedents, I have deemed it advisable to make to you the suggestion contained in this letter.

Mr. Howard to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received April 25.)

My Lord,

Lisbon, April 18, 1856.

I HAVE the honour of inclosing a copy of the note which, in fulfilment of the instructions contained in your Lordship's despatch of the 29th ultimo,* I addressed to Viscount Athoguia on the 15th instant, bringing under his notice the inhuman conduct, as reported by Her Majesty's Consul at Lagos, of the masters of two Portuguese vessels named the "General Rego" and the "Emilia," towards several self-emancipated Africans whom they had engaged to convey from Bahia to that port.

On my referring to the subject of this note at an interview which I had with Viscount d'Athoguia yesterday, he expressed much horror at the conduct of the masters of the Portuguese vessels in question, and said that he would give the question his best consideration; but that he feared it would be difficult to bring the offenders to punishment, inasmuch as the only means which the Government would have of proceeding against them would be to prosecute them before the tribunals, for which purpose they would require witnesses, who could not be procured unless some of the sailors belonging to the vessels could be discovered, and induced to bear testimony against the masters; the best means, he thought, of preventing the recurrence of such misconduct would be to represent the matter, as I had stated in my note your Lordship had done, to the Brazilian Government, in order that security should be exacted from the masters of vessels conveying liberated Africans to the coast of Africa. On his part, he added, he would write to the Portuguese Consuls in Brazil, directing them to afford to those negroes every assistance in their power.

I explained to his Excellency that what Mr. Consul Campbell had recommended was precisely that such masters of vessels should be required in Brazil to give security for the performance of the engagements they entered into with the class of Africans referred to.

 Inclosure in No. 315.
Mr. Howard to Viscount d'Athoguia.

Sir,

Lisbon, April 15, 1856.

IN compliance with the instructions which I have received from Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, I have the honour of bringing under your Excellency's notice two cases, as reported by Mr. Campbell, Her Majesty's Consul at Lagos, in a despatch of the 21st of January last, of the grossest injustice and breach of faith on the part of the masters of the Portuguese vessels "General Rego" and "Emilia," towards several self-emancipated Africans whom they had engaged to convey from Bahia to that port.

The "General Rego," commanded by Domingo José da Costa Lage, with Angelo Ribeiro Debarco as supercargo, transported some 40 of these Africans as passengers, under contract to land them with their property at Lagos. Instead of this, these unfortunates were forced on shore at Whydah, where they were first plundered of their property, and, on account of their being Egbas, were subsequently sent up to the King of Dahomey, who put to death all the adults, retaining the children as slaves.

The schooner "Emilia," Captain Jacinto, supercargo Christoph Custode, also transported about 15 of the same class of Africans as passengers, but instead of landing them at Lagos as was agreed upon, put them on shore against their will at Aghwey, from which place they were only able to get away through the instrumentality of a Sierra Leone trader, named Harry Johnson, who, passing through Aghwey, gave them a passage in his vessel, but the property of these poor people was retained on board the "Emilia."

With regard to these cases, the Earl of Clarendon remarks, in his despatch containing the above-mentioned instructions, that it is to be presumed that the men whose deplorable fate is narrated by Mr. Campbell, must have toiled through several years of hard slavery in Brazil before they earned their liberation and obtained sufficient means to purchase an outfit, and to pay their passage back to Africa; and that it is a peculiarly heartrending circumstance that on reaching the coast of their native country, after so many hardships, 40 of them were forced on shore within the power of a merciless tyrant, who put them to death, and that 15 others were plundered by the master of the vessel, and exposed to the imminent risk of being again sold as slaves.

The Earl of Clarendon, who has directed Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Rio de Janeiro to make a representation to the Brazilian Government upon this affair, with a view to procure the adoption of some precautionary measures against similar violations of the engagements entered into by the masters of vessels conveying Africans from the ports of Brazil to the coast of Africa, is not aware how far the two Portuguese shipmasters who have been guilty of the acts of inhumanity in question, can be made amenable to the laws of Portugal; but he has instructed me, in making this communication to your Excellency, to state that he feels confident that His Most Faithful Majesty's Government will readily take any steps in this matter which may serve to stigmatize such heartless conduct with the reprobation which it deserves.

I beg to add the observation that this question appears the more worthy of the serious attention of His Most Faithful Majesty's Government, inasmuch as, according to Mr. Consul Campbell's report, it is principally in Portuguese vessels that the self-liberated Africans take passage from the Brazils to the coast of Africa.

CONFORMABLY with instructions contained in your Lordship's despatch of the 31st ultimo,* I have expressed to Senhor Monteiro, the Brazilian Minister, the acknowledgments of Her Majesty's Government for the communications he made to me on Slave Trade affairs, as reported in my despatch of the 14th of that month.†

Senhor Monteiro was much gratified by the message I had thus conveyed to him from your Lordship, and repeated the assurances of his anxiety to co-operate with me on these questions.

He then communicated to me two despatches which he had recently received from the Brazilian Minister for Foreign Affairs, Senhor Paranhos. The first, dated February 19, relates to two matters which I had already brought under the notice of the Portuguese Minister for Foreign Affairs, in consequence of a letter from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Rio de Janeiro, viz., the report that an individual of the name of Pompeo Pompilio del Carpe, well known as a former slave-trader, is the consignee of a Portuguese vessel fitting out at Angola for the importation of 300 slaves into Brazil, and that two schooners are preparing for the same service at Ambriz under the directions of Guilherme da Silva Correa. The second is a circular despatch, dated the 22nd of the same month. In this despatch Senhor Paranhos states, that the Brazilian Government are induced to believe, by the late captures which have been made, that the slave-traders intend renewing their criminal speculations in Brazil; and that the war in which the British navy are engaged (it will be remembered that the peace had not been concluded when Senhor Paranhos wrote), and the Brazilian expedition to Paraguay, were the causes of this bold resolution. The slave-traders, Senhor Paranhos proceeds to say, have established the principal basis of their operations in the United States and on the coast of Africa. Vessels for the Slave Trade are built in the United States, and proceed from thence, directly, or by Portugal, Brazil, and the River Plate, to the coast of Africa, the latter route being preferred.

The captain of the American vessel "Mary E. Smith," captured last December by the Brazilian war-steamer "Olinda," off St. Matthew's, in Brazil, with a cargo of slaves on board, revealed that two more American vessels—a lugger and a schooner, the "Vilcot," of New York—had entered one of the ports of the west coast of Africa, between Cape Lopez and Loango, in order to take in a cargo of Africans for Brazil. The mulatto, José de Parias, who expedited the schooner seized in October last, near Pernambuco, resided at Angola, where he built her. The two vessels in question were to be expedited by Joaquim Ignacio Riverosa, brother of Francisco Riverosa, the notorious slave-trader, of whom it is unknown whether he is in Brazil, or not.

Senhor Paranhos, in view of these circumstances, directs Senhor Monteiro to require reports from the Brazilian Consuls in Portugal of any information they may be able to procure, and to invite the co-operation of the Portuguese Government towards carrying out the views of the Brazilian Government for the suppression of the Slave Trade.

He concludes his despatch by saying, that the British Government not being the less interested in that suppression, if its Diplomatic and Consular Agents would come to an understanding, and act in unison with those of His Majesty the Emperor of Brazil, it is the will and determination of that august Sovereign that his Agents should accept and cordially lend themselves to that co-operation.

Having, on my first arrival in Brazil in 1853, proposed to the Brazilian Government, and succeeded in establishing with them, a co-operation on Slave Trade matters, I cannot but consider as very satisfactory the wish now evinced by that Government to extend the sphere of the common action.

Lisbon, April 18, 1856.

I HAVE the honour of inclosing herewith to your Lordship the translation of a Project of Law presented to the Chamber of Deputies by Viscount d'Athoguia on the 7th instant, providing for the abolition of slavery, in the district of Ambriz, six months after the publication of the Law in the official Gazette of Angola; and in the territories of Cabinda and Molembo, six months after what is termed the re-establishment, by the Government, of administrative and military authorities in each of them.

Your Lordship will perceive that the limits assigned by this Bill to the district of Ambriz are, the Rivers Lifune to the south, and Zaire, or Congo, to the north.

Inclosure in No. 319.

Project of Law.

(Translation.)

Gentlemen,

THE territory of Ambriz, in the Province of Angola, was recently organized as a district of that province, principally with a view to the suppression of the Slave Trade, which has, notwithstanding all the measures taken for preventing it, been constantly carried on there. In order, then, to put a stop to this inhuman Traffic in that district, and in the territories of Cabinda and Molembo, I have the honour to submit for your consideration, after having consulted the Ultramarine Council, the following project of law:—

Article 1. The state of slavery is hereby abolished in the following territories of the Province of Angola:—

1. In the district of Ambriz from the River Lifune to the River Zaire.
2. In the territories of Cabinda and of Molembo.

Art. 2. This law shall come into force in the district of Ambriz six months after its publication in the "Boletim Official" of Angola, and in the other territories mentioned in the preceding Article, six months subsequent to the re-establishment by the Government of administrative and military authorities in each of them.

Art. 2. All legislative enactments to the contrary are hereby revoked.

My Lord,

Lisbon, April 26, 1856.

WITH reference to my despatch of the 14th instant, inclosing a description, furnished to me by Viscount d'Athoguia, of the Portuguese schooner "Roberto," suspected of being destined for the Slave Trade, I have the honour of transmitting herewith translations of a note of the 18th instant, which I have received from his Excellency in reply to mine of the 1st, and of the despatch which accompanied it from himself as Minister of Marine, containing particulars relative to that vessel, and to the circumstances under which it disappeared from the port of San Martinho in this province.

* Class A, No. 57.

† Ibid., Nos. 58 and 61.

In thanking Viscount d'Athoguia yesterday for this communication, I pointed out to his Excellency the necessity of sifting this affair to the bottom, with a view to ascertaining the complicity of persons in this country as well as at Angola.

His Excellency assured me that he had already taken measures with this view, and that the Government would do everything that is in their power to frustrate the designs of the slave-traders.

The Brazilian Minister, Senhor Maciel Monteiro, has been pressing upon Viscount d'Athoguia and the Duke of Saldanha, as President of the Council of Ministers, the urgency of keeping the strictest watch, both in the mother country and in the Portuguese possessions on the coast of Africa, over the proceedings of all persons who have been engaged in the Slave Trade, and he is to have a further conference with the Duke of Saldanha on the subject.

I have told both Viscount d'Athoguia and the Duke that my Brazilian colleague and I are acting in concert in this matter, and I have begged them to consider the requests he may make to them respecting it as if they came from myself, saying that if our three Governments cordially co-operate, at this juncture, towards the prevention of the Slave Trade, our efforts cannot but be successful. Both of these Portuguese Ministers have assured me of their anxiety to afford their best co-operation in this respect, but the Government in this country do not appear to possess any well organized or efficient means of carrying out the necessary supervision.

Illustrious and Excellent Sir,

IN answer to the despatch which your Excellency was pleased to address to me on the 9th instant, together with a translation of a note from Her Britannic Majesty's Minister at this Court, in which he requests some information respecting the brig-schooner "Roberto," which vessel sailed unexpectedly on the 9th of March last from the port of San Martinho, where she was detained by the custom-house of that place; I have to state to your Excellency, for the information of the said Minister, that the vessel in question having come under the suspicion of being destined for the Slave Trade, in consequence of the nature of her cargo, the custom-house and the captain of the port refused to give up her papers until such time as it should be ascertained whether these suspicions were well founded, in the event of which her departure would be prevented ; however, in the meantime, the mate absconded with the vessel, leaving behind him the ship's papers ; from these papers it appears that the vessel is called the "Roberto," is Portuguese, and rigged as a brig-schooner, of the burthen of 101 tons, length 102·4 spans, beam 26·1 spans, depth 12 spans ; the owner is Alexandre Magno Ferreira of this city, and who being called upon to give some information respecting this occurrence, stated that at the time of the ship's disappearance, he was not her owner ; for three days previous he had sold her to José Antunes da Costa, a Loanda merchant : this statement he confirmed with the deed of sale, which he presented.

By the official reports received here it also appears that the captain of the vessel remained on shore, and that she was carried away by the mate, whose name, according to the muster-roll, is Vidal José Preira Miranda, the rest of the crew consisting of four seamen and five boys.

Mr. Howard to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 14.)

My Lord,

Lisbon, May 8, 1856.

IN execution of the instructions contained in your Lordship's despatch of the 26th ultimo,* I addressed to Viscount d'Athoguia, on the 5th instant, the note of which I have the honour to inclose a copy, covering the extract of a Memorandum relative to the Slave Trade proceedings, at Angola and Ambriz, of Arsenio Pompeio Pompilio del Carpe and Guilherme da Silva Correa, furnished by Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Rio de Janeiro to the Brazilian Minister for Foreign Affairs, as well as translated copies, as transmitted to your Lordship by Mr. Consul Morgan, at Bahia, in his despatch of the 8th of March last, of two documents found in the possession of João José Vianna, a passenger on board the American vessel "Mary E. Smith," which was captured off the coast of Brazil in December last, with a cargo of slaves ; viz. : 1st, a letter addressed from Loanda by G. da Silva Correa to Vianna ; and, 2ndly, the manifest of the Spanish vessel "Dolores," supposed to have been engaged in the Havana Slave Trade.

I beg to observe that I had already, two months ago, in consequence of a letter from Mr. Jerningham, brought the information contained in his Memorandum relative to Del Carpe and Correa, under the notice of Viscount d'Athoguia ; and that Senhor Monteiro, the Brazilian Minister, had likewise done so, and received from his Excellency the assurance that orders had been sent to the Portuguese authorities on the west coast of Africa to keep a strict watch over those individuals.

* No. 320.

On the receipt of your Lordship's two above-mentioned despatches, I communicated their inclosures to Senhor Monteiro, who, at my request, has been so kind as to say that he will write to the authorities at Bahia for legalized copies of the two documents transmitted, in translation, by Mr. Morgan, as well as of any other papers that may compromise persons residing in the Portuguese dominions, with a view to communicate them to the Portuguese Government, and to enable the latter to proceed judicially against such slave-traders.

At an interview which I had with Viscount Athoquia yesterday, I observed to him that the letter which I had sent him, as written by Correa, contained clear proof against him, and that the Spanish manifest of the Spanish vessel "Dolores" was extremely important, as giving the names of the shippers of her cargo of slaves, and that these shippers appeared to be residents of Loanda and Ambriz.

I then mentioned that Senhor Monteiro intended writing for legalized copies of those documents for communication to him, and that I trusted that, in the meantime, the Portuguese authorities on the coast of Africa would exercise the greatest vigilance over the proceedings of the slave-traders in question.

His Excellency replied, that not only was he most anxious to root out and punish those individuals, but the authorities at Angola were so likewise; that it was, however, very difficult to obtain legal proofs against them, and the Government had not the power of expelling Portuguese subjects; he should therefore receive, with great satisfaction, any papers which might authorize judicial proceedings against the culprits likely to lead to their conviction.

I have, &c.

Mr. Howard to Viscount d'Athoquia.

Sir,

Lisbon, May 5, 1856.

IT will be in your Excellency's recollection that, some time ago, I had the honour of placing in your hands a Memorandum containing the information which had been transmitted to me by Mr. Jerningham, Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Rio de Janeiro, relative to the Slave Trade proceedings of two individuals, by the names of Arsenio Pompeio Pompilio del Carpe and Guilherme da Silva Correa, at Angola and Ambriz, and requesting that orders might be transmitted to the Portuguese authorities on the coast of Africa, to keep a strict watch over them.

I have now the honour of inclosing to your Excellency, by the Earl of Clarendon's directions, the extract of a Memorandum furnished by Mr. Jerningham to the Brazilian Minister for Foreign Affairs, containing similar information.

I further annex, likewise by the Earl of Clarendon's orders, translated copies, transmitted to his Lordship by Her Majesty's Consul at Bahia, of two documents which were found in the possession of João José Vianna, who was a passenger on board the American vessel "Mary E. Smith," which was captured off St. Matthew's, on the coast of Brazil, by a Brazilian cruizer, in December last, with a cargo of slaves on board, and who is now in prison at Bahia; viz.: 1st, a letter addressed from Loanda, on the 21st of April, 1855, by the above-mentioned Guilherme da Silva Correa, to the said Vianna, containing various plans and instructions for the active prosecution of the Slave Trade. 2ndly, the manifest of the Spanish barque "Dolores," destined, as it would appear, for the Havana Slave Trade, with the names of the shippers.

These papers show in what a determined manner the Slave Trade is still carried on in the Portuguese possessions on the coast of Africa, under the very eyes of the authorities, and will, I feel persuaded, convince your Excellency of the urgency of enjoining upon those authorities the exercise of redoubled vigilance, in order to defeat the projects of the slave-traders, and to bring the offenders to punishment.

My Lord,

Lisbon, May 8, 1856.

WITH reference to my despatch of the 18th ultimo,‡ transmitting a copy of the note of the 15th of last month, in which I brought under Viscount d'Athoguia's notice the inhuman conduct of the masters of the two Portuguese vessels, the "General Rego" and "Emilia," towards certain self-emancipated Africans whom they had engaged to convey from Bahia to Lagos, I have the honour of inclosing herewith translation of his reply of the 2nd instant, received on the 5th; copies of two further notes from myself to his Excellency of the 30th ultimo and 6th instant; and translation of a second note from him of the 6th instant.

From Viscount d'Athoguia's first note, your Lordship will perceive that on the 24th ultimo orders were given to the Crown lawyer to prosecute Domingos José da Costa Lage, the captain of the "General Rego," which has changed her name to that of "Africano;" that with regard to the "Emilia" his Excellency had written to the Consul at Bahia to make inquiries; and that he expresses to me the wish that I should furnish him with any further information which might come to my knowledge concerning the transactions in which these vessels have been engaged, which information he conceives Her Majesty's Government might obtain through Her Majesty's Consul at Lagos.

In the second note Viscount d'Athoguia informs me that legal proceedings had been instituted, and that the captain, mate, master, and a passenger of the "Africano" had been arrested, but that the judicial tribunals not having discovered any traces of crime against them, they had been acquitted, and the vessel had taken her departure for Bahia.

The facts of the case are these: the vessel was embargoed on the 26th instant, just as she was about to put to sea, and the captain was arrested and taken to prison on an accusation of complicity with the homicide of the negroes whom he had deposited at Whydah. A few hours afterwards the other three individuals, having been the only persons on board the vessel who had performed the voyage in question, from Bahia to the coast of Africa, were also arrested. Captain Lage defended himself by saying that the engagement he had taken was not to land the negroes at Lagos, but at the last port where he should take in cargo, and this turned out to be Whydah, where, he stated, there was an English as well as a Portuguese fort, and that he could not be held responsible for the misfortunes which afterwards befell them. His companions confirmed this story, and, as Viscount d'Athoguia informs me, there was no means of obtaining evidence against him.

The vessel proceeded from the coast of Africa with a cargo of palm oil and other produce to London, whence she took her departure for Lisbon, in December last. Her papers are stated to be in order.

It appears that Lage is a well-known Slave Trade captain, and he boasts of some daring feat against a British cruiser.

Viscount d'Athoguia considers that there are reasons to suspect that the "Africano" is destined for the Slave Trade, and he therefore writes to the Portuguese Consul at Bahia to have her watched on her arrival there, and I have undertaken to do the same to Mr. Morgan.

When the "Africano" was stopped, staves were found on board her, but not in sufficient quantity to authorise proceedings against her, the motive alleged for their existence being the circumstance of their being required for the palm-oil trade, in which the vessel is engaged. The fact of the same passenger performing several journies with Captain Lage, is likewise calculated to excite suspicion.

Although, as I understand, a dinner was given to Captain Lage on his release, I feel convinced that the circumstance of his imprisonment for four days, and of the detention of the vessel, will inspire some fear into the slave-traders.

On the arrestation of the captain and principal officers, the owners abandoned the charge of the vessel to the Government officers.

IN answer to the note which you addressed to me on the 15th of April last, respecting the conduct of the captains of the Portuguese vessels "Emilia" and "General Rego" (which last has lately changed her name to "Africano"), towards some liberated negroes whom they had conveyed on board from Bahia to Lagos, on the coast of Mina, I have the honour to inform you that a communication from the Marine Department, dated 24th ultimo, states that on the same date orders had been issued to the Crown lawyer to bring, without delay, an action against Domingos José da Costa Lage, captain of the "Africano," now anchored in the Tagus.

With regard to the "Emilia" I have to state to you that, according to the above-mentioned communication, some suspicion has fallen upon the schooner

"Emilia," belonging to the port of Bahia, which was formerly called the "Eliza Maria," and, in consequence, I am about to write officially to the Portuguese Consul at that port, that he may state whether the said schooner had been on a voyage from thence to the coast of Africa, and whether, on her muster-rolls, the name of Jacinto or Christovao Custodio occurred.

Mr. Howard to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 16.)

My Lord,

Lisbon, May 10, 1856.

WITH reference to my despatch of the 8th instant, reporting the measures taken by the Portuguese Government in respect to the vessel "General Rego," now called the "Africano," which last year conveyed certain liberated negroes from Bahia to the coast of Africa, I have the honour of subjoining a statement which I have obtained of the substance of the deposition made by her captain, Domingos José da Costa Lage, on his being interrogated by the tribunal before which he was summoned.

It appears from this deposition that the "Africano" belongs to a Portuguese merchant settled at Bahia, Estevão José Brochado, and that she left the port of Bahia on the 17th March, 1855, bound for the coast of Mina with a cargo of rum and tobacco on the owners' account; that there was a supercargo on board, under whose orders the captain, Domingos da Costa Lage, acted; that the cargo was sold on the coast, from whence the vessel proceeded to London; that the captain had taken on board, at Bahia, some 40 liberated negroes, to be landed at such ports on the coast of Mina as these negroes might choose, that is to say, at the ports situated between San Jorgé da Mina and Lagos, if the vessel should put into this latter port, otherwise, in the last port where the vessel might complete her cargo: 3 of these negroes landed, of their own accord, at Aghwey, the others went with the vessel to Ajuda, where the supercargo, Angelo da Costa Ribeiro, told the captain that, as the vessel had completed her cargo, there was no occasion to touch at Lagos, and he consequently put the negroes on shore. Some of them, having previously intended to remain in that neighbourhood, landed of their own consent; others, however, expressed their disappointment at not proceeding to Lagos. The captain did all that was in his power to satisfy the latter. An English vessel happening to be at anchor at Ajuda, he thought of putting these negroes on board in case it should be the intention of the master of this vessel to go to Lagos, which, unfortunately, he had not. The "Africano" remained in the port some time after the landing of the negroes, during which they were not ill-used. Nothing had since been heard of the ill-usage of which these negroes had been represented as the victims, nor is credit given to such representations, since the King of Dahomey is a man of a humane and mild disposition, and, besides, much in the habit of living on a good understanding with Europeans. The negroes, after their landing, kept on the best terms with the captain, and even applied to him for assistance when some of them were attacked by fever.

The magistrate, not having any substantial proof, has been obliged to dismiss the charge.

The supercargo above mentioned did not accompany the vessel to Europe.

The other individuals who were arrested here on the same occasion, as reported in my above-mentioned despatch, deposed to a similar effect.

From Captain Lage's account of the humane character of the King of Dahomey, your Lordship will be able to judge of the degree of veracity to be attributed to his deposition.

The Earl of Clarendon to Mr. Howard.

Sir,

Foreign Office, May 20, 1856.

I HAVE received your despatch of the 8th instant, and I have to acquaint you that I approve the notes, of which copies are therein inclosed, which you addressed to the Portuguese Government respecting the inhuman conduct of the masters of the two Portuguese vessels "General Rego" and "Emilia," towards certain self-emancipated Africans whom they had engaged to convey from Bahia to Lagos.

Mr. Howard to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received May 24.)

My Lord,

Lisbon, May 17, 1856.

I HAVE communicated to Viscount d'Athoguia the despatch of the 22nd of January last, from Her Majesty's Commissioners at Loanda to your Lordship, a copy of which was inclosed to me in your Lordship's despatch of the 1st instant,* reporting the shipment on the 31st of the preceding month of a cargo of upwards of 500 slaves on board of an American vessel bound for the Havana, from a spot situated between the River San Francisco and Cape Mary, as well as the proceedings of the slave-dealer Lucas, in connection with that embarkation, and of other slave-traders, as exemplifying the fears there are of a revival of the Slave Trade in the Province of Angola.

His Excellency was already in possession of the information contained in that despatch relative to the reported shipment, and said that every measure in his power should be taken to prevent the renewal of the Trade; that he was about to send out another cruizer, a corvette, now in port here, to Angola, but that he much regretted that the Portuguese Government had no steamers to employ on the service in question, and could not afford to purchase any for the purpose.

Viscount d'Athoguia stated that he was sorry to say that Captain Rodovalho, the commander of the Portuguese naval station on the west coast of Africa station, was coming home on account of his health, but that he should send out a good man to replace him.

I stated that I knew that Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Rio Janeiro had recommended an increase to the steam force of Her Majesty's squadron on the Brazilian station; that in consequence of my own experience I fully concurred in his recommendation, and that I did not doubt but that Her Majesty's Government would now have it in their power to augment their steam power on the west coast of Africa.

Viscount d'Athoguia informed me that Viscount Sá had brought into the Chamber of Peers a Bill authorising the expulsion from the Portuguese possessions of notorious slave-traders, which, if passed, would apply to cases like that of Lucas.

I have likewise stated to Viscount d'Athoguia the approval conveyed in the despatch of Her Majesty's Commissioners at Loanda, dated the 29th of January last, of which I received a copy in your Lordship's despatch of the 1st instant,† of the Portaria issued by the Governor-General of Angola on the 28th January, with regard to the control to be exercised over the establishment of factories in that province, and the employment of slaves in them.

My Lord,

Lisbon, May 17, 1856.

IN order to conclude the history of José Maria, the fugitive slave from the Brazilian vessel "Iris" at Oporto, which has formed the subject of much correspondence between Her Majesty's Legation and your Lordship, I beg to report that he arrived here a few days ago, and proceeded at once to return his thanks to the Minister of the Interior, Senhor Rodrigo da Fonseca Magalhaes, who had paid the price of his freedom out of his own purse, falling upon his knees and calling Senhor Magalhaes his master.

Senhor Magalhaes explained to José Maria that he was now his own master, and was perfectly free, but hitherto the negro has been unwilling to quit the house of his benefactor, where he remains until he finds a situation.

Viscount d'Athoquia informs me that José Maria states himself to be a native of Angola, and to have been kidnapped on that coast whilst fishing, and sold into slavery; and that he has refused a free passage, which has been offered to him, back to his own country.

My Lord,

Lisbon, May 26, 1856.

WITH reference to my despatch of the 8th instant, transmitting the copy of a note which I addressed the 5th to Viscount d'Athoquia, calling his attention to the Slave Trade proceedings, at Angola and Ambriz, of Arsenio Pompilio Pompeo de Carpo and Guilherme da Silva Correa, and inclosing translations of a letter from the latter, and of the manifest of a Spanish slaver, the "Dolores," found in the possession of Vianna, a passenger on board the American slaver "Mary E. Smith," captured off the coast of Brazil in December last, I have the honour of forwarding herewith a translation of a note of the 21st instant, which I have received from his Excellency, and in which, after alluding to his preliminary answer of the 8th, he informs me that instructions had already been sent on the 7th April last to the Governor-General of Angola to cause a watch to be kept over the movements of the above-mentioned individuals, and that on the 17th of this month my note of the 5th and its inclosures had been transmitted to that functionary, in order that he might take such measures as might seem the most appropriate in regard to those individuals.

Palace, May 21, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to acquaint you, in addition to my note of the 8th of this month, that the Marine Department has informed me that, by a Portaria dated 7th April last, the proper instructions were transmitted to the Governor-General of the Province of Angola to cause a watch to be kept upon the movements of Arsenio Pompilio Pompeo de Carpo, and Guilherme da Silva Correa, who are stated to be the principal agents in that province for the odious Traffic in Slaves; and that, on the 17th instant, the said Governor-General was made acquainted with your note of the 5th, and with the other documents which it inclosed, in order that he may take such measures as may seem most appropriate with regard to those individuals.

Lisbon, May 27, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's two despatches of the 14th instant.

Having met the Minister of the Interior, Senhor Rodrigo da Fonseca Magalhaes, at the Palace a few days ago, I took an opportunity of stating to him that I had received a despatch from your Lordship expressing the satisfaction with which Her Majesty's Government had learnt his highly creditable act in redeeming, at his own private expense, the slave, José Maria, who escaped, in August last, from the Brazilian vessel "Iris" at Oporto.

His Excellency assured me that, even if the purchase of the slave's freedom could not have been completed in this country, he had concerted means with the Brazilian Minister here, Senhor Maciel Monteiro, for effecting it in Brazil by taking advantage of a Brazilian law which prescribes certain cases in which a master is obliged to sell his slave.

His Excellency said that he should not fail to press through the Cortes, during the present session, the Project of Law introduced into the Chamber of Peers by Viscount Sá, repealing the Decree under which José Maria had been claimed.

At an interview which I had this day with Viscount d'Athoguia, I read to him your Lordship's above-mentioned despatch, and took upon myself to place a copy of it in his hands for communication to Senhor Magalhaes.

My Lord,

Lisbon, May 28, 1856.

WITH reference to my despatch of the 8th instant, I have the honour of inclosing, herewith, a translation of a further note of the 26th instant, which I have received from Viscount d'Athoguia recapitulating the reasons for which the captain of the Portuguese vessel "Africano," late "General Rego," and the other individuals belonging to that ship, who had been arrested on a charge connected with the inhuman treatment experienced by certain liberated negroes landed on the west coast of Africa, had been set at liberty by order of the judicial authorities, and informing me that as, according to the declarations of the Attorney-General of the Crown, it had appeared from the process which had taken place that the principal criminal was in the Province of St. Thomas, the necessary documents were being collected, and every judicial measure was being taken in order to the institution of the proper legal proceedings in that province.

I propose writing to Viscount d'Athoguia to thank him for his obliging communication on this subject.

IN addition to my notes of the 2nd and 6th instant, and in answer to that which you addressed to me on the latter date, I have the honour to inform you that the Marine Department has communicated to me on the 21st instant that, according to a despatch of the Attorney-General, no proof having been elicited of the crime of which Domingos José da Costa Lage, captain of the "Africano," and the other persons belonging to that ship were accused, they were discharged by the Judge.

I further state to you that the Marine Department also informs me that, according to the statement of the same Attorney-General, it appears from the process that the principal criminal being, most likely, in the province of St. Thomas, he would proceed to collect all the necessary documents, and to take all judicial measures for instituting the proper action in that transmarine province.

My Lord,

Lisbon, June 14, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's despatches of the 4th and 6th instant.

Thinking it expedient to draw the attention of the new Minister for Foreign Affairs, the Marquis de Loulé, to the various Slave Trade matters which I have treated with his predecessor, and some of which are still pending, I read to his Excellency, on the 12th instant, and delivered to him, the Memorandum of which I have the honour to inclose herewith a copy.

The Marquis de Loulé stated that he was not yet conversant with the questions which formed the subject of my Memorandum, but that he would give his best attention to them.

Memorandum.

MR. HOWARD croit devoir appeler l'attention de son Excellence le Marquis de Loulé sur les preuves fournies par les documents annexés à la note en date du 5 Mai, qu'il a eu l'honneur d'adresser au Vicomte d'Athoguia, de la persévérance avec laquelle des négriers bien connus, et entre autres Arsenio Pompeio Pompilio del Carpe et Guilherme da Silva Correa, attirés par la perspective des grands profits qu'offrent les prix élevés des esclaves, continuent à faire la Traite, avec le Brésil et la Havana, dans les possessions Portugaises du Portugal sur la côte occidentale de l'Afrique, sous les yeux, on pourrait presque dire, des autorités Portugaises, et malgré les efforts que font, comme Mr. Howard est prêt à le reconnaître, le Gouverneur-Général actuel d'Angola et le Commandant de la station navale Portugaise, le Capitaine Rodovalho, pour la supprimer.

Mr. Howard a reçu avec un bien vif plaisir de M. le Vicomte d'Athoguia les assurances les plus formelles que le Gouvernement de Sa Majesté Très Fidèle avait déjà donné les ordres nécessaires pour faire surveiller, et punir s'il était possible, les négriers en question, et qu'il prendrait toutes les mesures en son pouvoir pour frustrer leurs desseins iniques. Mr. Howard ne doute pas un moment que le Ministère actuel ne renouvelle ces ordres et ne mette en exécution les intentions annoncées par celui qui l'a précédé. Les sentiments élevés de son Excellence le Vicomte de Sá da Bandeira pour la suppression de la Traite et l'abolition de l'esclavage lui en sont le gage le plus sûr. D'après une note que Mr. Howard a adressée à M. le Vicomte d'Athoguia en date du 5 Avril dernier, le Marquis de Loulé verra qu'il juge nécessaire que le négrier Antonio Severino de Avellar, sujet Portugais, dernièrement arrivé en cette capitale après avoir été expulsé du Brésil, soit surveillé par les autorités Portugaises. Mr. Howard croit qu'il serait également convenable d'exercer une stricte vigilance sur les entreprises des autres négriers résident tant ici qu'à Oporto.

Mr. Howard croit aussi devoir appeler l'attention de son Excellence le Ministre des Affaires Etrangères sur la question du traitement barbare que n'éprouvent que trop souvent les Africains libérés de la part des capitaines des vaisseaux Portugais sur lesquels ils s'embarquent généralement pour retourner du Brésil en Afrique, qui fait l'objet des notes que Mr. Howard a adressées à M. le Vicomte d'Athoguia en date du 15 et 30 Avril, et du 6 et 31 Mai. Le Vicomte d'Athoguia a déjà pris, dans les cas spécialement indiqués par Mr. Howard, toutes les mesures que les circonstances réclamaient, mais il serait à désirer que son Excellence le Marquis de Loulé ne perde pas cette question de vue et continue à recommander, comme le Vicomte d'Athoguia avait promis de le faire, aux Consuls Portugais au Brésil, ainsi qu'aux autorités Portugaises sur la côte d'Afrique, de s'intéresser dans le sort de ces Africains.

Il reste encore à Mr. Howard de se référer aux notes qu'il a adressées au Vicomte d'Athoguia le 25 Fevrier, le 28 Mars, et le 14 Avril, mais auxquelles il n'a pas encore reçu de réponse définitive, relativement au transport qui s'est fait de Loanda pour l'Ile de St. Thomas sur le bâtiment Américain "Seamew," de certaines esclaves en contravention du Traité du 3 Juillet, 1842, entre la Grande Bretagne et le Portugal, pour la suppression de la Traite, et d'engager son Excellence le Marquis de Loulé de vouloir bien, en conformité au désir exprimé dans la note de Mr. Howard en date du 28 Mars, transmettre des ordres, si cela n'a pas été déjà fait, au Gouverneur-Général d'Angola, qui paraît avoir mal-interprété le sens de l'Article 5 du susdit Traité, de ne pas permettre aux colons qui quittent le territoire sous son administration, de prendre avec eux, dans le nombre déterminé, des esclaves autres que ceux qui sont bonâ fide leurs serviteurs domestiques ("bonâ fide household servants"), d'après l'acceptation littérale dans laquelle le terme de "bonâ fide household servants" est employé dans le Traité.

Mr. Howard to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received July 4.)

My Lord,

Lisbon, June 27, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to inclose the copy of a despatch of the 20th instant, which I received on the 23rd from Mr. Consul Johnston at Oporto, covering the copy of a letter from him of the first-mentioned date to the Intendant of Marine at that port, communicating the information which had reached him that a schooner, the "Locomotora," then in the Douro, was destined to be employed in the Slave Trade.

Immediately on the receipt of this despatch, I addressed to the Marquis de Loulé the note of which the inclosed is a copy, requesting the earliest possible transmission of orders to the Portuguese authorities at Oporto, to detain the "Locomotora," and to cause a strict inquiry to be instituted into the suspicious circumstances connected with her.

On the following morning I received a message from the Portuguese Foreign Department, stating the transmission by the Marquis, at 6 o'clock, of the necessary orders on the subject, to the Civil Governor of Oporto, and yesterday, the very satisfactory note of the 25th instant, of which I have the honour to annex a translation, was delivered to me, detailing the various measures taken by his Excellency, in consequence of the information conveyed by me to him concerning the "Locomotora."

Besides returning my acknowledgments personally to the Marquis de Loulé at an interview which I had with him yesterday, I addressed to his Excellency this day a note, of which the accompanying is a copy, expressing my thanks for the full and prompt manner in which he has acted up to my wishes in this matter.

I have acquainted Mr. Consul Johnston with the measures thus taken by the Marquis de Loulé in regard to the "Locomotora," and I have instructed him to continue to watch this case, and to report to me its progress.

I BEG to inclose a copy of a letter which I have addressed to the Intendant of Marine in Oporto, respecting a vessel called the "Locomotora," now in the Douro, which I believe to be designed for the Slave Trade.

Excellent Sir,

Oporto, June 20, 1856.

I BEG leave to inform your Excellency that it has been stated to me that the schooner "Locomotora" (said to have sailed from New York under the flag of the United States of America, as the "Locomotive"), which now lies in the Douro, and is likely to sail very soon, in ballast, is intended to be employed in the Slave Trade; that her present crew is not Portuguese, but is composed of men of different countries; and that it is with the same crew that she is intended really to be manned when at sea, although means will be used to give her the appearance of sailing, in all respects, as the laws of Portugal require.

I have, &c.

Sir,

Lisbon, June 23, 1856.

I HASTEN to transmit to your Excellency a copy of a letter which was addressed on the 20th instant by Mr. Johnston, Her Majesty's Consul at Oporto, to the Intendant of Marine at that port, communicating the information which he had received relative to a vessel called the "Locomotora," now in the Douro, which Mr. Johnston believes to be destined for the Slave Trade; and I have at the same time the honour to request your Excellency to be so good as to cause the earliest possible instructions to be forwarded to the authorities at Oporto, in order that this vessel may not be permitted to leave the Douro until a strict inquiry shall have taken place into the suspicious circumstances connected with her, and that, if sufficient ground should be found for so doing, legal proceedings may be set on foot against her master, crew, and owners, or other persons having an interest in her; moreover, that all such other measures may be taken as are calculated to frustrate the nefarious purposes for which it appears she is intended to be employed.

I beg to add that the suspicions attached to the "Locomotora" are increased by the fact which is reported to me by Mr. Consul Johnston, viz., that her consignee at Oporto is Senhor Bernardo José Machado, who was consignee of the "Guerra," a well known slaver, which upwards of two years ago succeeded in evading the vigilance of His Most Faithful Majesty's authorities in that city.

I RECEIVED the note which you were pleased to address to me on the 23rd instant, bringing to my knowledge the communication which the British Consul at Oporto made to the Marine authorities at that city, respecting the ship "Locomotora," suspected by him to be destined to the Traffic in Slaves. Having taken into due consideration the remarks contained in your above-mentioned note, I have the honour to inform you that yesterday, at 6 o'clock A.M., a telegraphic order was sent to the Civil Governor of Oporto to proceed in accordance with the law and the Treaties, should the information respecting this vessel prove to be correct; and I have to add that the Portuguese Consul-General in the United States having made known to this office the purchase and change of flag of the said vessel, by the Portuguese subject Antonio Rodrigues Vieira, I acquainted the Minister of Marine with the same on the 16th instant, and on this day I write officially to the same Minister, as well as to the Minister of the Interior, upon the subject of your note, in order that those Departments may take such steps as the case requires.

I reserve myself then to make known to you the result of the inquiries about to be instituted, and I avail, &c.

I HAVE the honour to report to your Lordship that a Project of Law, which originated in the Chamber of Peers, enacting the liberation of the children of female slaves born in the transmarine provinces of Portugal subsequently to its publication, passed, in the Chamber of Deputies, on the 14th instant, with an amendment, proposed by the Deputy Senhor Moraes Carvalho, to the effect that such children shall be obliged to serve the masters of their mothers, gratuitously, until the age of 20 years, these masters being obliged, in their turn, to provide for their board and education, and that such service may cease upon the payment of an equivalent for the expense of board and education. It is further stipulated by this Bill that children, up to 7 years old, shall always accompany their mothers in the event of the latter being sold or exchanged; that female slaves obtaining their liberty be allowed to take with them their children up to the age of 4 years; that the children of the women having a right to maintenance are likewise entitled to be maintained by the masters as long as the gratuitous services of the mothers last; and that the Government are likewise authorised to take the necessary means for carrying out these provisions.

This Project of Law will now revert to the Chamber of Peers.

(Translation.)

Palace, June 30, 1856.

IN addition to my note of the 25th of this month respecting the schooner "Locomotora," I have the honour to communicate to you that the Civil Governor of the Oporto district informs me, in a despatch of the above date, that the said schooner entered the Douro on the 29th of May last, from New York, in twenty-five days, with a crew of nine men, including the Master João da Cunha Ferreira; that she brought a cargo of log-wood, consigned to Bernardo José Machado, according to the statement of the Master.

The Civil Governor adds, that the change of flag consequent upon her becoming Portuguese property was provisionally authorised by the Portuguese Consul-General at New York, and as she could not leave the Douro without legalising this change of flag, it appears that application had been made to the Oporto custom-house for her measurement, in order to obtain the Royal passport from the Marine Department, thus legalising her Portuguese nationality.

He further adds, that on the same day he held a conference with the Intendant of Marine, who was already placed on his guard, as well as the Director of the custom-house, and the police authorities, to take such measures, in concert, as the case might require.

That magistrate concludes by stating that it is said the above-mentioned schooner is about to return to the United States with a cargo of wine; that in the meantime the Intendant of Marine had remarked that the proportions of the schooner more resembled those of a cruizer than of a merchant-vessel, having as yet no cargo on board.

In transmitting to you this information, and reserving to myself to make known to you any which I may subsequently receive, I avail, &c.

My Lord,

Lisbon, July 3, 1856.

IN the despatch of the 12th of May last, from Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Rio de Janeiro, of which a copy has been transmitted to me in your Lordship's despatch of the 26th ultimo, Mr. Jerningham, with reference to my despatch of the 13th of March, remarks upon there being a little inaccuracy in the statement of the Brazilian Minister here, Senhor Maciel Monteiro, to me, relative to the measures taken by the Brazilian Government for the arrest and eventual expulsion of the notorious slave-trader Avellar from Brazil, having been adopted at his requisition, for although he had urged the arrest in order to judicial proceedings, yet the expulsion was the act of the Imperial Government alone.

In reply, I beg to observe, as will be seen by a reference to my above-named despatch, that it was not a statement of Senhor Monteiro, but a despatch from Senhor Paranhos to that Minister which I was quoting, and in which mention was made of Mr. Jerningham having urged the adoption of proceedings against Avellar, and that the mistake has been neither that of Senhor Monteiro, nor of Senhor Paranhos, but my own, for having erroneously inferred that the expulsion as well as the arrest of Avellar had taken place at Mr. Jerningham's requisition, in the same manner as similar expulsions had been previously urged by Her Majesty's Legation at Rio de Janeiro. I am glad, however, to learn that the merit of so wholesome a measure as that of the expulsion in question belongs to the initiative of the Brazilian Government, as it is a new proof of their anxiety, when the absence of sufficient legal evidence precludes the conviction of a slave-trader, as was the case with Avellar, to inflict such punishment upon him, when his moral guilt is made clear to them, and so far to frustrate his designs as may be in their power.

I beg to add, that Senhor Monteiro continues to communicate and co-operate in the most cordial manner with me, as I do with him, on all Slave Trade matters, and that we have held to the Marquis de Soulé, on his assumption of office, and subsequently, identic language on various pending questions connected with those matters.

I have, &c.

My Lord,

Lisbon, July 7, 1856.

WITH reference to my despatches of the 27th ultimo and of the 3rd instant, relative to the schooner "Locomotora," now in the Douro, suspected of being destined for the Slave Trade, I have the honour of transmitting herewith a translation of a supplementary note of the 4th instant, which I have received from the Marquis de Loulé, covering the copy of a despatch from the Intendant of Marine at Oporto, reporting the measures taken by him in concert with the different authorities in that city, in order to prevent any slave-trading attempt by the above-mentioned vessel, and inclosing a description of her.

The Marquis de Loulé adds, that the Minister of Marine has transmitted orders that the "Locomotora" should be rigorously searched shortly before she sails, and that an embargo should be laid upon her if any of the articles mentioned in the Decree of December 1836, should be found in her; the Governors-General of the Transmarine Provinces having been made acquainted with the suspicions attaching to her, and a description of her having been forwarded to them.

I have this day addressed a note to the Marquis de Loulé, thanking him for his present communication, as well as for his previous one of the 30th ultimo, of which a copy was inclosed in my before-named despatch of the 3rd instant.

I have, &c.

Palace, July 4, 1856.

IN addition to my note of the 30th June last, relating to the suspicions which were entertained that the schooner "Locomotora," now anchored in the Douro, was intended for the Traffic in Slaves, I have the honour to place in your hands, for your information, the inclosed copy of the despatch which the Counsellor-Intendant of Marine at Oporto addressed on the 27th of said month to the Major-General of the Navy, upon the subject of the measures which he had adopted in concert with the different authorities of that city, for opposing any attempt of that nature.

On this occasion it becomes my duty to state to you, that the Minister of Marine informs me that he has issued orders to the above-mentioned Counsellor, to cause a strict search to be made on board that vessel a short time previous to her departure; and should any of the articles mentioned in the Decree of 10th December, 1836, be found, to place her under embargo; the Governors-General of the Transmarine Provinces having been also informed of the suspicions attached to that schooner, and her description, as contained in the annexed document, having also been forwarded to them in order that she may be duly watched.

I renew, &c.

Intendant of Marine's Office, Oporto,

Illustrious and Excellent Sir,

June 27, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to inform your Excelency that in this port is anchored a schooner of American build, called the "Locomotora," which arrived from New York laden with logwood, bearing the Portuguese flag, by authority of our Consul, and with a crew of different nations. Some days ago I received a notice from the English Consul with respect to this schooner, as well as to another one which he mentions, but which has not yet arrived, that they were both intended for the Slave Trade. As soon as I received the said notice, I went on board, and I could perceive that she was more fitted for a cruizer than for burthen, having very little flooring, and being very sharp both fore and aft, which gives her very fine lines. I also found out on this occasion that she was a fast sailer and a good sea-boat; that she was about to hoist the Portuguese flag, in order to proceed to the port from whence she came, with a cargo of wine; having still a crew consisting of a mate, who states himself to be a Brazilian, but is a Frenchman, three sailors of the latter nation, and one Italian. I immediately wrote to the Director of the Custom-house, informing him of the informations respecting this vessel, and requesting him to aid me in watching her. He, in reply, said that, previously to the receipt of my despatch, he had informed the Government of the suspicions which I mentioned, and that, on his part, he would take every measure in his power, and would expect me to do the same.

I had also, with the Civil Governor, a conference relating to the vessel in question; and in consequence of an instruction which he received from the Home Department, we both agreed to keep a close watch upon this vessel, and to search her strictly upon her departure.

Having made known to your Excellency the measures which I have taken, and assuring you that I will do all in my power in compliance with my duty, but I admit that, after leaving this port, the vessel may go to another port, to take in what is necessary for her supposed destination, or even transship her cargo to another vessel, or meet at a given port, and exchange it for the necessary articles for her speculation, and therefore I considered it my duty to transmit to your Excellency the accompanying description, by which the schooner "Locomotora" may be known on the African cruising-ground, as well as at our islands.

I am informed, also, that application has been made at the Custom-house for her measurement, for enabling her to obtain her register, and subsequently the Royal passport; that they wish to take the same crew that she has on her muster-roll, and if this is not allowed, she will take them as passengers, alleging that they were engaged under condition of being taken back by the vessel, which arrangement I cannot prevent, inasmuch as, by law, one-third of the crew may be foreigners, and passengers may be conveyed.

Having thus acquainted you with what has passed respecting the schooner "Locomotora," I await your Excellency's further instructions.

God preserve, &c.

My Lord,

Lisbon, July 8, 1856.

IN my despatch of the 16th of February last,* I reported that the Chamber of Deputies, in sanctioning the Royal Decree of the 14th of December, 1854, for the registration and partial emancipation of slaves in the Portuguese Colonial possessions (a translation of which was inclosed in Sir Richard Pakenham's despatch of the 8th of January, 1855), had passed a resolution extending to the slaves belonging to the Municipal Chambers, and Charitable Institutions called "Misericordias," the freedom stipulated by the single paragraph in Article 6 of that Decree for all slaves belonging to the State.

The Chamber of Peers having approved of this resolution, it has been converted into the law of which I have the honour to transmit herewith a translation, signed by His Most Faithful Majesty, under date of the 30th ultimo, and published in the official Gazette yesterday.

Law liberating Slaves belonging to the State and to certain Corporations.

(Translation.)

DOM PETER, by the grace of God, King of Portugal and the Algarves, &c.

We hereby make known to all our subjects that the General Cortes have decreed, and we confirm, the following law:—

Article 1. The Decree of 14th December, 1854, containing measures for effecting the liberation of slaves in the transmarine provinces, and for affording protection to these and to the liberated negroes, is hereby confirmed with the alterations set down in the following Articles.

Art. 2. Besides the slaves belonging to the State, to whom liberty was granted by virtue of the section of Article 6 of the said Decree, those belonging to the Municipal Chambers and to charitable institutions (“misericordias”), are also free from the date of the official publication of this law in the respective provinces.

Art. 3. Such slaves as may obtain their liberty by virtue of the provisions of the preceding Article, and of the section of Article 6<sup>3</sup> of the above-mentioned Decree, are bound to serve the State or the corporation to which they lately belonged, in the manner and for the period stipulated by the Regulations of 25th October, 1853.

Art. 4. The stipulations contained in the sections of Articles 6 and 29 of the said Decree of the 14th December, 1854, are by the present law specified and extended, and all legislative enactments to the contrary are by the same revoked.

We therefore order all the authorities whom the knowledge and execution of the said Law may concern, to carry it out and cause it to be carried out and observed fully as therein expressed. The Minister and Secretary of State for Marine and Colonial Affairs shall cause it to be printed, published and made public

Law abolishing Slavery in certain Territories of the Province of Angola.

(Translation.)

DOM PETER, by the grace of God King of Portugal and the Algarves, &c.

We hereby make known to all our subjects that the General Cortes have decreed, and we confirm the following Law:—

Article 1. The condition of slavery is hereby abolished in the following territories of the Province of Angola—

1. In the district of Ambriz, from the River Lifune to the River Zaire.
2. In the territories of Cabinda and Molembo.

Art. 2. This law shall come into execution, in the district of Ambriz, at the expiration of six months from the date of its publication in the "Boletim Official" of Angola; and in the other territories mentioned in the preceding Article, six months from the establishment in each, by the Government, of administrative and military authorities.

Art. 3. All legislative enactments to the contrary are hereby revoked.

We therefore command all the authorities to whom the knowledge and execution of the above Law appertains, to carry it out, and cause it to be carried out and observed fully, as therein contained. The Minister and Secretary of State for Marine and Colonial Affairs shall cause it to be printed, published, and circulated.

My Lord,

Lisbon, July 18, 1856.

WITH reference to my despatch of the 8th of March last,* I have the honour of inclosing the translation of a Bill which was introduced into the Chamber of Peers by Viscount de Sá da Bandeira in order to guard against cases similar to that of the fugitive slave José Maria from the Brazilian brig "Iris," at Oporto, and which, after having been passed by that Chamber, was yesterday adopted by the Chamber of Deputies.

This Bill provides, by Article 1, for the freedom of slaves entering any port or anchorage of the Kingdom of Portugal, or of the Archipelagoes of Madeira and the Azores; and by Article 2, for that of all slaves belonging to foreigners on their landing in any of the above-mentioned territories, the stipulations, however, of existing Treaties with foreign Powers being observed in respect to such liberated slaves, who will have to be given up to the Commanders of the vessels to which they may belong.

Article 4 secures the freedom of slaves entering the Kingdom of Portugal by the frontier.

Article 5 extends the provisions of Articles 1 and 2, with a distinction as to the period of their coming into execution, to the territories of the States of India, and to the city of Macao and its dependencies.

Article 6 repeals the Alvará of the 10th of March, 1800, and other legislative enactments to the contrary under which the slave José Maria was claimed.

I reserve to myself to transmit a copy of this Law when officially promulgated.

Law liberating Slaves upon entering the Kingdom of Portugal.

(Translation.)

Article 1. ALL slaves embarked on board of Portuguese vessels become free on entering any port or anchorage of the Kingdom of Portugal, or of the Archipelagoes of Madeira and the Azores.

Art. 2. All slaves belonging to foreigners shall become equally free on landing in any of the Portuguese territories above mentioned.

§. With regard to such slaves as, although they have become free by virtue of the provisions of the preceding Articles, will have to be given up to the Commanders of the vessels to which they belong, the provisions of Treaties entered into with foreign nations shall be observed.

Art. 3. The provisions of the preceding Articles are applicable to slaves entering the Kingdom of Portugal by the frontier.

Art. 4. The stipulations contained in the two first Articles shall come into execution six months from the date of the publication of this Law in the "Diario do Governo."

Art. 5. The stipulations of Articles 1 and 2 of this Law shall be observed in the territories forming the States of India, and in the city of Macao and its dependencies. The period treated of in Article 4 shall be extended to one year for these territories.

Art. 6. The Alvará of the 10th March, 1800, and all other legislative enactments to the contrary, are hereby revoked.

HIS Majesty the King having been made acquainted with the despatch from the Governor of the Province of Macao, Timor, and Solor, dated 7th May last, which inclosed a copy of the despatch addressed to him by the Board of Guardians of Slaves and Liberated Negroes, representing the impossibility, or rather the uselessness, of applying to them the provisions of the Decree of 14th December, 1854; and His Majesty observing, from what is set forth by the said Board, and confirmed by the Governor in his despatch, that slavery may be considered extinct at Macao, and that the few individuals still registered as slaves and liberated negroes, can hardly be termed such, inasmuch as they remain voluntarily with their masters as household servants, owing to their ignorance of a mechanical trade, and to their being almost all of an advanced age; from which circumstance the inference may be drawn that, without inconvenience or loss to the masters of those so-called slaves, but rather with their goodwill, and with much credit to their sentiments of humanity, slavery might be declared extinct in the city of Macao de jure, as happily it is already de facto, thus obtaining the honour of being the first of the Portuguese Colonies where this great principle of civilization was proclaimed: His August Majesty commands, through the Marine and Colonial Department, that the said Governor, in presenting these views to the Colonial Government in Council, shall give information through the same Department as to whether they can be carried out, and as to the best method for so doing.

DOM PETER, by the grace of God, King of Portugal and the Algarves, &c.

We hereby make known to all our subjects that the General Cortes have decreed, and we confirm the following Law:—

Article 1. The children of female slaves born in the Transmarine Provinces, subsequently to the publication of this law, shall be considered free.

Art. 2. The children of female slaves mentioned in the preceding Article are bound to serve their mothers' masters gratuitously up to the age of twenty years.

Art. 3. The owners of female slaves are bound to provide for the board and education of such children as are born of them subsequently to the publication of this Law, during the whole period of their gratuitous service.

Art. 4. The service of the children of females, as specified in Article 2, shall cease whenever the person having a right to such service shall be compensated, either for the value of the remaining period of service according to the said Article, or for the expenses incurred for board and education as provided by the preceding Article.

§. The Government, in concert with the Colonial Board, shall take such measures and frame such regulations as may be found necessary for determining the mode of compensation in such cases as may demand it, and with reference to the local circumstances, and to the different manners and customs.

Art. 5. In sales or transfer of female slaves either made by contract during lifetime, by testamentary dispositions, or by right of succession, the children of such slaves declared free by virtue of this Law, and not exceeding seven years of age, shall always accompany their mothers.

Art. 6. The children of female slaves not exceeding the age of four years shall be delivered up to their mothers when the latter obtain their liberty, provided they wish to take them, and in that case the engagements contained in Articles 2 and 3 of this Law shall cease.

Art. 7. The owners of female slaves are also bound to maintain the children of the daughters of such slaves, provided that the mothers respectively are entitled to their maintenance, as specified in Article 3 of this Law. This engagement, however, on the part of the owners, shall cease as soon as their right to the gratuitous service of the mothers of such children ceases.

Art. 8. The Boards of Guardians for slaves shall see that the provisions of this Law are faithfully carried out.

Art. 9. The Government are hereby authorized to create any establishments or associations, and to make the necessary outlay, in order to afford due protection to the children of female slaves mentioned in Article 1, as well as to the effect that this Law may be fully and promptly executed.

Art. 10. All Legislative enactments to the contrary are hereby revoked.

We therefore command all the authorities to whom the knowledge and execution of the said Law may apply, to carry it out, and cause it to be carried out and observed as fully as contained therein.

The Secretary of State for Marine and Colonial Affairs shall cause it to be printed, published, and circulated.

Lisbon, August 27, 1856.

WITH reference to my previous correspondence on the subject of the vessel called the "Locomotora," now in the Douro, and suspected of being destined for the Slave Trade, I beg to report that I recently received a despatch from Mr. Consul Johnston at Oporto, observing that the fact of the Portuguese Consul-General at New York having notified to his Government her sale to a Portuguese subject, did not affect his belief as to the design of her owner or owners, and stating that he had mentioned his opinion on the subject to the United States' Consul at Oporto, who, as Mr. Johnston believed, not feeling assured that the law concerning the sale of vessels in America had been complied with in the case of the "Locomotora," had reported the matter to the proper authorities there.

I took an opportunity of communicating the contents of Mr. Johnston's despatch, confidentially, to the Viscount de Sá de Bandeira, the Minister of Marine and Colonies, who stated that if I would address the Government on the subject of it, it would afford him a further pretext for delaying the delivery of the ship's papers to the "Locomotora;" as the circumstance of the sale of the vessel being regular according to Portuguese law, and of the other formalities required by the latter having been observed, would otherwise render it difficult for him to stop her departure any longer. Accordingly, on the 18th instant, I wrote a note to the Marquis de Loulé, in which I stated the fact of Mr. Johnston having been in communication with the United States' Consul relative to the sale of the "Locomotora," as reported by the Portuguese Consul-General at New York, and the doubts entertained by the American Consul as to the American law having been complied with in her case; and I have since received a note from his Excellency, dated the 23rd instant, stating that on that day new orders had been transmitted by the Viscount de Sá to the Intendant of Marine at Oporto, to watch her and prevent her sailing.

I may add, that I have communicated my proceedings in this matter to the United States' Minister here, Mr. O'Sullivan.

My Lord,

Lisbon, September 6, 1856.

WITH reference to my despatch of the 27th July last, relative to the contemplated abolition of slavery at Macao, I have the honour of transmitting herewith a translation of a further Portaria issued, on the 25th ultimo, by Viscount de Sá da Bandeira, the Portuguese Minister of the Marine and Colonies, and published in the official "Gazette" of the 1st instant, notifying His Most Faithful Majesty's commands that the Governor-General of the Portuguese possessions in India shall be instructed to lay before the Local Council the expediency of declaring slavery to be extinct de jure in those possessions, as it is stated to be happily extinct de facto, and to report upon the feasibility of such a measure, and upon the best means of carrying it out. I had some conversation, a few days ago, on this subject with Viscount de Sá, and he then told me that he likewise hoped to be able to take measures for the abolition of slavery in some of the Cape de Verd Islands, by adopting the same plan as had been followed in the case of Ambriz, viz., that of allowing an interval of a few months between the publication of the Decree of Abolition and the period fixed for its execution, by which means the proprietors of slaves were enabled, if they thought proper, to dispose of them previously, and the Government were relieved from the necessity of giving to such slave-holders a compensation which they could not afford.

The Viscount's praiseworthy object is, by narrowing the circle of slavery as much as possible, to pave the way for its complete extinction in the Portuguese Colonial possessions.

I have, &c.

HIS Majesty the King having seen the despatch of the Governor-General of the Indian States, dated the 2nd July last, in which he transmits a list of the slaves existing in those States, and registered in accordance with Article 3 of the Decree of the 14th December, 1854, declaring that these slaves, although by right they may be considered as such, yet, in point of fact, they are not slaves, inasmuch as their masters do not prevent them from going wheresoever they please; it appearing from this declaration that, without loss or inconvenience to the masters of these so-named slaves, slavery might be declared extinct de jure, as happily it is already extinct de facto, in the Portuguese possessions in India; His Majesty commands that the Marine and Colonial Department shall give instructions to the said Governor-General to lay before the Local Council this suggestion, and to report as to whether it can be carried out, and also the best method for so doing.

Mr. Howard to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received September 13.)

My Lord,

Lisbon, September 8, 1856.

I HAVE the honour of transmitting herewith a translation of a note of the 4th instant, together with its inclosure, which I have received from the Marquis de Loulé in reply to the notes addressed to his predecessor, the Viscount d'Athoguia, by Sir Richard Pakenham on the 19th of January, 1855, and by myself on the 25th of February, 28th of March, and 14th of April of this year, as reported by Sir Richard Pakenham in his despatch of the 19th January, 1855, and by myself in my despatches of the 28th of February, of the 28th of March, and of the 18th of April last, to your Lordship, urging upon the Portuguese Government the observance of the stipulations of Article V of the Treaty of the 3rd of July, 1842, between Great Britain and Portugal, for the suppression of the Slave Trade, and the transmission of orders to the Governor-General of Angola not in future to allow settlers removing from the territories under his administration to the Portuguese possessions off the coast of Africa to take with them other slaves within the specified number than such as are their bonâ fide household servants according to the terms of that Article.

In this note the Marquis de Loulé incloses a copy of the Report of the Colonial Board upon the subject of the above-mentioned notes of Her Majesty's Legation, and states that instructions were forwarded by the last mail to Count Lavradio to come to an understanding with Her Majesty's Government on each of the seven points of the Report with a view to the definitive settlement of the matter in question, and to the transmission of the proper orders to the Portuguese authorities in the transmarine provinces.

From the first point your Lordship will perceive that the Colonial Board propose the adoption of the interpretation by Her Majesty's Government of Article V of the Treaty of July 1842.

The second point relates to the precautions to be observed in respect to the shipment of liberated negroes from Angola for the Islands of St. Thomas and Prince.

The third point contains the opinion of the Board that the conveyance of slaves by sea, from one part of the continent to another, within the same Colony, should not be admitted as constituting an infraction of the Treaty, but that certain specified precautions should be taken to prevent abuses.

The fourth and fifth points relate to the conveyance of liberated negroes from one place in a transmarine province to another, which is to be prohibited in foreign vessels.

By the sixth point it is recommended that the shipment of liberated negroes to any foreign country should be prohibited.

And by the seventh, that the authorities who may transgress these stipulations shall be made strictly responsible.

I have, &c.

THE Marine Department having been made acquainted with the subject of the note which Sir Richard Pakenham addressed to my predecessor on the 19th January of last year, as also with those which you addressed to him on the 25th February, 28th March, and 14th April last, relating to the interpretation of Article V of the Treaty of the 3rd July, 1842, between Portugal and Great Britain, for the abolition of the Slave Trade, and in which you referred to the shipment of 10 slaves on board the American vessel "Seamew," at Loanda, for the Island of St. Thomas; that Department has communicated to me the Report of the Colonial Board upon this subject dated the 12th August last.

In transmitting to you a copy of the above-mentioned Report, it becomes my duty to state to you that by the last packet the Count de Lavradio, His Majesty's Minister in London, received the necessary instructions to come to an understanding with Her Britannic Majesty's Government upon each of the points of the said Report, in order to settle definitively the matter in question, and to issue the proper orders to the Portuguese authorities in the transmarine provinces.

Report.

(Translation.)

THE Board are of opinion—

1. That your Majesty's Government, in order to show their solicitude for putting a stop to the Traffic in Slaves, may agree to declare Article V of the Treaty of the 3rd July, 1842, to be as interpreted by the British Government.

CLASS B.

2. That it should be enacted that such liberated negroes as leave Angola for the Islands of St. Thomas and Prince, may embark only at the city of Loanda, and at no other place, and that they must be furnished with certificates of registration, the embarkation to be effected under the supervision of the administrative authority and of the Board of Guardians of Slaves and Liberated Negroes, and that such liberated negroes may only be conveyed from Loanda direct to the city of St. Thomas, where they shall be landed and placed under the supervision of the local Board of Guardians.

3. That the prohibition to convey slaves by sea from one part of the continent to another within the same colony, should not be admitted, as it goes beyond the stipulations of the Treaty, but that in order to prevent abuses, the greatest supervision should be exercised, that the slaves should be furnished with an authentic document from the proper authority, that they should only go in national merchant-vessels, and not more than five slaves to be conveyed on each voyage, a greater number to be permitted only in open boats going direct from one district to another, or within the same district, but always accompanied by authentic documents containing the names of all and each of the slaves.

4. That the conveyance of liberated slaves from one place in a transmarine province to any other place should not be allowed in foreign vessels of any description, the captains or masters transgressing this rule to incur the penalty set down in the police regulations.

5. That it should be enacted that no vessel should convey, on each voyage, more than ten liberated negroes, unless by a special order from your Majesty's Government.

6. That the shipment of liberated negroes to any foreign country, even alleging that they are engaged as free men for certain temporary service, should be prohibited throughout the entire Portuguese territory in Africa; and that the stipulations of this Article should be made extensive to the aborigines of the Islands of Timor and Solor.

7. That the authorities who may transgress these stipulations shall be made strictly responsible.

Your Majesty will above all determine what is best.

My Lord,

Lisbon, September 18, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to report to your Lordship that the Portuguese corvette "Goa," Captain Pinho, sailed on the 12th instant for Loanda, to relieve, on the Angola station, the brig of war "Serra do Pilar," Captain Rodovalho, whose term of service has expired, and that Viscount de Sá da Bandeira, the Minister of Marine and Colonies, has assured me that Captain Pinho is a good officer and will follow in the traces of his predecessor as regards the suppression of the Slave Trade, having formerly been employed in cruising on the eastern coast of Africa.

I am happy to say that the price at which the slaver "General Pinkney" or "General Pierce" has been valued and taken by the Portuguese Government, has been apportioned as prize-money amongst Captain Rodovalho and the officers and crew of his vessel. The "Goa" has taken out as passengers to Loanda, the newly appointed Brazilian Consul there, Senhor Noguera da Gama, to whom the Brazilian Minister at this Court, Senhor Maciel Monteiro, informs me that he has given the most stringent instructions in respect to the suppression of the Slave Trade.

Senhor Monteiro being desirous that Senhor Noguera da Gama should co-operate towards that end with Her Majesty's Vice-Consul and Commissioners at Loanda and take counsel from them, and having accordingly requested me to recommend him to them, I furnished him with a letter of introduction to Sir George Jackson, as I believed Mr. Vice-Consul Brand to be at present on leave of absence, but I made it equally applicable to the latter and to Mr. Gabriel.

Mr. Livingston, the enterprising African traveller.

I have this day received a note of yesterday's date from the Marquis, stating that he was bringing the contents of my note to the knowledge of the Minister of Marine, and that it was extremely agreeable to His Most Faithful Majesty's Government that the conduct of the authorities in question towards that traveller should have been justly appreciated by Her Majesty's Government.

VISCOUNT D'ATHOGUIA, in his note to me of the 2nd of May last (a translation of which was transmitted in my despatch of the 8th of that month), expressed the wish that I should furnish him with any further information which might reach me on the subject of the inhuman conduct of the masters of the Portuguese vessels "Emilia," and "General Rego," now "Africano," towards certain self-emancipated Africans whom they had contracted to convey to Lagos.

I therefore, on the receipt of your Lordship's despatch of the 22nd ultimo, brought to the knowledge of the Marquis de Loulé, in the note of the 3rd instant, of which I have the honour of inclosing a copy, the contents of Mr. Consul Campbell's despatch of the 16th of July last, to your Lordship, confirming his former statement concerning the horrible fate of the passengers forcibly landed at Whydah from the "General Rego," and calling attention to the fact that the supercargoes of Portuguese vessels dispose of their passenger fittings at places where they can be used in slave-vessels.

Mr. Howard to the Marquis de Loulé.

Sir,

Lisbon, October 3, 1856.

YOUR Excellency's predecessor, the Viscount d'Athoguia, having, in his note of the 2nd of May last, requested me to furnish him with any further information which might reach me on the subject of the inhuman conduct of the masters of the two Portuguese vessels "General Rego," now "Africano," and "Emilia," towards certain self-emancipated negroes, whom they had contracted to convey to Lagos, on the coast of Africa, I have the honour to inform your Excellency that the Earl of Clarendon has received a despatch from Mr. Campbell, Her Majesty's Consul at Lagos, dated the 16th of July last, confirming his former statements relative to the forcible debarkation at Whydah, by the master and supercargo of the "General Rego," Domingos da Costa Lage, and Angelo Custodio Ribeiro Debarco, of some 40 of those Africans, whom they had brought from Bahia, and to their having, in consequence, fallen into the hands of the King of Dahomey, who put all the adults to death, and retained their children as slaves. Mr. Campbell, in his despatch, observes that all doubt as to the fate of these poor people has long ceased to exist.

Information of the occurrence came to Lagos from Whydah; and the Abbeokuta traders meeting those of Abomey periodically at the market of Ketu, a large town about equidistant from the two towns, are too well informed of what passes at Abomey affecting their interest or security.

Mr. Campbell further observes, that the masters and supercargoes of Portuguese vessels bringing African passengers from Bahia, are loth to land them at Lagos, because he always urges upon them the necessity of their landing or destroying all the extra equipments put on board for the use of the passengers, and informs them that they will compromise the safety of their vessels by not doing so.

In the case of a three-masted vessel, called the "Linda Flor," which brought across from Bahia the large number of 230 African passengers, Mr. Campbell was very urgent that her extra equipment should be landed; and it transpired that the supercargo (under whose orders and directions the vessels mostly navigate), had landed the large copper cooking utensils, belonging to the passengers, at Whydah. His object in doing so could not be mistaken. The supercargo, however, had to pay their value to the Africans.

A small Portuguese schooner, the "Aguia," lately landed at Lagos, fourteen Africans from Bahia. The master, before leaving for that place, was solicitous to know from Mr. Campbell whether his passengers had made any complaint. In this case the Africans had met with no difficulty, and they were landed with every particle of their baggage.

In bringing these particulars to the knowledge of your Excellency, I avail, &c.

THE Viscount de Sá da Bandeira, the Minister of Marine and Colonies, informed me yesterday that he had just received, with much satisfaction, from the Governor-General of Angola, the intelligence of the capture to the north of Ambriz, by Her Majesty's ship "Teazer," of a vessel without papers corresponding to the description of the "Roberto," the disappearance of which from the port of San Martinho, in this province, forms the subject of my despatches of the 14th and 26th of April last.

Viscount de Sá observed that the Governor-General had expressed his regret that the circumstance of the Commander having landed, on some part of the coast, the crew, who had stated themselves to be Montevideans, would render it more difficult to investigate the matter; but that, having in the meantime received the communications forwarded to him by Viscount d'Athoguia, relative to the suspicions attaching to the "Roberto" of being destined for the Slave Trade, he should cause search to be made after those individuals.

The Viscount added, that he thought he was able to trace the authorship of the contemplated venture to some Spaniards who came from Barcelona to a watering-place called Caldas, and one of whom paid a visit to San Martinho the day before the "Roberto" disappeared.

By a Royal Decree of the 27th ultimo, published in the "Diario do Governo" of this day, this Portaria, of which Her Majesty's Commissioners speak so favourably in their report, has been approved of with only a slight amendment in Article IV, according to which it is the retaining and not the placing of slaves in irons which is rendered penal, and the provisions of the Article are not to apply to slaves who, not being so detained, are undergoing, by orders of their masters, punishments permitted by the police regulations.

My Lord,

Lisbon, October 8, 1856.

YOUR Lordship will no doubt have already learnt from Her Majesty's Commissioners at Loanda, that John E. Silva, the master, and Manoel José Dias, the mate, of the slaver "General Pinkney" or "General Pierce," which was captured in February last in the waters of Benguella by the Commander of the Portuguese naval station on the west coast of Africa, have been condemned, by a judicial sentence of the 9th of June, to the galleys for three years and to a fine of 500 milreis, and that the sailors who composed the crew, and the notorious slave-trader Benito Derizanz, who figured as a passenger, have been sentenced to serve three years without pay in vessels belonging to the State, and to pay the costs.

The Viscount de Sá da Bandeira, the Minister of Marine and Colonies, in communicating this intelligence to me, showed me a despatch from the Governor-General, Senhor Amaral, expressing the great annoyance he had felt at the intelligence, which he first learnt from Sir George Jackson, that the Substitute of the Judge and the Delegate of the Attorney-General had in the first instance given Dom Benito Derizanz permission to embark on board the Portuguese vessel "Perpetua" for Lisbon, there to await the result of his appeal from his sentence to the Superior Court in this capital.

Against this permission Senhor Amaral immediately protested, declaring that he should render the Delegate responsible for the consequences if Derizanz escaped, and the consequence appears to have been its withdrawal, but on the arrival of the "Perpetua" here on the 4th instant, Viscount de Sá nevertheless caused strict inquiry to be made whether that individual had come on board of her, the result of which was that he had not.

Mr. Howard to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received October 24.)

My Lord,

Lisbon, October 18, 1856.

IN a despatch of the 3rd instant Mr. Johnston, Her Majesty's Consul at Oporto, inclosed to me the copy of a letter which he had addressed to the Civil Governor of that district, calling his attention to the information which he had received, that several negro children who had been brought from Brazil to Portugal had, at different times, been sent back to that country, and that means not having been taken, at the time of the delivery of passports for them at Oporto, to make known to the proper authorities in Brazil that those children were free, they had been liable, upon being landed, to be reduced to slavery, and, in some cases at least, had actually been sold as slaves.

In the same letter to the Civil Governor, Mr. Johnston stated, that he had also heard that a boy, named Julio, who was to be embarked in a few days on board a vessel called the "Nova Subtil," bound for Rio de Janeiro, was likely to be exposed to that risk.

Upon the receipt of Mr. Johnston's despatch, on the 7th instant, I brought its contents under the notice of the Marquis de Loulé, and submitted, at the same time, the expediency of his Excellency directing the Governor of Oporto, without loss of time, to take such measures as might serve not only to guarantee the boy Julio, but likewise all other negro children in similar circumstances, against the risk of being considered as slaves on their return to Brazil, and of instructing the Portuguese Consuls in the Brazilian ports of arrival, to claim the protection of the Brazilian authorities in favour of such children.

To this note of mine the Marquis de Loulé replied by one of the 11th instant, acquainting me that on its receipt a telegraphic message had been sent to Oporto, instructing the Civil Governor not to fail to mention in the passport of the negro named Julio, that he was free, and that by the trans-Atlantic steamer which was shortly to leave Lisbon for Rio de Janeiro, his Excellency would write officially to the Portuguese Consul-General there, recommending him to use the utmost vigilance in order to prevent a repetition of the abuses which I had pointed out, in respect to negroes who are taken back to the Brazilian Empire.

Mr. Johnston having, in the meantime, in a despatch of the 6th instant, reported to me that the Civil Governor of Oporto had informed him that there was no reason to apprehend that the boy Julio would return to a state of slavery, both the Brazilian and Portuguese authorities who had granted him passports having recognised him as free; I mentioned this statement to the Marquis de Loulé, in the note which I addressed to him on the 14th instant, thanking him for the readiness with which he had been so good as to comply with the wishes which I had expressed upon this matter.

I have the honour of inclosing, herewith, copies of Mr. Johnston's despatches and of my notes to the Marquis de Loulé, and translation of his Excellency's note to me, above referred to.

Having likewise brought the intelligence communicated to me by Mr. Johnston to the knowledge of the Brazilian Minister here, Senhor Maciel Monteiro, he at once, with the alacrity which he always evinces in acting up to any wish which I may express on Slave Trade matters, wrote to the Brazilian Consul at Oporto, directing him to take especial care to mark on the passports which he delivers to negro children, the fact of their being free; and by the trans-Atlantic steamer which left Lisbon on the 13th instant for Rio de Janeiro, he transmitted to his Government a copy of the letter which I had addressed to him on the subject, and requested that measures might be taken, on the landing of such negroes in Brazil, to guarantee their freedom.

Of the various steps which I have thus taken in this matter, I have not failed to inform Mr. Consul Johnston.

I have, &c.

Consul Johnston to Mr. Howard.

Oporto, October 3, 1856.

I BEG leave to inclose a copy of a letter which I addressed to the Civil Governor of Oporto, this evening, in consequence of my having been informed that several negroes brought from Brazil to this country, who had resided here for some time, but were still so young and ignorant as to be altogether at the mercy of those whom they looked upon as their masters, had been sent back to Brazil, and there treated as slaves.

I understand that the children in question were not furnished with "cartas d'alforia," or any other documents, to show in Brazil that they were free. However, had they had such certificates, they would probably have been unable to use, or even keep them. They were, of course, helpless.

The "Nova Subtil," in which it is said the boy Julio is to embark, is likely to sail for Rio de Janeiro a few days hence.

Inclosure 2 in No. 381.

Consul Johnston to the Civil Governor of Oporto.

(Extract.)

Oporto, October 3, 1856.

IT has been stated to me that several negro children who have been brought from Brazil to Portugal have, at different times, been sent back to that country, and that, means not having been taken, at the time of the granting of passports for them here, to make known to the proper authorities in Brazil that those children were free, they have been liable, upon being landed, to be reduced to slavery, and, in some instances at least, have actually been sold as slaves.

I have also heard that a boy named Julio, or Julius, who is to be embarked in the "Nova Subtil" on the 5th instant, is likely to be exposed to the risk above mentioned.

These statements I deem it my duty to lay before your Excellency, being confident that, upon the matter coming under your Excellency's notice, whatever it may be proper for your Department to do will be done, in order that such children, incapable as they must be of asserting their rights, or defending themselves against fraud or violence, may not be robbed of their liberty.

Sir,

Lisbon, October 7, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to inclose to your Excellency the copy of a despatch of the 3rd instant addressed to his Excellency the Governor of Oporto by Mr. Johnston, Her Majesty's Consul in that city, stating that it has come to his knowledge that several negro children who have been brought from Brazil to Portugal have at different times been sent back to that country, and that means not having been taken, at the time of the granting of passports for them at Oporto, to make known to the proper authorities in Brazil that those children were free, they have been liable, upon being landed, to be reduced to slavery, and, in some cases at least, have been actually sold as slaves.

Mr. Johnston further states in this despatch that he has heard that a boy named Julio, or Julius, who was to be embarked in a few days in the vessel called "Nova Subtil" for Rio de Janeiro, as he informs me, is likely to be exposed to the above mentioned risk.

In calling your Excellency's attention to these facts, I beg to submit the expediency of your Excellency directing, without loss of time, the Governor of Oporto to take such measures as may serve, not only to guarantee the boy Julio, but likewise all other negro children in similar circumstances, against the risk of being considered as slaves on their return to Brazil, and of instructing the Portuguese Consuls in the Brazilian ports of arrival to claim the protection of the Brazilian authorities for such children.

Your Excellency will, no doubt, likewise see the propriety of causing strict vigilance to be exercised in respect to the vessels conveying such children, and may further, perhaps, deem it advisable to come to an understanding with the Brazilian Government, in order to prevent the evasion which, supposing Mr. Johnston's information to be correct, appears to be thus practised of the Portuguese law, providing for the liberty of slaves arriving in this country, and to put an end to this new and refined form of Slave Trade.

I avail, &c.

Palace, October 11, 1856.

I HAD the honour to receive the note which you were pleased to address to me on the 7th instant, bringing to my knowledge a communication from the British Consul at the city of Oporto, relating to the re-shipment of some negro boys for ports in the Brazils.

In view of what you state upon this subject, I have the honour to acquaint you that, as soon as I received your above-mentioned note, a telegraphic notice was sent to that city instructing the Civil Governor not to fail to mention, in the passport of the negro named Julio, to whom you refer, that he is free; and that, by the transatlantic steamer that will shortly leave this port for Rio de Janeiro, I will write officially to the Portuguese Consul-General at that city, recommending him to use the utmost vigilance in order to prevent a repetition of the abuses which you point out with reference to negroes who are taken back to the Brazilian Empire.

Having thus complied with the wishes expressed by you, I avail, &c.

Sir,

Oporto, October 6, 1856.

WITH reference to my despatch of the 3rd instant, concerning some negro children who had been sent, and a boy named Julio, who was about to go, from Oporto to Brazil, I beg leave to acquaint you that the Civil Governor of Oporto has informed me that there is no reason to apprehend that that boy will return to a state of slavery, both the Brazilian and Portuguese authorities, who have granted him passports, having recognised him as a free person.

Sir,

Lisbon, October 14, 1856.

IN acknowledging the receipt of your Excellency's note of the 11th instant, in reply to mine of the 7th, on the subject of the re-shipment of negro children from Oporto to the Brazils, I have the honour of offering my best thanks for the ready manner in which your Excellency has been so good as to comply with my wishes for the adoption of certain measures with a view to securing the freedom of those negroes on their return to Brazil.

I beg to add that, subsequently to the date of my note of the 7th instant, I received a despatch from Mr. Johnston, Her Majesty's Consul at Oporto, stating that his Excellency the Civil Governor of that district had informed him that there was no reason to apprehend that the boy Julio, referred to in that note, would return to a state of slavery, both the Portuguese and Brazilian authorities having given him passports as a free man.

ALTHOUGH various circumstances do not permit the immediate cessation of the condition of slavery in every part of the Portuguese Monarchy, His Majesty the King is desirous that such condition should be gradually abolished, and at the earliest possible period, without prejudice to the legally vested rights of slave owners, according to the provisions of the Law of the 5th of July last, published in the official "Gazette" of the 15th of the same month, regarding the district of Ambriz; and His Majesty, considering the small number of slaves now held in some islands of the archipelago of Cape Verd, as well as the little importance which slavery appears to have in those islands, directs, through the Secretary of State's Office for the affairs of Marine and Colonies, the Governor-General of the Province of Cape Verd to report whether it may be possible, either now, or at some later period, to proclaim the entire cessation of slavery in one or more of those islands, while allowing, with this object, sufficient time for the slave-holders in the islands in which slavery is to be abolished, to dispose of their slaves in the other islands in a similar manner to that provided in the said Law for Ambriz.

WITH reference to my despatch of the 14th instant, I have the honour to inform your Lordship that I have received a further note of this day's date from the Marquis de Loulé, acquainting me that according to the communications received by the Minister of Marine from the Governor-General of the Province of Angola, and from the Commander of the naval station on that coast, there appears to be no doubt but that the slaver brigantine captured in the Sea of Congo by the English war steam-vessel "Teazer," is the vessel "Roberto," which sailed clandestinely from San Martinho, in this Province.

In concluding this note, the Marquis de Loulé states that he awaits the information which Her Majesty's Government may be so good as to communicate to him relative to the result of the trial of that vessel by the Prize Court at Sierra Leone.

INCLOSED I have the honour of transmitting to your Lordship a copy of a note which, in compliance with the instructions in your Lordship's despatch of the 3rd instant,‡ I yesterday addressed to the Marquis de Loulé, calling his attention to the subject of the permission which was given by the Portuguese Government, by a Decree published on the 2nd of October of last year, to Manoel José da Costa Pedreira, a resident of the Island of San Thomé, to transport 100 freed negroes to that island from Angola.

Mr. Howard to the Marquis de Loulé.

Sir,

Lisbon, November 14, 1856.

ON the 12th of November of last year, Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires had the honour to address a note to your Excellency's predecessor, respecting a

* No. 388.

‡ No. 389.

Decree, bearing date the 25th August preceding, by which permission was granted to Senhor Manoel José da Costa Pedreira to transport a certain number of freed men from Angola to the Island of San Thomé. In that note Mr. Ward brought to Viscount d'Athoguia's notice, by the instructions of Her Majesty's Government, the objectionable nature of some of the provisions of that Decree, to which the attention of His Most Faithful Majesty's Government had previously been drawn by Sir Richard Pakenham, with reference to a similar permission granted in 1853 to Senhor João Maria da Souza Almeida.

Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs has now instructed me to bring this subject again under the consideration of His Most Faithful Majesty's Government, with reference to another point in which the license granted to Senhor Pedreira differs from that concession to Senhor Almeida, and which appears to Her Majesty's Government to be of no slight importance.

Senhor Almeida was, as it appears, an inhabitant of the Province of Angola, and the concession made to him applied to 100 of those slaves of which he was assumed to be in actual possession in that province; whereas the Decree of the 25th August, 1855, represents Senhor Pedreira to be, as Her Majesty's Government are informed he in fact is, a proprietor and merchant in the Island of San Thomé.

This circumstance would seem to do away even with the slight pretext by which Senhor Almeida sought to free himself from the prohibition contained in Article V of the Treaty of 1842, of which this latter concession seems to be a direct infraction; nor is the fact which is further seen in the preamble, that Senhor Pedreira's petition, though only partially acceded to, extended to a grant of 200, by any means without its significancy, inasmuch as it does away altogether with the idea of domestic or household slaves, and appears to reduce the transaction to a simple case of slave-dealing, which Her Majesty's Government feel persuaded that His Most Faithful Majesty's Government will not permit.

My Lord,

Lisbon, November 27, 1856.

IN my despatch of the 3rd of May last, I reported that Senhor Maciel Monteiro, the Brazilian Minister at this Court, had kindly undertaken to write to the Brazilian authorities at Bahia for legalized copies of the two documents which were transmitted to your Lordship, in translation, by Mr. Morgan, Her Majesty's Consul at that port, in his despatch of the 8th March, and which were found in the possession of Vianna, a passenger on board the captured American slaver "Mary E. Smith," viz., a letter addressed by Guilherme da Silva Correa to the same Vianna, and the manifest of the Spanish vessel "Dolores," engaged in the Havana Slave Trade, as well as of any other papers which might compromise persons residing in the Portuguese dominions, with a view to communicating them to the Portuguese Government, and enabling the latter to proceed judicially against the slave-traders.

M. Monteiro having fulfilled his promise, and received in the course of time from Bahia a certified copy of the judicial proceedings taken there against the crew and passengers of the "Mary E. Smith," addressed on the 13th instant, to the Marquis de Loulé, a note inclosing such extracts from these proceedings as had reference to the slave-traders residing in the Portuguese West African possessions, and amongst these papers a copy of the above-mentioned manifest of the barque "Dolores," and urging, in very pressing terms, the prosecution and punishment of the offenders, as well as the exercise of increased vigilance on the part of the Portuguese local authorities on the coast of Africa to prevent the shipment of slaves.

M. Monteiro having been so good as to communicate to me his note to the Marquis de Loulé, with special permission to bring it to your Lordship's knowledge, I have the honour of transmitting herewith a translation of it.

At an interview which I had with the Marquis de Loulé on the 22nd instant, I stated to him that Senhor Monteiro having communicated to me his note, I fully associated myself to the requests contained in it, and I remarked that one of the most effectual means of suppressing the Slave Trade in the African possessions of Portugal would be the punishment of its authors, who had hitherto escaped paying the penalties of their crimes.

Inclosure in No. 398.

Senhor Monteiro to the Marquis de Loulé.

(Translation.)

Sir,

Lisbon, November 13, 1856.

THE Undersigned, &c., has the honour to address himself to the Marquis de Loulé, &c., in order to bring to the knowledge of his Excellency the accompanying documents, being extracts of the proceedings taken in the city of Bahia against the crew and passengers of the American ship "Mary E. Smith," taken in the waters of the Province of Bahia with 384 Africans on board.

By the cargo-book of the barque "Dolores," found among the papers of the ship in question, "Mary E. Smith," the guilty participation of certain subjects of His Most Faithful Majesty residing in his dominions in the crime of slave-trading is demonstrated. And by the correspondence likewise found on board the captured vessel, evidence is given of an attempt to commit the same crime on the part of others, who, with incredible effrontery, are endeavouring to re-establish a trade which, while it transgresses all the rules of Christian morality, at the same time violates the laws as well of the Portuguese Monarchy as of the Empire of Brazil.

The proofs of the crime, from the documents already alluded to, are so conclusive and so legitimate, that the Undersigned has no doubt of the conviction of the accused, once the proper proceedings are regularly instituted in the foreign locality of their domicile, and are prosecuted with zeal and uprightness by the judicial authorities lawfully competent for the cognizance of such transactions, and for the trial of the delinquents.

In this persuasion, the object of the Undersigned in transmitting to the Marquis de Loulé the above-mentioned documents, which have been extracted by this Legation from a certified copy of the proceedings, which, if necessary, will be submitted for the satisfaction of the Portuguese Government, is to claim the punishment of the guilty parties, a punishment which, if properly carried out, as is to be hoped on account of the enormity of the offence laid to their charge, will be for the future an effectual means of securing the prevention of such offences, and of for ever putting an end to such a wicked and odious Traffic.

The Undersigned fully appreciates the laudable desire which inspires His Most Faithful Majesty's Government in their purpose of preventing the departure of Africans from the ports of their several colonies; and, at the same time he equally acknowledges their solicitude in the issue of adequate orders for enforcing respect to the laws of the country with regard to this great question, so interesting to humanity: he cannot, however, with due regard to the orders of his Government, excuse himself from calling the serious attention of the Portuguese Government to this subject, and claiming from them the greatest vigilance and zeal in the matter in question, in order to take precautions against the repetition of new attempts

With this view, the Undersigned considers it his duty to observe to the Marquis de Loulé that, even if the information furnished should not prove, as it seems to be, sufficient to secure the punishment of the accused, the notoriety of the crime at some points of the African coast, and the suspicions attaching to such individuals on account of their characters as acknowledged slave-dealers, might serve as a guide to the police authorities in the discovery of fresh proofs, which might supply what in strictness of law is wanting in the documents now transmitted by the Undersigned to his Excellency.

Anxious as the Imperial Government is to employ every means within the limits of their powers for the prohibition of so inhuman a Traffic, by strictly forbidding the importation of Africans into their territory, they are convinced nevertheless that, in order that their persevering efforts may produce the complete results which they have in view, it is absolutely necessary that the Portuguese Government should, on their part, exercise the most active vigilance in the matter in question; since, as the crime takes its origin in Portuguese territory, it is especially incumbent on that Government to check it in its original combinations, and to control its consequent effects by means of the active interference of the local authorities, whose zeal and diligence it is important to stir up carefully and frequently for the interests of public morality, of the laws of the country, and of the dignity of the Government.

Having a profound reliance on the wisdom of His Most Faithful Majesty's Government, and in their good wishes for effectual co-operation with that of His Majesty the Emperor, in carrying out so beneficial a design, the Undersigned rests satisfied with the flattering hope that, in the matter which forms the subject of his note, peremptory orders will be given for the trial and conviction of the persons accused of the offence of slave-dealing, according to their designations in the accompanying documents.

IN my despatch of the 8th of May last, I had the honour of forwarding to your Lordship the copy of a note which I addressed on the 5th of that month to Viscount d'Athoguia, in execution of your Lordship's instructions, inclosing the extract of a Memorandum drawn up by Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Rio de Janeiro, relative to the Slave Trade proceedings of Arsenio Pompilio Pompeio del Carpe and Guilherme da Silva Correa, as well as translated copies of two documents found in the possession of Vianna, a passenger on board the captured American slaver "*Mary E. I have now the honour of transmitting a translation of a note of the 25th instant, and of its inclosure, which I have this day received from the Marquis de Loulé, containing the information furnished to the Minister of Marine by the Governor-General of the Province of Angola, relative to the subjects treated of in my above-mentioned note.

From that despatch your Lordship will perceive that Senhor Amaral acknowledges the truth of the facts adduced, and confirms that of many of the names of shippers found in the manifest of the "Dolores" being those of notorious slave-traders; the most active and shameless of all he considers to be Silva Correa, who was undoubtedly the author of the Slave Trade adventure of the "*Mary E. Senhor Amaral likewise gives an account of the measures taken by him to prevent the employment in the Slave Trade of the two palhabotes referred to in Mr. Jerningham's above-mentioned Memorandum.

The Governor-General of the Province of Angola to the Minister of Marine and the Colonies.

Loanda, August 13, 1856.

FOR the subject on which they speak, and notwithstanding the shortness of the time, I here acknowledge the receipt of the confidential Portarias 3,565, 3,580, 3,588, and 3,589. A communication to the same effect as that contained in the last of these, had already been made to me by the British Commissioner, Sir George Jackson. The facts reported are true. Many of the names of shippers found in the manifest of the barque "Dolores" are those of notorious slave-dealers. The most active and shameless among them all is Guilherme José da Silva Correa, settled on the Zaire. No doubt can be entertained that the slaving adventure of the American ship "Mary E. Smith," which was captured on the coast of Brazil, ought to be laid to his charge.

Of the palhabotes to which the Portaria 3,588 refers, one was already completed and came to this city, where she received papers for regular navigation, after taking the usual securities; the other is still in construction in the Zaire.

At Ambriz there is no apprehension to be entertained of slaving adventures, as I have already assured your Excellency. In the Zaire it is different. The schooner "Conde do Tojal" is there. It is due, beyond a doubt, to the obstacles placed by her commander, by my orders, in the way of the sailing of the two palhabotes in question without the express permission of this Government, that the former has not been already employed in some illegal adventure, and that the other shall not at some future period be engaged in a similar pursuit. I am persuaded that they were designed for a bad purpose. Your Excellency may rely that I will endeavour to thwart all these wicked designs.

My Lord,

Lisbon, December 2, 1856.

WITH reference to my despatch of the 28th ultimo, I have the honour of transmitting herewith a copy of a note which I addressed to the Marquis de Loulé on the 29th of that month, returning my thanks for the information communicated to me by his note of the 25th of the same month, relative to certain Slave Trade proceedings in the Portuguese Possessions on the west coast of Africa.

* Class A, Inclosure in No. 89.

Your Lordship will perceive that I took that opportunity of associating myself to the request conveyed to the Marquis de Loulé by my Brazilian colleague, M. Maciel Monteiro, in his note of the 13th ultimo (translation of which was forwarded in my despatch of the 27th of that month), for the prosecution and punishment of the individuals residing in those Possessions, whose guilt has been shown by the late judicial proceedings at Bahia in the case of the captured American slaver "Mary E. Smith."

Sir,

Lisbon, November 29, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Excellency's note of the 25th instant, and to return my thanks for the obliging communication contained in it of the despatch addressed on the 13th of August last by the Governor-General of Angola, to his Excellency the Minister of Marine, upon the subject of my note of the 5th of May last to your Excellency's predecessor, relative to the Slave Trade proceedings of certain individuals, having their headquarters, or residing, in that Province.

As I perceive that his Excellency the Governor-General is himself convinced of the culpability of those individuals, and as I understand from my Brazilian colleague that he has been enabled to place at your Excellency's disposal a certified copy of the proceedings in the case of the American slaver "Mary E. Smith," captured at St. Matthew's, on the coast of Brazil, some time ago, comprising, amongst others, two of the papers which I had the honour of annexing in translation to my above-mentioned note, I beg to express the hope that His Most Faithful Majesty's Government may be able to find sufficient grounds for prosecuting the guilty parties, and bringing them to condign punishment.

It appears to me that this desirable object could not fail to be attained if the evidence contained in the papers to which I have alluded were diligently followed up, as, from the zeal displayed by his Excellency Senhor Amaral in the suppression of the Slave Trade, it may be expected that it will be. The experience of every day convinces me that until these old, and hitherto incorrigible offenders are punished, no hopes can be entertained of that complete suppression of the Traffic in the African Possessions of Portugal which His Most Faithful Majesty's Government are so desirous of bringing about.

INCLOSED I have the honour of transmitting a copy of the note of this day's date, in which, in execution of the instructions contained in your Lordship's despatch of the 21st ultimo, I brought to the knowledge of the Marquis de Loulé the information on Slave Trade matters contained in Mr. Scarlett's despatch of the 24th of September last, and drew the attention of the Portuguese Government to the Slave Traffic which, according to that information, continues to be carried on in Angola, Benguella, and St. Thomas.

Mr. Howard to the Marquis de Loulé.

Sir,

Lisbon, December 3, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to inform your Excellency that the Earl of Clarendon has received a despatch from Mr. Scarlett, Her Majesty's Minister at Rio de Janeiro, stating that after the arrival in that port of the vessel called "Paquete de Loanda" from Angola, information had reached him that on the 4th of August last, two American vessels, one a palhabote, and the other a schooner, had taken on board from the coast cargoes of slaves, the first 390, the second from 300 to 380, and are supposed to have sailed for Cuba.

These cargoes are reported to be the property of João Pedro da Costa Coimbra, and Francisco Riverosa, slave-traders, who were expelled from Brazil by the Brazilian Government.

According to Mr. Scarlett's information, there have been collected at different depôts at Benguella 2,000 slaves, chiefly female, under the pretext of their being instructed.

Moreover, Guilherme (da Silva Correa), who shipped the Africans on board the captured American slaver "Mary E. Smith," is stated to be building a palhabote at Boma, in the River Congo, where he has 1,500 slaves in the barracoons. Also at a small village near Cabinda, 500 slaves are said to be in course of being taught to row in the boats employed in the Slave Trade. Numerous Slave Trade agents are stated to be at Loango, who trade with the American ships and the Island of St. Thomé, having their slaves in depôts. Among these agents, Mr. Scarlett understands that there are many old Brazilian slave-dealers.

In bringing these particulars to your Excellency's knowledge, I have been directed by the Earl of Clarendon to draw the attention of His Most Faithful Majesty's Government to the Slave Traffic which, according to the information received by Mr. Scarlett, continues to be carried on in Angola, Benguella, and St. Thomas.

WITH reference to my despatch of the 27th ultimo, inclosing a translation of a note addressed, on the 13th of that month, by the Brazilian Minister at this Court, Senhor Maciel Monteiro, to the Marquis de Loulé, inclosing extracts from the judicial proceedings instituted at Bahia against the crew and passengers of the American slaver "*Mary E. In this reply the Marquis de Loulé states that he has communicated Senhor Monteiro's note and its annexes to the Minister of Marine, and has called his special attention to the facts mentioned in it, in order that the most peremptory orders may be dispatched to the competent authorities for the necessary objects.

His Excellency adds, that he has seen with the greatest satisfaction that Senhor Monteiro appreciates the desire which animates His Most Faithful Majesty's Government, to prevent, by all the means in their power, the repetition of such highly criminal attempts, and assures him that this favourable opinion will be corroborated by the efficiency of their proceedings.

Illustrious and Excellent Sir,

Palace, November 22, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of the note which your Excellency was pleased to address to me under date of the 13th instant, together with the documents to which it refers, and extracted from the criminal action instituted at Bahia against the crew and passengers of the American vessel "Mary E. Smith," which was captured in those waters with 384 Africans on board.

This day I purpose to bring the said note and documents to the knowledge of the Minister of Marine, calling his Excellency's particular attention to the facts contained therein, to the end that the most peremptory orders may be issued to the proper authorities for the necessary ends.

Perceiving with the greatest satisfaction that your Excellency does not overlook, and appreciates, the desire of His Majesty's Government to forbid and restrain, by every means in their power, the recurrence of attempts so highly criminal, I assure you that such favourable opinion shall be confirmed by the efficient proceedings of the said Government, who take much interest in causing the law, public morality, and their own dignity, to be duly respected.

Moreover, the conduct of the Board of Protection in refusing to receive from the slave Fabião, as the price of his manumission, the sum at which he had been originally valued, and their subsequent proceedings with regard to this man, appear to be in direct opposition to the letter and spirit of the Decree of the 14th December, 1854, which secured to the whole slave population the privilege of purchasing their own freedom at a valuation to be conducted upon fair and liberal principles; and I have to instruct you to bring these matters under the consideration of the Portuguese Government, who will doubtless take measures to prevent a recurrence of similar proceedings on the part of the Board.

THE Viscount de Sá da Bandeira, in his capacity as Colonial Minister, has recently provided for the better dispatch and centralization of all the business connected with the Slave Trade, and with the Boards for the protection of slaves and freed men, created by the Law of the 14th December, 1854, as well as with everything bearing upon the condition and education of such free men, by creating a separate department for this purpose in connection with the Marine and Colonial Office.

The gentleman placed at the head of this Department is Senhor Guilherme Cypriano Demony, late member of the Mixed British and Portuguese Commission at Loanda.

It will be his business to prepare all the subjects to be submitted for discussion to the Colonial Council Board, as well as those which, having been already discussed, are now waiting for the final decision of that Board.

My Lord,

Lisbon, December 19, 1856.

I HAVE the honour of transmitting, herewith, a translation of a Royal Decree of the 3rd ultimo, published in the "Diario do Governo" of the 9th instant, abolishing in all the territories of the Province of Angola the forced labour called "serviço de carregadores" (porter's service), and other forced labour hitherto exacted from the free negroes.

Viscount Sá da Bandeira, the Minister of Marine and Colonies, on whose proposal the Decree is issued, tells me that he had been endeavouring, for a long series of years, to effect the object which it has in view; that he attempted to do so when Minister at a former period, by the Portaria of January 31, 1839, referred to in the Decree; but that his successor in office having given up the Portaria after it had only been twelve months in operation, he had now had recourse to the form of a Royal Decree, in order to carry out his views.

A second Decree, bearing the same date, enacts an increase in the tribute called "dizimo," paid by the free negroes in such of the districts of the Province of Angola as furnished "carregadores." The preamble of this Decree states, that in consequence of the great benefits conferred upon these negroes by the abolition of the system of forced labour hitherto exacted from them, and by the improvement in the means of internal communication between different parts of the province, as contained in the provisions of the first-mentioned Decree, they will be enabled to pay with ease a higher rate of contribution than that to which they are at present subjected. This contribution, it is stated, can, without pressing heavily, be progressively raised to the maximum annual sum of 1,400 reis provincial currency (about 3s. 11d.) for each hearth, exclusive of the sum of 200 reis at present paid for each hearth, under the same denomination; this increase being at the rate of 600 reis (about 1s. 8d.) for the first year, and to reach the specified maximum in three years, the total sum being still inferior to that exacted from free negroes residing in other parts of Africa subject to the dominion of foreign Powers, and whose social condition does not differ from that of the negroes of Angola. In the body of the Decree it is stipulated that this tribute ("tributo de dizimo") may be paid either in money or in the produce of the Province of Angola, such as coffee, cotton, iron, cattle, but never in goods produced or manufactured out of the province; the inhabitants of the chief towns must, however, pay the tribute in money. The Governor-General in Council is empowered to extend the provisions of the Decree to the other Districts and Presidencies of the Province, according as their respective circumstances may admit of it.

Decree abolishing Compulsory Labour of Free Negroes in Angola.

(Translation.)

IT being strictly in accordance with justice to abolish, as soon as possible, the abusive practice which has existed from remote times in a portion of the territories of the Province of Angola, consisting in obliging free negroes, Portuguese subjects, to perform the laborious work entitled there "porter's service" ("serviço de carregadores"); considering that the right which, according to the Constitutional Charter of the Monarchy, belongs to all Portuguese subjects, without distinction of race, colour, or religious creed, of disposing of their own labour and industry as it best suits them, ought to be secured to the said free negroes; considering that, far from the enforcing of this compulsory labour being sanctioned by law, a Royal Order, dated 1796, expressly forbids the exaction of any forced labour from the negroes of Benguella; and that previous Royal enactments provided that in Angola no person might engage the services of free people without paying them; and that a Portaria, dated January 31, 1839, also strictly prohibits the forced labour of "carregadores" in the whole extent of the said province; and inasmuch as this abuse, being promoted and kept up by avarice, and exercised in opposition to these Royal provisions, has annulled the right of the above-mentioned negroes to dispose freely of their own labour; considering that the argument put forward for preventing the abolition of this vexatious practice, viz., that if the negroes were not forced to perform the said service ("de carregadores"), all trade with the interior of the province would cease, as well as that with the independent tribes in the interior, is a pretext, to be classed with those made use of by the advocates of slavery, against the adversaries of such iniquity; inasmuch as in all the Portuguese territories of Angola where the said forced labour is not exacted, free negroes are to be found who voluntarily hire themselves for the purpose of conveying the merchant's goods, and during the period that the said Portaria of January 31, 1839, was in execution in that province, free negroes came to offer their services for conveying cargoes, in the same manner as the free negroes of Bihé, Songo, and various other places, do now, in the same province, as well as in all the Portuguese territories in Guinea and in Eastern Africa. Finally, considering that such violence ought no longer to be tolerated, it having for more than a century been stigmatized by various zealous and intelligent authorities of that province, who considered it as the cause of serious impediment to the advancement of the province, and conforming with the reports of the Colonial Board, dated respectively December 10, 1851, and September 12, 1854, I think it right to decree the following:

Article 1. The forced labour called "serviço de carregadores" is hereby abolished and prohibited in all the territories of the Province of Angola, without any exception.

Art. 2. All other forced labour, of whatsoever denomination, is also abolished.

Single §. The following are not included in the above provision:

1st. Military service, and the services to which the inhabitants of the continental portion of the kingdom and adjacent islands are bound according to law.

2nd. The service set forth in Article 3 of this Decree.

3rd. The service of the sluices or dykes, for preventing the ravages of inundations, and which is called there "serviço de bongues."

Art. 3. The inhabitants of the Districts and Presidencies of the province are also obliged to contribute towards the service of the construction and repairs of the roads in their respective districts, in the proportion not to exceed twelve days' labour, either consecutive or otherwise, to be furnished in person or by a substitute, in each year.

Single §. The Governor-General in Council shall, as soon as possible, propose the roads to be opened first, and all else relating to the internal intercourse of the Province of Angola, and transmit a detailed report thereof, together with estimates of the outlay.

Art. 4. This Decree shall be published in the "Boletim Official" of the Governorship of Angola, as soon as received at Loanda, and without delay published in all the Districts and Presidencies, by proclamation, in the usual manner, in order that it may be carried out fully throughout the province, at the expiration of ninety days from its publication in the above-mentioned "Boletim."

Art. 5. Any of the authorities who may, subsequently to the publication of the present Decree, be convicted of having obliged, directly or indirectly, or consented, that any of the free inhabitants of the Province of Angola should be forced to perform the compulsory labours abolished by the present Decree, shall be dismissed from his post, and shall make compensation to the individuals thus injured, such compensation to be adjudged in accordance with the Penal Code. The Viscount Sá da Bandeira, Peer of the Realm, Minister and Secretary of State for Marine and Colonial Affairs, shall thus understand and cause it to be carried out.

Decree securing the Enfranchisement of Liberated Negroes.

(Translation.)

HIS Majesty the King, desiring that no delay or obstacle may be placed to the legal enjoyment of liberty by individuals who, in virtue of legislative enactments, belong to the class of liberated negroes, when once they may have complied with the requirements of the law, and conforming to the representation of the Colonial Board, has thought proper to determine the following:—

1. That if there should be found, in any of the transmarine provinces, liberated negroes to whom, from any motive whatsoever, letters of enfranchisement may not have been given in due time by the proper authority, the Governor-General of the province shall immediately furnish them with the same.

2. That as soon as the said liberated negroes may have completed the term of service to which they were bound by law, the Governor-General of the province shall cause them to be declared sui juris, provided they be of age, and if not yet of age he shall cause them to be declared free, subject however to the guardianship of the Board appointed by Article X of the Decree of 14th September, 1854, till such time as they become of age. His Majesty commands that the execution of the provisions of this Portaria be strongly urged upon the Governors-General of the transmarine provinces, in order that no delay may ever occur in declaring the full enjoyment of liberty to such liberated negroes as have actually, or may in future have, completed the term of service to which they were bound by law : all of which is made known through the Marine and Colonial Department, to the Governor-General of the Province of Cape Verd, for his information and due performance.

INCLOSED I have the honour of transmitting a copy of the note which I addressed to the Marquis de Loulé on the 3rd instant, bringing under his consideration, in compliance with the instructions contained in your Lordship's despatch of the 26th ultimo, the proceedings, as reported in the despatch of Her Majesty's Commissioners at Loanda to your Lordship, dated the 30th September last, of the Board of Protection established in the Colony of Angola under the provisions of the Portuguese Decree of the 14th December, 1854, for the registration and partial emancipation of slaves in the Portuguese Colonial Possessions, in respect of the loan made by them to the Colonial Government for the purpose of carrying out the expedition to the mines of Encoge, and to the case of the slave Fabião, whom they refused to manumit on the payment by him of the sum at which he had been originally valued.

I have, &c.

Inclosure in No. 417.

Mr. Howard to the Marquis de Loule.

Sir,

Lisbon, January 3, 1857.

HER Britannic Majesty's Commissioners at Loanda have reported to Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, two circumstances respecting the proceedings of the Board of Protection, appointed according to the provisions of the Decree of the 14th December, 1854, in the Province of Angola, to which it now becomes my duty, by the instructions of the Earl of Clarendon, to call the attention of His Most Faithful Majesty's Government.

The first of these circumstances is the alleged misappropriation of a portion of the funds of the Board of Protection, which has, upon the application of the Treasury Board, been advanced by way of loan to the Colonial Government for the purpose of carrying out the projected expedition to the mines of Encoge.

Although the Decree of the 14th December, 1854, is silent as to the purposes to which such funds should be applied, yet its spirit seems to point out that the sole object in view must be the improvement, by education and every other possible means, of the slave or liberto, under whichever denomination or class he may be specified, and that to promote this object they should be religiously reserved, from whatever source they proceed.

One of the members of the Board in question, as Her Majesty's Government have been informed, when the proposition for a loan was under discussion, not only pointed out to his colleagues what he apprehended to be their obligations, according to the spirit of the Decree, but also suggested a specific application of their funds with a view to the improvement of the condition of their charge, both socially and morally. His proposal, however, did not meet with that support which it merited, and the casting vote of the President of the Board is stated to have determined the grant of the loan.

The other circumstance which I have been directed to represent to your Excellency, is, according to the Report of Her Majesty's Commissioners, an act of misconduct, for which the parties concerned are amenable to the law, supposing it to have been actually transgressed, or to the censure of the Home Government for their remissness.

The particulars of this case are as follows :—A slave of the name of Fabião, who was valued on the death of his master, Silva, under the authority of the Juiz de Direito, as part of the inheritance of the widow, at 50 milreis, claimed his liberty on the 12th of July last, in virtue of the 27th Article of the Decree of the 14th December, 1854, depositing the amount for which he had been so valued with the Board of Protection, who instructed the Curator to proceed according to law, causing the slave to be placed in deposit in the meantime, agreeably to the 21st Article, and to the 2nd section of the 28th Article. The Curator allowed a lapse of three days to occur without making any report, and then gave it as his opinion that the slave was not entitled to redeem his liberty at the original valuation, the proceeds of the estate of the deceased master of the slave having been divided at the time between the heirs thereof. The Board upon this directed the Curator to proceed in the manner prescribed by the Decree; on which he summoned the widow before the Court of Conciliation. On various excuses, however, acquiesced in by the Curator himself, without any attempt to enforce the summons, she did not obey the mandate, until, on the 28th of July, a certain Senhor José de Senza de Cruz presented a bill of sale of the said slave, purporting to have been that made to him by the widow, for the sum of 300 milreis, dated the 1st of July, tendering payment at the same time of the 5 per cent. ordered by the 3rd section of the 36th Article.

The Treasurer refused to receive this "siza," upon the assurance of Fabião that he had no knowledge of his having been sold to Senhor Cruz or any other person; that up to the day of claiming his liberty he had lived as usual, in the house of the widow, and had been in the habit of delivering his daily earnings to her, and receiving orders from her as her slave. In the propriety of this refusal the Treasurer was soon confirmed by the appearance of a public document, in which the widow requires the Chief of the Police on the 25th of July to cause her slave Fabião to be taken out of the custody of the person with whom he had been placed in deposit.

This petition was negatived, and three days afterwards, namely, the 28th of July, Senhor Cruz presented this fictitious bill of sale, ante-dated the 1st of the same month; and at the same time deposited, under judicial authority, the amount of the "siza" on the sum alleged to have been paid by him for the slave.

The Court then recognized Senhor Cruz as the owner of Fabião, and ordered him to be cited before the Court of Conciliation; but no agreement being come to there, the course prescribed by the 23rd Article was pursued, and a final award of 300 milreis was made by the Arbitrators as a proper compensation to Senhor Cruz for a property which he had thus surreptitiously acquired, but to which he had no just or rightful claim. To enable him to defray this, Fabião petitioned the Board for a loan of 250 milreis, engaging at the same time to repay that sum out of his wages.

The Board replied that the money could not be lent from the funds at their disposal, unless upon interest, and under the further condition that the slave should deposit some article of sufficient value as security for its repayment.

These conditions might have put it out of the power of the slave to obtain his freedom, and been, moreover, the cause of exposing him to much vindictive feeling on the part of his owner, had not the President of the Municipal Chamber, who, as a member of the Board, had voted against the above conditions, offered, on behalf of the slave, to mortgage some article of his own private property for the amount.

This offer was eventually acceded to, and 250 milreis were delivered to Fabião from the funds of the Board, and by him handed over to the Curator.

The conduct of the Curator in this business appears to have been very reprehensible; but one of the most scandalous and crying features in the case is, perhaps, the simulated sale in order to put so much money into the widow's pocket, when she found the slave was about to obtain his freedom, and the countenance and aid which she met with in that endeavour in quarters where she ought least to have found such.

Her Majesty's Commissioners have reported their opinion, that much of the mischief occasioned in this instance would have been prevented if the regulations directed by the 17th Article of the Decree under which the Board of Protection is constituted, had been drawn up and put in force; but up to the date of their Report, no such regulations had been promulgated.

On a review of the circumstances so reported to them, Her Majesty's Government consider the refusal of the Board of Protection to receive from the slave Fabião as the price of his manumission the sum at which he had been originally valued, and their subsequent proceedings with regard to this man, to be in direct opposition to the letter and spirit of the Decree of the 14th of December, 1854, which secured to the whole slave population the privilege of purchasing their own freedom at a valuation to be conducted upon fair and liberal principles.

They have therefore directed me to bring this matter, as well as the conduct of the Board of Protection in granting a loan of their funds to the Colonial Government in prejudice of the objects for which those funds were entrusted to them, under the consideration of His Most Faithful Majesty's Government, in the confident expectation that adequate measures will be taken to prevent a recurrence of similar proceedings.

MY Government having, in a Portaria of the 25th of July of this year, and in consideration of the peculiar circumstances attending the city of Macao instructed the Governor of that city to state whether it were possible to declare, without delay, that the condition of slavery was de jure abolished there; and the said Governor having forwarded, on the 11th of October last, an authentic copy of the deed drawn up in presence of the Judge of that district, in which all the owners of slaves, by an act extremely creditable to them, agreed to consider and to declare all slaves then existing in the city to be free; and considering that the Decree with force of law dated the 10th December, 1836, prohibits the importation of slaves by sea, and that the introduction of this class of individuals by land was prohibited by the Decree with force of law dated the 14th of December, 1854; I have thought proper to declare that slavery is at present and for ever abolished in the city of Macao and its dependencies; and further, I am pleased to declare that the conduct of the said Governor, in causing my Royal intentions to be carried out, has merited my Royal approval; and that the news of the humane and disinterested proceeding of the inhabitants of Macao who were owners of slaves, in giving these their full liberty, is duly appreciated by me.

The Viscount Sá da Bandeira, Peer of the Realm, Minister and Secretary of State for Marine and Colonial Affairs, shall have thus understood, and cause it to be carried out.

Mr. Howard to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received January 14.)

My Lord,

Lisbon, January 7, 1857.

I HAVE the honour of inclosing herewith a translation of a Portaria addressed by the Viscount de Sá da Bandeira, on the 31st ultimo, to the Governors-General of the Provinces of Angola, Cape Verde, and the Mozambique, and to the Governor of the Province of St. Thomas and Prince, and published in the "Diario do Governo" of yesterday, on the subject of the application of the funds administered by the Boards of Protection of Slaves and Liberated Negroes, created by the Decree of the 14th December, 1854.

The object of this Portaria is to resolve the doubts entertained as to the right of applying a portion of the funds assigned to the Boards of Protection to the manumission of children of slaves, according to the provisions of the 31st Article of the Decree in question, and likewise to grants of assistance to such slaves as may have means of their own, but not sufficient for their redemption.

Instructions are now given to the Boards to make an estimate and appropriation of the amount applicable to such purposes at the end of every half-year, after providing for the other charges upon their funds; and they are severally required to apply such amount as shall not exceed the estimated residue, to cases of the nature of those above referred to, making their selection either in the order of the dates of application, or by lot, in the event of the number of applications exceeding the means at their disposal; and they are instructed to state, in their half-yearly reports, the several cases of redemption, with the reasons of their preference of one of these modes of selection over the other.

Your Lordship will perceive that the provisions of this Portaria fully bear out the interpretation placed, by Her Majesty's Commissioners at Loanda (in their despatch of the 30th September last, to your Lordship), upon the clauses of the Decree of the 14th December, 1854, relative to the appropriation by the Boards of Protection of the funds committed to their charge.

HIS Majesty the King having learnt, from despatches received by this department, that some of the Boards of Protection of Slaves and Liberated

Negroes, which were created by the Decree of the 14th December, 1854, have been in doubt as to whether they are permitted to dispose of a portion of the special fund which they administer respectively, to be applied to the manumission of children under 5 years of age, by handing in, at the time of their baptism, 5 milreis, as specified in Article 31 of that Decree; and also to assist such slaves as may possess a sum of money of their own, but not sufficient to effect their redemption; and it being desirable that the above-mentioned Boards should act in uniformity upon this subject, which so nearly affects humanity and the objects of the said Decree of 14th December, 1854, His Majesty has been pleased to cause it to be made known that, in accordance with the provisions of that Decree, the management and administration of the general property of slaves and liberated negroes belongs undoubtedly to the above-mentioned Boards, and that one of the objects of their institution being to promote by every means in their power the liberty of slaves, and one means being certainly to contribute a portion of the said funds for the purpose of obtaining their liberty, it is therefore incumbent upon the said Boards to consider and set apart, at the end of each half-year, the sum which they may be able to appropriate during the ensuing half-year to the above-mentioned purposes, keeping in view the other charges which these funds may have to defray; and that, under this understanding, and within the limits of the several sums thus set apart, the different Boards may respectively apply such sums, either to such cases as may eventually arise, or, if the number of cases be excessive with reference to the disposable amount, by drawing lots; the several Boards, in their half-yearly reports, as required by Article 44 of the said Decree, to give a detailed account of the cases of liberation effected through these means, and to specify the motives for preference of one or the other method, as the case may be.

The Governor-General of the Province of Angola shall communicate the same to the Board of Protection of Slaves and Liberated Negroes for that Province.

Mr. Howard to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received January 14.)

My Lord,

Lisbon, January 6, 1857.

A DESPATCH has been received from the Governor of the Province of San Thomé e Principe, pointing out, in the report of registered slaves transmitted by the same mail, the circumstance that certain Gaboons (inhabitants of the neighbouring coast of the continent of Africa), being under age, were included in the register, because there was a possibility that they might have been legally introduced, and desiring to be furnished with instructions how he should proceed with respect to such Gaboons, if it should be evident that, by reason of their age, they must have been introduced subsequent to the Decree of the 10th December, 1836, which prohibited the introduction of slaves by sea into any of the dominions of the Portuguese Crown.

The Portaria of which I have the honour to inclose a translation, bearing date the 29th of last month, and published in the official journal of the same date, conveys His Most Faithful Majesty's commands that the Minister for the Colonies should acquaint the Governor of San Thomé e Principe that all persons borne on the register, without a certainty of their being slaves, were improperly so entered, for that the presumption was in favour of liberty, and the condition of slavery requires to be established by proof, according to the express provision of the Decree of the 14th December, 1854 (Article 28, § 1); and, consequently, it became the duty of the public authorities to claim the liberty of any persons who might be improperly deprived of it.

HIS Majesty the King was made acquainted with the confidential despatch of the 11th September last, in which the Governor of the Province of San Thomé e Principe, referring to the lists of registered slaves which he transmitted by the same mail, in accordance with Article 3 of the Decree of the 14th December, 1854, says, that on the said lists are entered some Gaboons (inhabitants of the neighbouring coast of the continent of Africa) under age, but which are registered because they might have been introduced in a lawful manner, and requests to know whether he ought to take proceedings in furtherance of the liberation of these minors, should it be ascertained that, from their age, they must have been introduced into the islands subsequent to the Decree of the 10th December, 1836, which prohibited the importation of slaves by sea throughout the Portuguese dominions, with the exception contained in Article 2. And His Majesty commands it to be declared to the said Governor, through the Marine and Colonial Department, that all individuals who were not with certainty known to be slaves, were unduly registered as such, inasmuch as their liberty was to be presumed, and their state of slavery ought to be proved, as required by the Decree of the 14th December, 1854 (Article 28, § 1), and it is therefore the duty of the public authorities to re-establish the liberty of individuals in any way unduly deprived of it. And as, from the list transmitted, in which only the names, sexes, and ages of the registered slaves are stated, nothing is known respecting their place of birth, it will be necessary that the Governor should seek to obtain legal proofs to show the true condition of any individual who may come under consideration.

IN my despatch of the 8th ultimo, I had the honour of reporting to your Lordship the information communicated to me by Viscount de Sá da Bandeira, relative to the recent measures taken by the Judge at Benguella against certain slave-traders, and to the embargo laid by him upon 432 sovereigns landed from the American vessel "Flying Eagle," being the proceeds of the sale of slaves.

I now beg to inclose a copy and a translation of a Portaria issued by his Excellency on the 10th instant, and published in the "Diario do Governo" of the 12th instant, referring to the particulars of those measures, and stating the hope entertained by His Most Faithful Majesty, that the Judge in question, as well as the other authorities of the Province of Angola, will continue with the greatest perseverance and zeal to observe, and cause to be observed, the laws which prohibit the abominable Traffic in Slaves.

Your Lordship will perceive from this Portaria that no less than 41 individuals of different nations have been indicted by the Judge for having been engaged in a shipment of slaves for the Havana, which is now shown to have taken place from the vicinity of Benguella on the 31st of December, 1855.

This appears to be the most serious blow which has ever been struck at the slave-traders by the authorities at Angola. Should it be duly followed up, as Viscount de Sá hopes it will be, it cannot fail to have most important results.

HIS Majesty the King having seen the despatch which the Judge of the district of Benguella, Luiz José Mendes Affonso, addressed, under date of the 12th of September last, to the Marine and Colonial Department, in which he states that the American vessel "Flying Eagle" having arrived at the port of that city in the preceding month of August, having on board a considerable sum of money and other valuables, all of which he, the Judge, knew to be the proceeds of the sale of slaves, he had in the discharge of the duties of his office proceeded to take the legal steps required by the laws which prohibit the exportation of slaves from the ports of the Portuguese Monarchy, and had therefore laid an embargo upon 432 sovereigns, English currency, which were already landed, placing them in legal deposit, having also apprehended in the above city and in Novo Redondo, where he went in person, numerous documents, showing not only, that on the beach of Lucira, situated some leagues to the south of the above city, the crime of embarking 479 slaves on board the ship called the "P. Solé," had been perpetrated on the 31st December, 1855, these slaves being conveyed to the Island of Cuba and there sold; but also the names of the persons who took part in this transaction, and the profit which each had obtained, or was about to obtain, from this outrage; the result being that he had indicted 41 of these individuals, natives of different countries, and residing in different parts of the world, in order that they might be tried by the proper tribunals.

His Majesty commands that, through the Marine and Colonial Department, it may be stated in reply to the said Judge, that although it is a matter of deep regret to His Majesty to know that the exportation of slaves is not yet entirely discontinued in the dominions of the Crown of Portugal, notwithstanding the laws which prohibit it, and the measures adopted by his Government for putting a stop to it; and that some of his subjects, in conjunction with foreigners, are included in the aforesaid indictment; yet he cannot fail to signify to the said Judge his trust, that he, as well as the other authorities of the Province of Angola, will continue with the greatest perseverance and zeal to observe, and cause to be observed, the laws which prohibit the abominable Traffic in Slaves, which has been the scourge and the cause of the ruin of His Majesty's African provinces.

ON receipt of your Lordship's despatch of the 16th instant, which reached me on the 22nd, I addressed to the Marquis de Loulé the note of which I have the honour to transmit a copy, with reference to the observations made by Senhor Luiz José Mendez Affonso, the Portuguese Judge at Benguella, on the expediency of certain alterations in the law affecting the prosecution and trial of offenders engaged in slave-trading transactions.

Your Lordship will perceive that I have recommended to the favourable consideration of the Portuguese Government the adoption of the suggestions of Senhor Affonso, as reported in the despatches of Her Majesty's Commissioners at Loanda of the 16th October and 13th November of last year.

I have, &c.
(Signed) HENRY F. HOWARD.

Inclosure in No. 427.

Mr. Howard to the Marquis de Loulé.

Sir,

Lisbon, January 23, 1857.

HER Britannic Majesty's Commissioners at Loanda have reported to Her Majesty's Government the steps which Senhor Luis José Mendez Affonso, late Juiz de Direito at Benguella, had considered himself justified in taking with respect to the proceedings instituted in the case of the parties implicated in a shipment of slaves effected on the 31st December, 1855, at a place called Lucira, between Benguella and Mossamedes, as well as the observations which that magistratê made as to the expediency of various changes in the law as it now stands, the enforcement of which would, in his opinion, go far to put a stop to the Trade altogether.

I have accordingly been instructed by Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs to draw the attention of His Most Faithful Majesty's Government to the suggestions of Senhor Affonso, which are to the following effect:

In the first place, the permission (all due regard being had to the constitutional guarantee on this head) to open sealed letters seized on board suspected vessels.

A second suggestion is, that the judicial authority be empowered to embargo the goods consigned to the parties "pronunciados," and to proceed against all parties implicated in any Slave Trade transaction, even though absent, in the same way as if they were present, and further that, whenever a shipment of slaves shall be known to have taken place at any particular spot, all persons residing at that immediate locality shall be considered primâ facie as accomplices, unless they give information of such shipment being intended; and, moreover, that whenever any slaves are seized as being destined for embarkation the expense of supporting those slaves, pending the trial, shall fall on their owners, whether they may have been themselves arrested, or shall have absconded.

Another amendment proposed has reference to the penalty annexed to the crime of dealing in slaves. This should be increased to the highest grade of punishment short of capital; while it is yet more desirable that power should be given, such as is conceded in the higher grade of punishment, of arresting persons before the commencement of legal proceedings against them, that is to say, without "culpa formada," where strong and sufficient grounds of suspicion exist, and where there is danger of parties known to be implicated escaping before that necessary preliminary could be effected.

Some of these amendments seem to Her Majesty's Government to be very useful, and well calculated to effect the objects pointed out by Senhor Affonso, and they have accordingly directed me to recommend their adoption to the favourable consideration of the Portuguese Government.

In compliance with these instructions, therefore, I have now the honour to lay them before your Excellency, and I take, &c.

Lisbon, February 2, 1857.

I HAD the satisfaction of communicating to Her Majesty's Government a copy of the Portaria issued from the Marine and Colonial Department, on the 10th of January last, by which his Excellency the Viscount de Sá da Bandeira, referring to recent measures taken by Senhor Luiz José Mendez Affonso, late Judge at Benguella, against certain slave-traders, expressed the hope entertained by His Most Faithful Majesty, that he, as well as the other authorities of the Province of Angola, would continue, with the greatest perseverance and zeal, to observe, and cause to be observed, the laws which prohibit the abominable Traffic in Slaves.

The attention of Her Majesty's Government having been directed to the measures taken by Senhor Affonso, as well as to the notice taken of his conduct by the Government of His Most Faithful Majesty, I have received instructions from the Earl of Clarendon to inform your Excellency, as well as his Excellency the Viscount de Sá da Bandeira, that they have learned with great satisfaction that the zeal and energy shown by Senhor Affonso upon this occasion have been approved of by his Government; and that the authorities of Angola have been expected likewise to persevere in the adoption of effective measures for the complete eradication of the Slave Trade.

By the same despatch conveying these instructions to me, I have also been directed to state, that Her Majesty's Government are desirous of obtaining copies of any of the papers brought to light in this affair, such as certain letters which Her Majesty's Commissioners at Loanda have reported as being among those taken on this occasion from a well-known slave-dealer, of the name of Lucas, which may enable Her Majesty's Government to prove to the Governments of Spain and of the United States, the manner in which the laws of those countries against Slave Trade have been violated by the parties concerned in the shipment of slaves on board the vessel called the "P. Solé," in the month of December 1855.

I have the honour to request your Excellency to communicate to the Viscount de Sá da Bandeira the expression of the sense entertained by Her Majesty's Government of his Excellency's notice of these proceedings, according to the instructions which I have above detailed; and also to request his Excellency to have the goodness to furnish me with copies of the papers to which I have particularly alluded, as well as of such others as may tend to throw light upon the practices of the slave-dealers in this and other similar transactions, in order that they may be communicated to Her Majesty's Government.

I take, &c.

WITH reference to my despatch of the 5th instant, I have the honour of acquainting your Lordship that the Marquis de Loulé informed me yesterday that he had decided upon appointing the Chevalier Duprat to be Commissioner in the British and Portuguese Mixed Commission at the Cape of Good Hope, in the room of Senhor Rebello, deceased, and Senhor Francisco Travassos

Valdez, formerly Arbitrator at Loanda, to the same post at Cape Town, in the place of the Chevalier Duprat; and that the Royal Decrees conferring these appointments upon these two gentlemen would be submitted for the signature of His Most Faithful Majesty this day.

I stated to the Marquis de Soulé that I was persuaded that the appointment of Senhor Valdez would be viewed with satisfaction by Her Majesty's Government, on account of the confidence which his well-known sentiments on the subject of the Slave Trade was calculated to inspire.

My Lord,

Lisbon, February 12, 1857.

I HAVE the honour of inclosing herewith a Portaria, bearing the date of the 10th instant, and published in the "Diario do Governo" of yesterday, addressed by Viscount de Sá da Bandeira to the Governor-General of Mozambique, transmitting, by order of the King, a translation of the resolutions passed at the meeting of the Royal Geographical Society in London, on the 15th of December last, and at a meeting held on the following day at Freemason's Hall, of which the Earl of Shaftesbury was President, gratefully acknowledging the important assistance rendered by the Portuguese authorities in Africa to Dr. Livingston.

This communication is stated to be made not only for the information of the Governor-General, but likewise for that of the Governors of Tete and Quillimane, whom the Governor-General is to thank, in the name of His Majesty, for having so well corresponded to his intentions in the assistance they rendered to Dr. Livingston, adding that His Majesty directs that the Governors and authorities of the Portuguese dominions in Africa should afford similar assistance to other scientific travellers.

An identic Portaria, mutatis mutandis, has been addressed to the Governor General of Angola.

I HAVE the satisfaction of transmitting herewith a translation of a Portaria issued by the Viscount de Sá da Bandeira on the 17th instant, and published in the "Diario do Governo" of the 21st, stating that, it being proper that the transport of slaves from one point in the Province of Angola to another in the same province, should be regulated in conformity with the stipulations of the Treaty of the 3rd of July, 1842, between Great Britain and Portugal, for the suppression of the Slave Trade, His Majesty the King directs that the Governor-General of the Province of Angola shall not give passports to slaves to go by sea from one point of the said province to another point in the same province, except in entire conformity with the letter of Article V of the above-mentioned Treaty, which His Majesty desires should be literally carried into execution in all the transmarine provinces.

Identical instructions have been transmitted to the Governor-General of Mozambique, and to the Governor of the Islands of St. Thomas and Prince.

WHEREAS it is requisite to regulate the conveyance of slaves by sea from one part of the Province of Angola to another part of the same province, in such manner that this conveyance may be effected in conformity with the stipulations of the Treaty of the 3rd of July, 1842, entered into with Great Britain for the suppression of the Traffic in Slaves, which Treaty His Majesty desires shall be carried out to its fullest extent in the Portuguese dominions, a measure which will greatly benefit legal commerce by diminishing the motives for a greater strictness and severity in the exercise of maritime law; His Majesty the King commands that the Governor-General of the Province of Angola shall not furnish slaves with passports for going by sea from one part of the province to another part of the same province, otherwise than in strict conformity with the letter of Article V of the above-mentioned Treaty, which it is His Majesty's will shall be literally carried out in all the transmarine provinces. This is therefore communicated through the Marine and Colonial Department to the said Governor-General of the Province of Angola, in order that he may carry it out, and cause it to be carried out, by his subordinate authorities.

WITH reference to my despatch of the 5th January last, I have the honour of transmitting herewith a translation of a note, and of its inclosure, which I have received from the Marquis de Loulé in answer to that which I addressed to his Excellency on the 3rd of that month, in compliance with the instructions contained in your Lordship's despatch of the 26th December, 1856, on the subject of the loan made by the Board of Guardians of Slaves and Liberated Negroes at Angola to the Colonial Government, in order to carry out the expedition to the mines of Encoge, as well as of the conduct of that Board in the case of the slave Fabião.

In the Viscount de Sá da Bandeira's letter of the 18th ultimo, which forms the inclosure in the Marquis de Loulé's note, his Excellency explains and seeks to justify the loan in question, on the ground that it was to bear interest, and to be refunded in two years, subject to the decision of the Home Government, and states that the case of the slave Fabião had been before the Colonial Board in this capital since the 15th December last for its report, in order to enable His Most Faithful Majesty's Government to take a decision respecting it in accordance with justice.

In the meantime your Lordship will have received, in my despatch of the 7th January, a copy of the Portaria issued on the 31st of the previous month by the Viscount de Sá, relative to the appropriation of the funds administered by the Board of Guardians of Slaves and Liberated Negroes, which I trust will prevent the recurrence of similar cases.

Illustrious and Excellent Sir,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Excellency's despatch dated the 16th January of this year, with which you were pleased to send me the translation of the note addressed to you on the 3rd of that month by Her Britannic Majesty's Minister at this Court, containing, by order of his Government, various observations respecting the conduct of the Board of Guardians of Slaves and Liberated Negroes at Angola, not only with reference to the loan of a portion of its funds to the Government of Angola, but also as to the proceedings of the Board towards a slave of the name of Fabião, who claimed his liberty; and in which your Excellency calls my attention to the subject of the said note, and requests me to enable you to reply to the said Minister upon these points.

Having therefore examined the subject of the said note, I find that the observations laid down by the British Minister are reduced to this: that the funds lent to the Government of the province were by that act diverted from their due application, namely, the improvement of the condition of slaves and liberated negroes; and that the interpretation of the law in the case of the emancipation of the slave Fabião was erroneous, stating the bearings of the case; and concluding by a hope that measures may be adopted for preventing a recurrence of similar proceedings.

Notwithstanding that these questions belong exclusively to the internal administration of the country, and that in consequence I would be entitled to decline to reply to the claim of the British Government upon this subject, yet as it is connected with the object which both Governments take so much to heart, that of doing away with slavery, and besides, desiring that Her Britannic Majesty's Government may see that the Portuguese Government do not neglect to watch over the execution of the law, especially that which relates to these important matters, I have the honour to lay before your Excellency the following statement:—

That it is true that the loan spoken of was made to the Colonial Government of the Province of Angola; that, however, as it was not yet decided by His Most Faithful Majesty's Government whether the fund from which this loan was taken should be considered as capital, the returns of which were to be applied for the benefit of slaves and liberated negroes; the Government considered that the loan in question, as it was effected, far from injuring only improved the said capital, by adding to it the interest due upon it, and that, besides the condition for the payment of the legal rate of interest, there was one for the refunding of the loan within the term of two years, one of which is almost expired, subject, however, to the decision of His Majesty's Government upon the nature of that amount, i.e., whether it is to be considered as capital, the proceeds to be applied in favour of slaves and liberated negroes, or as an item of the receipts to be expended. It is to be remarked that the Board of Guardians still retained a sum sufficient to meet for a long time the calls imposed by the Law of the 14th December, 1854, in favour of slaves and liberated negroes.

Lastly, with regard to the proceedings on the occasion of the emancipation of the slave Fabião, this question so far merited the attention of His Majesty's Government, that since the 15th December, 1856, the case has been before the Colonial Board for its report, in order to enable the Government to take a decision upon it in accordance with justice.

This is what I have the honour to state to you Excellency in reply to your above-mentioned despatch.

God preserve, &c.

My Lord,

Lisbon, March 2, 1857.

INCLOSED I have the honour of transmitting to your Lordship, with reference to my despatch of the 26th January last, a translation of a note of the 25th ultimo, and of its inclosure, which I have received from the Marquis de Loulé in reply to that which I addressed to his Excellency on the 23rd of the former month, in conformity with the instructions contained in your Lordship's despatch dated the 16th of the same month, relative to the conveyance of certain slaves by Count d'Arpoar, a French gentleman, from Loanda to a southern port of Africa on board the Portuguese transport "Esperança."

From Viscount de Sá da Bandeira's letter of the 17th ultimo, inclosed in the Marquis de Loulé's note, your Lordship will perceive that his Excellency states that he is unable to enter fully into this subject, as he has not yet received any communication from the Governor-General of Angola respecting it; but that he explains that Count d'Arpoar, who had left Brazil, where he had an agricultural establishment, being solicitous of settling in the Province of Angola, the Portuguese Government, who had reasons for knowing that he was not an adventurer, had given him a recommendation to the Governor-General of that province in order that every facility might be afforded to him for carrying out his projects. The Viscount then remarks that it was probably not only on account of this recommendation that the Governor-General did not object to Count d'Arpoar taking the slaves in question from the northern to the southern districts of Angola, but because he was convinced that the slaves were not intended for the Slave Trade, and he did not consider that the transfer involved an infraction of the Treaty of 1842 with Great Britain, as it was to take place not to another Portuguese possession, but from one part of the province to another part of the same province.

His Excellency concludes his letter by referring to the instructions issued to the Governor-General fully to carry out the letter of Article V of the above-mentioned Treaty. The instructions thus alluded to are those contained in the Viscount's Portaria of the 17th ultimo, a translation of which I had the honour of forwarding to your Lordship in my despatch of the 23rd of the same month.

HAVING written officially to the Marine Department, as I informed you under date of the 3rd instant, with reference to the conveyance of slaves by the Count d'Arpoar, on board the ship "Esperança," mentioned in your note of the 23rd of January last, I have the honour to transmit, for your information, a copy of the despatch addressed to me by that Department on the 17th of this month.

From the contents of this despatch you will be made acquainted not only with what passed in this city when the Count d'Arpoar proposed removing his agricultural establishment to Angola, not being able to carry it on in Brazil for the reasons pointed out in said despatch, but also with the opinion of His Majesty's Government with regard to that establishment; and, further, that instructions have already been sent to the Governor-General of Angola for the full execution of Article V of the Treaty concluded in 1842 with Great Britain.

*Marine and Colonial Department,
February 17, 1857.*

Illustrious and Excellent Sir,

WITH the despatch which your Excellency was pleased to address to me on the 3rd instant, was transmitted a translation of the note of the 23rd January last, which your Excellency received from Her Britannic Majesty's Minister, in which, by order of his Government, he represents against the fact of the Count d'Arpoar, a French subject, having taken with him from Angola, in the transport "Esperança," to one of the southern ports of Africa, 10 slaves belonging to himself, and 10 other slaves which he said belonged to the workman smith, whom he had engaged to accompany him; Her Britannic Majesty's Government considering this to be an abuse tolerated by the Portuguese authorities of Angola which might lead to the seizure of the "Esperança" had she been met by a British cruiser. Your Excellency's requests me to enable you to reply to the said Minister.

Being unable to comply fully with your Excellency's wishes, inasmuch as I have received no communication upon this subject from the Governor-General of Angola, it will be my duty, however, to inform your Excellency of what took place in this city with reference to the Count d'Arpoar when he purposed going to Angola in order to settle in that province; and what my view of the transaction in question is. This individual having left Brazil, where he had an agricultural establishment, which he was obliged to break up owing to the want of hands, consequent upon the measures now in force in that Empire, which effectually repress the Traffic in Slaves, addressed himself to His Majesty's Government, being solicitous of settling in one of the Portuguese Colonies, with preference in Angola, and requesting that the Government should grant him land for his establishment. The Portuguese Government, being aware that this person was not an adventurer, as they knew that he had in the hands of a commercial firm of Lisbon a sum of nearly fifteen contos of reis destined for the establishment which he proposed setting up, did not hesitate to recommend him to the Governor-General of Angola, in order that he might afford him every facility for carrying out his agricultural projects; and from the latest accounts received at this department it appears that the said Count, after having visited part of the northern districts of Angola, was expected at Huila in Mossamedes: it is, therefore, to be supposed that having found the northern districts to be too unhealthy he had determined upon going to Mossamedes, and as a basis for his establishment in that district had taken with him the said slaves, which the Governor-General had not objected to, not only owing to the recommendation of His Majesty's Government, but also because he felt certain that these slaves were not intended for the Traffic in Slaves, as they were conveyed in a vessel of the State, and besides this, because he most likely considered that it was no infraction of the Treaty with Great Britain, as they were not conveyed to another Portuguese possession, but only from one part of the province to another part of the same province, the bonâ fide character of the removal and destination being guaranteed by their going in a vessel of the State.

The Portuguese Government confiding in the zeal displayed by the Governor-General of Angola in the suppression of the nefarious Traffic in Slaves, entertain no doubt but that these were the reasons which induced the above-mentioned Governor to consent that the Count d'Arpoar should take with him these slaves for the purpose of commencing his establishment.

I must inform your Excellency that in conversation with Her Britannic Majesty's Minister, I stated to him what I have now had the honour of laying before your Excellency in reply to your despatch, and likewise that instructions were furnished to the Governor-General of Angola fully to carry out the letter of Article V of the Treaty with Great Britain, in granting passports for the removal, by sea, of slaves from one part of the province to another part of the same province.

WITH reference to my despatch of the 27th August last, and to my previous correspondence on the subject of the vessel called "Locomotora," which was then in the Douro, and was suspected of being destined for the Slave Trade, I have the honour to state, that information was recently received here that this vessel, which, after having been embargoed for several months at Oporto, had at length received permission to sail, had taken in, outside the bar, a French captain and provisions, with the apparent intention of proceeding to the coast of Africa; that the French captain was subsequently murdered by the Portuguese crew, whom it had likewise been intended to replace by another; and that the vessel had put into Setubal, where the authorities were investigating the case.

Under these circumstances I addressed, on the 28th ultimo, to the Marquis de Loulé, the note of which I have the honour of inclosing a copy, asking for information as to the real state of the matter, inasmuch as the Slave Trade is concerned, in order to my reporting it to your Lordship.

At a meeting which I had yesterday with the Viscount de Sá da Bandeira, I pointed out to him how strongly what had taken place confirmed the suspicions I had formerly communicated to the Portuguese Government respecting the "Locomotora," and I suggested that judicial proceedings should be taken against her consignee, Senhor Bernardo José Machado, at Oporto, who, it appears, is the brother of the Machado in the United States, the owner of the American vessel "Flying Eagle," the arrival of which at Benguella not long ago gave rise to such important Slave Trade discoveries.

Inclosure in No. 442.

Mr. Howard to the Marquis de Loulé.

Sir,

Lisbon, February 21, 1857.

YOUR Excellency was so good as to inform me in the note which you did me the honour to address to me on the 23rd of August last, that new orders had been transmitted by the Minister of Marine to the Intendant of Marine at Oporto, to watch and prevent the sailing of the schooner "Locomotora," which I had denounced to your Excellency as suspected of being destined to be employed in the Slave Trade.

Not long ago I learnt from his Excellency the Viscount de Sá da Bandeira, that His Most Faithful Majesty's Government, not considering themselves authorized to detain the "Locomotora" any longer, had given permission for her sailing.

My attention has now been attracted by an article which appeared yesterday in one of the journals of this capital, and in which it is stated that the "Locomotora" had actually sailed from Oporto; that outside the bar she had taken in further provisions, and the French captain, who it appears had only been temporarily substituted in command of her, in order to divert the suspicions that attached to her in connection with the Slave Trade from the nature of her crew; that this individual had subsequently been murdered at sea; and that the vessel had finally put into Setubal, where the authorities are employed in investigating the case.

It will be in your Excellency's recollection that in the letter addressed on the 20th June last by Mr. Johnston, Her Majesty's Consul, to the Intendant of Marine at Oporto, of which I had the honour of inclosing a copy in my note of the 23rd of that month to your Excellency, he stated as a ground for suspecting the "Locomotora" of being destined for the Slave Trade, that her crew was composed of men of different countries, and that it was with the same crew that she was intended really to be manned when at sea, although means would be used to give her the appearance of sailing in all respects as the laws of Portugal require.

Should, therefore, the statement contained in the newspaper article to which I have referred, that the "Locomotor" had taken on board a foreign captain outside the bar, prove to be correct, this fact would show the accuracy of Mr. Johnston's information, and would confirm the grounds of his suspicions, and I beg to submit that it ought not to escape the attention of His Most Faithful Majesty's authorities in the investigations which they are said to have set on foot, and which I conclude will not be confined to the case of the murder of the foreign captain, but will be extended so as to discover the connection of the vessel with the Slave Trade.

Being anxious to acquaint Her Majesty's Government with the real state of the matter, as far as the Slave Trade is concerned, I should feel much obliged by any information which your Excellency may be able to communicate to me respecting it.

Mr. Howard to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received March 15.)

My Lord,

Lisbon, March 8, 1857,

I HAVE the honour of transmitting herewith a copy of a despatch of the 24th ultimo, which I received this day from Mr. Miller, Her Majesty's Consul at St. Vincent's, together with a translation of the copy inclosed to me by him, of a letter addressed on the same day by the Governor-General of the Cape de Verd Islands to the Minister of Marine and Colonies at Lisbon, stating the circumstances under which he had procured the liberty of the few slaves left by the cholera at St. Vincent's, and pressing a request previously made to that Minister to declare as speedily as possible the abolition of slavery in the said island.

I saw the Viscount de Sá da Bandeira, shortly afterwards, and he informed me that he had already given directions for a Decree to be drawn up, declaring the extinction of slavery at St. Vincent's, approving of the proceedings of the Governor-General, and praising the conduct of the proprietors mentioned by the latter as having liberated their slaves. The Governor-General's second letter had not yet reached his Excellency's hands when I had my interview with him.

The Viscount de Sá is turning in his mind the best means of extinguishing slavery in some of the other Cape de Verd Islands, a question to which, as your Lordship will have perceived from my despatch of the 27th of October last, his attention has some time been directed.

Sir,

St. Vincent, Cape de Verds, February 24, 1857.

I HAVE the honour to transmit herewith a copy of a despatch from his Excellency the Governor-General of these islands to the Ministro de Marinha e Colonias of Portugal.

I feel much pleasure in the act of transmitting this document, and hopefully trust that the good intentions contained in it may be realised.

His Excellency Major Antonio Maria Barreiros Arrobas has taken advantage of a propitious moment to do an act which redounds the greatest credit to him. Upon his arrival here a few days ago he found that of the slaves that originally existed here, the cholera had only left a few, and for these he has obtained their liberty.

The Island of St. Vincent, therefore, at the present moment has not a single slave in it, and his Excellency is desirous that henceforth there shall be none, so that at least one island of the group may be exempt for ever from the curse of slavery.

CLASS B.

I sincerely hope that it may be in your Excellency's power to assist in gaining for this place the honourable distinction which Senhor Arrobas desires to obtain for it.

The Governor-General of the Cape de Verd Islands to the Minister of Marine and the Colonies.

(Translation.)
Illustrious and Excellent Sir,

*Government Office, Island of St. Vincent,
February 24, 1857.*

IN my despatch of the 21st instant, which I had the honour of transmitting to your Excellency by the steam-packet "Teutonia," I informed your Excellency that on arriving at this island my first care was to learn the number of slaves still existing, after the invasion of the cholera; and that having learnt that only five individuals remained in a state of slavery, I had determined to free them at my own expense, and that their masters had refused any remuneration, and had given them their liberty gratuitously: these slave-owners, who are worthy of the highest praise for their creditable act, and as an example for others, are, as I informed your Excellency, the following: Antonio Ignacio Nobre, who freed two slaves; José Gabriel Cordeiro; Antonio Joaquim Martins; and Dona Maria Martins Burnay, all of whom freed their slaves. All the other slaves either died or were freed by their masters during the prevalence of the cholera, by virtue of vows made by the slave-owners in the time of peril; previous to the epidemic there were 34 slaves.

It has just come to my knowledge that there is another individual in the Island of St. Vincent, who, having been the slave of a priest in the Island of St. Antão, was abandoned by his master during the famine, and told by him to consider himself free, and to look out for his own livelihood; this slave engaged himself as a free man, to work at the Island of St. Vincent, and, I am told, has been here for nine months. About a month ago the priest demanded that he should be given up to him again. As I consider the man to be free, by the declaration of his former master, and owing to his having abandoned him, I have caused his letters of manumission to be given to him. If I have done wrong I am willing to compensate his master, should he be able to prove that his slave ran away from him.

In my above-mentioned despatch I requested your Excellency to be pleased to submit to His Majesty the urgency of causing slavery to be declared abolished in this island, thus freeing our laws from a stigma. I will now, in addition to that despatch, offer some considerations to prove that great inconvenience may arise through failing to proclaim, without delay, the abolition of slavery in the Island of St. Vincent. The laws, and the Treaty with England, allow Portuguese settlers changing their residence from the Portuguese State of Guinea to the Island of St. Vincent, to bring 10 slaves each, and, further, that any person may, in going from one island to another, take with them 2 slaves, bond fide household servants, and supposing that ten settlers should remove their place of residence to the Island of St. Vincent, and that twenty inhabitants of the other islands should come to reside temporarily in this island, each bringing with him 2 slaves, bond fide household servants, there may shortly be in the Island of St. Vincent 140 slaves or more, and things would then return to a worse state than before. Now the abolition of slavery can be decreed, without affecting acquired rights in the Island of St. Vincent, inasmuch as at present there are no slaves here; but should this measure be delayed, the result would be a loss to the owners of slaves who may arrive subsequently at this island, or to the Treasury that may have purchased their liberty; and, besides, it would establish a precedent to the prejudice of any measure to be adopted in another island, inasmuch as the owners of slaves in the other islands would have a right to compensation under the same circumstances, and the slaves alone of the Archipelago are worth upwards of 400 contos of reis (88,888*l.*), and the State has not this sum to give to the slave-owners. For this reason, and because it is always urgent to proclaim the emancipation of mankind, I would press upon your Excellency to be pleased to cause, with as little delay as possible, the abolition of slavery to be declared in this island; and also to commend the four slave-owners who have just given their slaves liberty.

God preserve, &c.

Foreign Office, March 16, 1857.

I HAVE received your despatch of the 8th instant, stating that the Governor-General of the Cape Verd Islands having procured the liberation of the few remaining slaves who were in the Island of St. Vincent, and having recommended the Portuguese Government to abolish, as soon as possible, the state of slavery in that island, the Viscount de Sá da Bandeira has caused a Decree to be prepared, declaring the extinction of slavery at St. Vincent's, and approving the proceedings of the Governor-General, as reported in your despatch.

I have to instruct you to inform the Portuguese Minister for Foreign Affairs that Her Majesty's Government have learnt with much satisfaction that the Portuguese Government are determined to take measures for the abolition of slavery in the Cape Verd Islands.

I HAVE communicated to the Viscount de Sá da Bandeira your Lordship's despatch of the 4th instant, stating the satisfaction with which Her Majesty's Government had learnt that the authorities in the Portuguese dominions in Africa had been directed to afford to any other scientific travellers in that part of the world assistance similar to that rendered by them to Dr. Livingston.

Mr. Howard to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received March 24.)

My Lord,

Lisbon, March 14, 1857.

INCLOSED I have the honour of transmitting a copy of the note which, in execution of the instructions contained in your Lordship's despatch dated the 6th instant, I addressed on the 13th to the Marquis de Loulé, communicating the papers received by your Lordship from Mr. Bartlett, Acting British Consul at Baltimore, relative to the trial of M. Baptista, the Portuguese Vice-Consul at Baltimore, and of his clerk, Albert C. Stabell, for having fitted out the "C. F. A. Cole" for the Slave Trade, and stating the reasons for which Her Majesty's Government cannot doubt that the Government of His Most Faithful Majesty will mark their sense of M. Baptista's conduct.

As soon as I shall have an opportunity I will not fail to speak to the Marquis de Loulé on the subject. I should mention that subsequently to the receipt of your Lordship's despatch of the 6th January last, transmitting Mr. Bartlett's report of the acquittal of M. Baptista, I have on more occasions than one spoken to the Marquis in the sense of the observations conveyed in your Lordship's above-named despatch of the 6th instant.

I have learnt from M. Maciel Monteiro, the Brazilian Minister here, that M. Baptista was recognised and accosted by the Brazilian Consul at New York, as a certain Florim, a former employé in the Imperial Treasury, who had absconded from Rio de Janeiro with a large sum of money belonging to the State.

Baptista pretended not to be the person for whom the Brazilian Consul had taken him, but the latter was not shaken in his conviction of Baptista's identity with Florim, whom he had known at Rio de Janeiro. M. Monteiro has communicated this circumstance, by orders of his Government, to the Marquis de Loulé with a view to Baptista's dismissal. The Marquis has, on his side, asked for some documentary evidence of the alleged fact, whilst M. Monteiro has stated his opinion that his communication ought to be accepted as sufficient ground for M. Baptista's dismissal.

The Marquis, in conversation with me on this subject not long ago, said that if he had any proof of this statement he would dismiss M. Baptista at once, without awaiting the result of the examination by the Attorney-General of the papers relating to him.

Sir,

Lisbon, March 13, 1857.

WITH reference to my notes of the 24th August and 3rd October last, and to my various conversations with your Excellency respecting the proceedings of M. Baptista, the Portuguese Vice-Consul at Baltimore, in the case of the slave-vessel "C. F. A. Cole," I have the honour, in compliance with the instructions of Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, to communicate herewith to your Excellency the accompanying papers, which the Earl of Clarendon has received from the Acting British Consul at Baltimore, containing a report of the trial of M. Baptista, and of his clerk, Albert C. Stabell, for having fitted out the "C. F. A. Cole" for employment in the Slave Trade.

In making this communication, I am instructed by the Earl of Clarendon to observe to your Excellency, that although, on account of the disagreement of the jury, M. Baptista was not found guilty of the charge in question, yet the evidence of his criminality, and of his connection with slave-trading transactions, is so strong that Her Majesty's Government cannot doubt that the Government of His Most Faithful Majesty will mark their sense of M. Baptista's conduct.

WITH reference to my despatch of the 8th instant, I have the honour to transmit herewith a translation of a Portaria issued on the 10th instant by the Viscount Sá da Bandeira, and published in the "Diario do Governo" of the 11th, prohibiting the delivery of passports for the conveyance of slaves to St. Vincent's from the other islands or from the continent of Guinea, thus abolishing de facto, as it is observed, the condition of slavery in that island, until such time as it shall be abolished de jure by legislative enactment.

The Portaria likewise contains the King's approbation of the conduct of the Governor-General, as well as of the inhabitants of St. Vincent's who had liberated their slaves.

The Viscount de Sá mentioned to me yesterday that he intended presenting a Project of Law to the Cortes, providing for the legal abolition of slavery at St. Vincent's, and in such other of the Cape de Verde Islands as might be in similar circumstances.

WHEREAS a Portaria, under date of the 20th October last, having been issued to the Governor-General of the Cape de Verde Islands, instructing him, with reference to the peculiar circumstances of those islands, to state when it would be possible to proclaim the abolition of slavery in one or more of those islands; and the said Governor-General having, in a despatch dated 21st February last, stated that there were no slaves in the Island of St. Vincent, inasmuch as those who had escaped the cholera had been liberated by their masters, with the exception of 5, who, at the instance of the Governor had been just liberated by their masters; and the said island being thus, de facto, without slaves; His Majesty the King has been pleased to direct that instructions be sent through the Marine and Colonial Department to the above-mentioned Governor-General, to issue the proper orders to the effect that no passports be granted for the conveyance of slaves from the other islands, or from the continent of Guinea, to the Island of St. Vincent, revoking so far the Portaria of the 21st February, 1851, and thus abolishing, de facto, the condition of slavery in that island, until such time as it shall be abolished, de jure, by legislation. His Majesty further commands it to be stated that the conduct of the Governor-General in carrying out the Royal intentions has merited his Royal approbation, as also the humane and disinterested conduct of the inhabitants of the Island of St. Vincent who owned slaves.

WITH reference to my despatch of the 5th of October last, transmitting a copy of a note which I wrote on the 3rd of that month to the Marquis de Loulé, concerning the horrible fate of the liberated negroes who were landed at Whydah, on the coast of Africa, from the Portuguese vessel "General Rego," I have the honour of forwarding herewith a translation of a note of the 14th instant, which I have this day received from his Excellency in reply, and of its inclosure, being a translation of a circular addressed by him on the 13th instant to the Portuguese Consuls in Brazil upon that subject.

In this circular the Marquis de Loulé states that His Majesty the King directs that the Portuguese Consuls, and the Vice-Consuls subordinate to them, should only deliver passports to liberated negroes proceeding in Portuguese vessels to Africa, when ports where there are European authorities are their destination; and should exercise the greatest vigilance in order to prevent the laws for the suppression of the Slave Trade, as concerning the equipment and victualling of vessels, from being evaded.

And whereas some vessels thus engaged had on board an excess of provisions, and equipment of doubtful application, His Majesty further commands that you, and the above-mentioned Vice-Consuls, shall employ the greatest vigilance in order to prevent, under such pretext, any infraction of the laws for repressing the Traffic in Slaves; or that, even when such equipment is made in good faith, these vessels may not be exposed to legal detention owing to the equipment bearing indications of the Slave Trade, as set forth in the Slave Trade Treaty with Great Britain.

Consul Miller to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received August 11.)

(Extract.)

St. Vincent, Cape Verds, July 26, 1856.

I BEG to inclose copy of a correspondence between the Military Commandant of this island and myself, relative to the American brigantine "N. Hand," Stevenson master, and owned by George W. Resevett.

This vessel arrived here on the 11th instant from New York, bringing a quantity of food, sent to be gratuitously distributed to the poor inhabitants of these islands.

At the time of entering this vessel at the Custom-house, it was declared that she would proceed to the neighbouring Island of St. Jago, and from thence to the West Indies.

In consequence of certain expressions used by the master, and which were repeated to me, I considered it my duty to direct the attention of the authorities of this place to the suspicious nature of the circumstances connected with this vessel. The said master of her had openly declared that he had manacles concealed on board; that the declaration concerning the vessel's destination was a false one, as it was not their intention to touch at the Island of St. Jago, or to proceed to the West Indies; that there was all the water on board for the slave voyage.

The result of my communication to the Military Commandant was the official letter, of which I transmit herewith a translation, wherein that authority states, that after searching the vessel the cargo found on board was in conformity with the manifest signed and sealed by the Consul-General of Portugal at New York, and that the crew of the said vessel were all American citizens excepting one.

Notwithstanding, no doubt exists in my mind that this vessel is engaged in a slave-trading voyage. She has fifty-six pipes of water on board. Her crew, with the exception of two persons, do not speak the English language. There is a Portuguese supercargo on board, and the vessel is evidently a very swift sailer; and further, she has a very large quantity of provisions besides those intended for the islands (taking for granted that the assertion of the master, "that she was not going to St. Jago," is true), proper for feeding negroes.

I am informed that another vessel, expected shortly to bring a further quantity of food as a donation for the distressed inhabitants of these islands, is intended for a similar expedition in the Slave Trade.

Unfortunately the circumstances concerning the "N. Hand" only came to my knowledge a few hours after the departure from this port of Her Majesty's ship "Merlin," which vessel sailed from hence on the 18th instant; and therefore that opportunity was lost of sending on the information to Her Majesty's cruizers on the coast of Africa.

Consul Miller to the Military Commandant of St. Vincent.

Sir,

St. Vincent, Cape Verds, July 18, 1856.

I HAVE just received such information relative to the American brigantine "N. Hand," at the present time anchored at this port, as creates a strong suspicion that she is about to proceed from hence on a voyage in the Slave Trade.

It is stated to me that the master of the said brigantine, whilst under the influence of intoxicating liquor, boasted that "he had manacles concealed on board, where he only could find them. That the vessel was not going to the Island of St. Jago to discharge the rest of the cargo, nor afterwards to the West Indies, as had been declared upon entry at the custom-house. That she had all the water necessary for the slave-voyage on board. That the only persons who could speak English on board were himself and steward."

As the vessel actually has on board a much larger quantity of water than her crew could possibly require, and as I am informed that the crew are Spanish, the supercargo is a Portuguese, and the captain the only American on board, these circumstances tend to strengthen the suspicions excited by the expressions of the captain, and I consider it my duty to convey the foregoing information to you, that the necessary measures may be adopted to discover the truth in this case.

Decree.

WHEREAS the Governor-General of the Province of Angola having represented to me the necessity of a legislative measure which, regulating the right of establishing factories on the coast of that province for the use of lawful commerce, would prevent speculations in the Slave Trade, sometimes made by means of said factories, in conformity to the opinion of the Colonial Board ("Conselho Ultramarino") emitted in its report of the 2nd instant; having heard the Ministers in Council, and exercising the power conferred by Article 15 of the Additional Act to the Constitutional Charter of the Monarchy, I am pleased to decree in the following manner the approval of the Governor-General of the Province of Angola's Order ("Portaria") of the 28th of January last, and published in the supplement to No. 539 of the official "Boletim":—

Article 1. From henceforward no one is allowed to establish a factory on any point of the coast of the Province of Angola where no public administrative authority exists, without the previous consent of the Governor-General of the province. The demand for this concession shall be made by means of a petition declaring the purpose the said factory is intended for. The Governor may at pleasure require or not a security for the contraventions against the laws repressive of the Slave Trade which may be committed or abetted by the owners of such factories.

Art. 2. The owners of the factories already existing in said place are obliged, within the term of sixty days from the publication of the present Decree in the official "Boletim" of the province, to petition the Governor-General in order to be authorised to continue them.

Art. 3. In conformity with Articles 1 and 4 of the Decree of the 14th December, 1854, no slaves or liberated slaves can be permitted in said factories without having been registered. The document, to prove the compliance with this legal precept, shall be the certificate of registration. The omission of presenting said document to the authorities who may be charged with superintending the execution of the provisions of the present Decree, shall authorize the apprehension of the slaves, and liberated slaves, who shall all be considered of the latter description, and shall remain at the disposal of the respective Protective Board ("Junta Protectora"), should the owners not prove within sixty days their having registered them previous to the apprehension. The omission of presenting to said authorities the Governor-General's license for establishing the factory, will have the effect of causing said factory to be destroyed.

Art. 4. The ancient prohibition of keeping slaves chained, or in any other manner in irons, manacled, or handcuffed, &c., is hereby renewed.

§ 1. The transgressors of this determination shall incur a fine of 20 milreis, or thirty days' imprisonment, for each slave that may have been kept in irons. Should the slaves found in irons be in a factory on the sea-coast where no public authority exists, they shall, under such circumstance, be considered as destined for exportation; their owners incurring the loss of them besides other legal penalties, in the event that an attempt at exporting said slaves should be proved.

§ 2. Slaves are not comprehended in the provisions of the present Article, who, though not in durance, are nevertheless, by order of their masters suffering punishments permitted by the police regulations.

Art. 5. Any slave who shall give information that others are kept in irons on any part of the coast, shall, on the truth being ascertained, be ransomed at the expense of the State, according to the mode established by the Decree of the 14th of December, 1854. If, however, the slave should belong to the same owner to whom those kept in irons belong, his freedom shall be granted to him without any indemnity being given to the said owner.

Art. 6. All legislation to the contrary is hereby revoked.

The Viscount Sá da Bandeira, Peer of the realm, Minister and Secretary of State for Naval and Colonial Affairs, so to understand it, and have it carried into execution.

Sir,

I TRANSMIT herewith, for your information, a copy of a note from the Marquis d'Azeglio, the Sardinian Minister at this Court, requesting compensation for the owners of the Sardinian barque "Sansone," which was detained, in April 1845, by Her Majesty's sloop "Cygnnet," on a charge of being equipped for the Slave Trade; and I also inclose a copy of the answer which I have returned to the Sardinian Minister's note.

I am, &c.

Inclosure 1 in No. 456.

The Marquis d'Azeglio to the Earl of Clarendon.

M. le Comte,

23, Park Lane, Londres, le 17 Avril, 1856.

EN réponse à une note que j'ai eu l'honneur d'adresser à votre Excellence en date du 14 Février, 1855, relativement au "Sansone," navire Sarde qui avait été capturé par le sloop de guerre Anglais "Cygnnet," elle m'informa que le Représentant de Sa Majesté Britannique à Turin avait été chargé d'adresser un office à ce sujet au Ministre des Affaires Etrangères.

Sir James Hudson demanda à la même époque au Ministère à Turin une copie authentique de toutes les pièces relatives à ce procès. Le silence qui suivit cette démarche fit supposer au Gouvernement du Roi qu'un arrangement avait eu lieu entre les parties.

Mais les intéressées viennent de l'informer que la question en est encore aujourd'hui au point où elle se trouvait alors, et demandent avec instance qu'une nouvelle démarche soit fait auprès du Gouvernement de Sa Majesté Britannique pour amener la solution de cette affaire.

J'ai, par conséquent, l'honneur de prier votre Excellence de vouloir bien transmettre des instructions au Ministre d'Angleterre à Turin pour que cette question soit résolue, et j'espère que cette solution sera conforme au désir des réclamants, fournissant une nouvelle preuve de l'impartialité qui dicte les arrêts de ce pays-ci en protégeant le commerce étranger.

Je ne doute pas que votre Excellence ne veuille donner au Gouvernement du Roi cette nouvelle preuve de ses sentiments de justice et de bienveillance, et je la prie d'agréer, &c.

Inclosure 2 in No. 456.

The Earl of Clarendon to the Marquis d'Azeglio.

Foreign Office, June 21, 1856.

THE Undersigned, &c., has the honour to acquaint the Marquis d'Azeglio, &c., that Her Majesty's Government have carefully considered the application contained in the note which the Marquis d'Azeglio addressed to the Undersigned on the 17th April last, requesting compensation for the owners of the Sardinian barque "Sansone," which was detained in April 1845, by Her Majesty's sloop "Cygnet," on a charge of being equipped for the Slave Trade.

Her Majesty's Government have been surprized to find that the parties interested in this case have again brought forward a claim to compensation, since Her Majesty's Government were of opinion that the Sardinian Government, no less than that of Her Majesty, had come to the conclusion that the case had finally been disposed of by the correspondence which took place in December 1845 between Her Majesty's Minister at Turin and Count Solar de Marguerite, at that time the Sardinian Minister for Foreign Affairs.

For, on reference to the facts of the case, it appears that the Admiralty Court of Genoa declared on the 12th November, 1845, that the master and owner of the "Sansone" had no claim to be indemnified for her capture, inasmuch as she had on board sundry articles of equipment prohibited by Treaty, and such as to establish a prima facie case against her as being designed for the Slave Trade; those articles being seven boilers, extra bulk-heads, a pair of handcuffs, and an iron for branding slaves.

The Court, however, decreed that the vessel should be restored without payment of the costs of the captor, who, although admitted to be justified in seizing the vessel, was not considered entitled to recover his costs from the parties interested in the vessel.

Count Solar de Marguerite on being applied to by the master and owner of the "Sansone," to obtain for them compensation for the capture of their vessel, refused to interfere in their behalf, and acquainted Her Majesty's Minister that he had decided to abstain from giving any official support to the action for damages which the parties wished to bring against the captors; whereupon Her Majesty's Government considered that they had no longer any occasion to resort to further legal measures in behalf of the captors, whose expenses they had defrayed, and dispensed with the further services of their legal adviser at Genoa.

The Undersigned feels convinced that the Sardinian Government of the present day will not desire to depart from the decision on this case, communicated to Her Majesty's Minister on the 6th December, 1845, by the Count Solar de Marguerite.

The terms of Article VII of the Treaty between England and France of the 22nd March, 1833, to which Sardinia became a party by the Treaty with Great Britain of the 8th August, 1834, are explicit, and effectually preclude all claims of compensation for vessels which, although released on trial, should be proved to have rendered themselves justly liable to suspicion by having on board certain prohibited articles; and the Supplementary Decree pronounced by the Admiralty Court of Genoa on the 31st July, 1850, though not communicated to Her Majesty's Government until February 1855, is manifestly at variance with that Article.

Her Majesty's Government, after all that has passed in this matter, cannot admit the claim of the owners of the "Sansone," and in communicating this decision to the Marquis d'Azeglio, the Undersigned, &c.

WITH reference to your Lordship's despatch of the 9th of January,* inclosing a copy of a note from General Zavala, respecting the frauds by which the so-called emancipados in Cuba have been wrongfully deprived of their liberty, I transmit, herewith, a copy of a despatch on that subject from Mr. Crawford, Her Majesty's Consul-General at Havana;† and I have to observe, that Her Majesty's Government agree with Mr. Crawford, in admitting that there may have existed some difficulty in watching over the fate of the emancipados in past years; but in making this admission Her Majesty's Government are entitled to expect that the Spanish authorities in Cuba will take care that the same laxity shall not in future give rise to the recurrence of similar abuses in the treatment of the emancipados.

Sir,

Madrid, March 30, 1856

I HAVE received instructions from the Earl of Clarendon, Her Britannic Majesty's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, to state to your Excellency his deep regret that, whether reports on the subject from the Island of Cuba may or may not have been sent to the metropolis, or have reached your Excellency's hands, the Slave Trade has been carried on lately in the above island, with even more than its customary activity; and I have the honour to transmit herewith to your Excellency a statement of slaves landed and captured during the year 1855, showing the lamentable discrepancy of 4,806 in the first column, and 125 in the second.

General Zavala to Lord Howden.

Most Excellent Sir,

I HAVE received the courteous note of the 30th instant, wherewith your Excellency has transmitted to me a detailed statement of the negroes who, according to the information which has been given to the British Government, were landed, in 1855, at various places in Cuba. In order to ascertain whether this information tallies with that which the authorities of the aforesaid island must possess on the subject, I have transmitted to the Colonial Office a copy of the above-mentioned document. As soon as I am furnished by that office with the necessary data, I will give a definitive reply to your Excellency.

In the meantime, I have to assure your Excellency that the Government of Her Majesty the Queen, my Sovereign, is taking, and will continue to take, every measure conducive to the complete extinction of the Slave Trade. And if this Trade, as your Excellency affirms, is still carried on with even more than its customary activity, let the blame be attributed to the great energy of private interest, which resists and struggles against the united efforts of England and Spain, and which may occasionally baffle the vigilance of the authorities of Cuba, as well as that of the English cruisers. However, the complete extinction of the Slave Trade is not to be despaired of: this object, which the direct means hitherto employed have not been able to accomplish, will perhaps be fully attained if we succeed in transporting to Cuba the free colonists who are necessary for its cultivation.

I REGRET to inform your Lordship that I learn from various most respectable persons, having ample opportunities of knowing what is going on in Cuba, that the Slave Trade is going on at this moment, in the above island, with renewed, and even with unwonted, activity. The Government of Her Catholic Majesty maintains the contrary. In an inclosure which I lately sent to your Lordship, General Zavala says "the trade is extinguished." Whether his Excellency really believes the case to be so or not, it is evident that there is little chance of improvement in the present state of things; but it is my duty to give your Lordship information coming from the best sources.

I HAVE informed the Minister of Commerce and Public Works, who has now under his charge the direction of the Colonial Department, of the contents of your courteous note of the 30th of July last, in which you alluded to the scheme which appears to have been formed in Cuba, by some speculators or landowners, for the purpose of introducing free African labourers into the island. By the answer which I am expecting from the aforesaid Minister, I will be able to judge whether the above-mentioned scheme is really in contemplation; whether the Government has consented to it; and what are the precautions which it intends to adopt in order to prevent that this means of colonisation may be injurious to the island, or converted into a pretext for slave-trading, as you apprehend.

With these data, which I expect to obtain very soon, I will hasten to give a definitive reply to the above-mentioned note. Meanwhile I avail, &c.

Mr. Otway to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received September 11.)

My Lord,

Madrid, August 29, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to your Lordship, in translation, a note which has been addressed to me by Señor Pastor Diaz, as a collective reply to the various complaints made by this Legation to the Spanish Government respecting the importation into Cuba of Bozal negroes.

Your Lordship will perceive that his Excellency's communication is based upon a report sent home by the Captain-General of that island, in which that officer discusses each contemplated or effected disembarkation individually, detailing, in the cases where a landing was attempted, the prudent dispositions by which it was rendered abortive, and stating, with regard to other cases, that every official to whom actual complicity in this illicit Traffic, or a want of zeal in its suppression, could be brought home, had been dismissed from his situation, and ending with a general charge of inaccuracy against Her Majesty's Consul-General in the Island of Cuba, who, in the majority of cases, is represented as announcing and describing purely supposititious disembarkations.

Your Lordship is the best judge how far this accusation against Mr. Crawford, qualified by the apology made for him, that he allows himself to be misled by persons whose connection with the Slave Trade renders it their interest to deceive him, is to be entertained.

The conclusion drawn by Señor Diaz from this communication, is that the statement made to Her Catholic Majesty's Government, in accordance with your Lordship's instructions conveyed to me in your despatch dated the 3rd July, 1855, that the Traffic in Slaves increases in flagrancy, is completely destitute of foundation, and his Excellency strengthens this assertion by comparing two reports addressed to your Lordship by Mr. Crawford and the late Mr. Backhouse, communicated to this Legation respectively in your Lordship's despatches of the 28th February, 1855, and of the 14th March, 1856, stating that in the year 1854 more than 10,000 slaves were imported into Cuba, while in 1855 a notable falling off is observable, the number reported being only 4,806, of which, however, the Government here do not acknowledge more than 2,000.

I forward these assertions to your Lordship without other comment than that which they naturally suggest, viz., that Her Catholic Majesty's Government are not disposed willingly to admit any charge of want of vigilance or activity against the present authority in the Island of Cuba.

I have, &c.

Inclosure in No. 480.

Señor Pastor Diaz to Mr. Otway.

(Translation.)

Sir,

Madrid, August 19, 1856.

IN reply to the notes from the British Legation relative to the disembarkations of Bozal negroes which have taken place in the Island of Cuba during the year 1855, I have the honour to inform you that the Captain-General of the aforesaid island has addressed to this First Secretary of State's Office a detailed report which fully elucidates the facts alluded to by Her Britannic Majesty's Legation.

In the aforesaid report, every one of the processes instituted in consequence of information given to the superior authority in Cuba, relative to disembarkations of Bozal negroes, is carefully examined, and an account is given of the measures adopted by the same authority for the purpose of preventing such disembarkations, and of punishing those Agents of the Government who had not shown sufficient zeal in the repression of this unlawful Traffic.

On the 12th of April, 1855, the Captain-General of Cuba was informed that a disembarkation was expected to take place in the jurisdiction of Bahia Honda, whereupon his Excellency having caused the proper orders to be transmitted by telegraph, and sent off to the suspected place as Extraordinary Commissioner, the Brigadier Chief of the Staff at the Havana, and an Alcalde Mayor of the same city, succeeded in seizing 94 negroes on two different occasions. At the same time great vigilance was also kept over the Bahia de Cabañas, where 94 Bozal negroes were also captured, and all the public functionaries who appeared to have been negligent in the fulfilment of the Captain-General's instructions were dismissed from their posts, and regular judicial proceedings relative to this disembarkation were instituted in the Royal Court of Justice at the Havana. These occurrences gave cause for extraordinary vigilance on the part of the authorities and military detachments charged with the repression of the Traffic in Slaves, owing to which the disembarkation of 430 negroes which had been attempted at the aforesaid bay was prevented; these are the negroes who, in the report sent to the British Government by the English Consul in the Island of Cuba, were supposed to have been detected in December, although landed in May. But subsequently the Lieutenant-Governor of Trinidad reported that, in consequence of intelligence given by the British Consul that a disembarkation of negroes was expected to take place on the coasts of Sancti Spiritus, he took the proper precautions, and the result was that the aforesaid intelligence was not found correct. Another expedition was also denounced to the Governor of Cuba which, in the aforesaid report from the British Consul, is stated to have been landed at the port of San Cayetano, and the result also proved that the denunciation was unfounded, though, perhaps, the fact was, that the cargo in question was not landed, in consequence of the extraordinary activity displayed by the Spanish authorities, and more especially by the Brigadier Chief of the Staff, who, for the aforesaid purpose, made a day's journey of twenty-two leagues, a circumstance which is well known to the English Consul, Mr. Crawford.

In the month of August another expedition was denounced as being expected to take place at Punta de Teja, whereupon the Captain-General instantly sent by telegraph the proper orders to the Lieutenant-Governor of Cardenas and to the aforesaid Chief of the Staff. Ever since the month of March the steamer "Veloz Cayera" had been cruising off that part of the coast, and owing, undoubtedly, to all these measures, the disembarkation did not take place; and although it is true that the landing which had been denounced as expected at Santa Cruz del Sur, was carried into effect, it is not less true that the functionaries who appeared to be implicated in that affair were dismissed from their posts by the zealous Lieutenant-Governor of that district, and that the Captain-General not being quite satisfied with these measures, ordered, himself, the dismissal of the Administrator of Finance, of the Military Commandant of the town, and of several individuals of the Preventive Service: whereby, since, owing to the great distance of the place in question, and the late hour at which the intelligence respecting it was received, the disembarkation could not be prevented, an example was made by punishing the functionaries who appeared to have connived at it. As to the disembarkation which, in the above-mentioned report, is stated to have taken place at Pinar del Rio, it turned out to be incorrect; nor was any result whatever obtained from the denunciations made by Mr. Crawford of other disembarkations at Manzanillo and Dominica. Such was not the case, however, with regard to the landing which had been denounced as having taken place at Granadillo, since the Captain-General being convinced of its correctness, ordered the suspension from his functions of the Alcalde Mayor at Villa Clara, and the dismissal of the Lieutenant-Governor, of the Administrator of the Post-office, and of the Captain and Lieutenant of that district, whilst he recommended the greatest and most incessant vigilance to be kept over those persons who were supposed to be interested in the Slave Trade.

From the above statements, it appears that out of all the slave expeditions which, in the report from the British Consul, Mr. Crawford, are supposed to have taken place, only those at Bahia Honda, Cabañas, Santa Clara, and El Granadillo, were carried into effect, and the total number of Bozal negroes imported by these expeditions was assuredly under 2,000, instead of 4,806, which, in the aforesaid report, are mentioned as having been landed. The English Consul not knowing that the parties interested in the Slave Trade are in the habit of giving to the authorities and to himself false news relative to disembarkations, the better to be able thereby to put both on the false scent, makes official communications about every one of their denunciations; and it is more than probable that if the British Consul were now to report again the disembarkations carried into effect, he would only mention the four above-mentioned ones.

At no time could the Government of Her Britannic Majesty have stated with less reason than at the present moment, that the Slave Trade is carried on with remarkable activity; since last year the British Representative stated, with more or less foundation, in a report similar to the one now in question, that the number of Bozal negroes landed in 1854 amounted to 10,236, and in the report relative to the year 1855, he limits their number to 4,806; and this comparison, even leaving aside the data mentioned in the present note, will serve to prove to you that, so far from the Slave Trade having increased, it has diminished in a considerable manner, a result which is owing to the sincerity with which the Government of Her Catholic Majesty is watching over the observance of Treaties, and to the zeal, activity, and ability of the Captain-General of the Island of Cuba.

My Lord,

Madrid, August 29, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to your Lordship a translation of a note I have received from Señor Pastor Diaz, respecting two disembarkations of slaves reported by Mr. Crawford, Her Majesty's Consul-General at the Havana, and alluded to in the inclosures in my preceding despatch of this date, in which his Excellency affirms that the first, supposed to have taken place at Manzanillo, was never effected, and that the second, at San Juan de los Remedios, is purely imaginary. Your Lordship will perceive that the Lieutenant-Governor of the latter place has expressed an honest indignation at the imputations, offensive to his honour, contained in Mr. Crawford's communications.

Sir,

SUBSEQUENTLY to the transmission of my note of the 19th instant, in which I had the honour to inform you of the contents of a communication from the Captain-General of the Island of Cuba, wherein he refuted the assertions of Mr. Crawford, the British Consul at the Havana, another communication from the aforesaid Captain-General, dated the 12th of June last, has been received at this First Secretary of State's Office, confirming all the statements contained in the preceding one; and, as to the disembarkation which is supposed to have taken place at Manzanillo, his Excellency states that, when the English Consul at that place addressed to the Governor of Cuba in October last, representations which were notoriously devoid of foundation, he did not think proper to give full credence to them.

To the aforesaid communication is annexed a copy of another one addressed by the Superior Government of that Island to the British Consul, proving to him that the disembarkation at San Juan de los Remedios, denounced by him, was a mere supposition, and that the Lieutenant-Governor at that place very justly complained of the words, extremely offensive to his honour, which the aforesaid Consul had made use of in his communications.

This and other cases which occur every day, may serve to prove to the Government of Her Britannic Majesty the zeal and good faith by which the subordinate authorities of the Queen's Government in Cuba are animated, and the activity with which they endeavour to persecute the Slave Trade, without requiring to this effect the repeated and almost always unfounded reclamations of the British Consul at the Havana.

My Lord,

Madrid, August 29, 1856.

IN obedience to the instructions contained in your Lordship's despatch to Lord Howden, dated the 22nd of October last, his Lordship addressed a note to General Zavala informing his Excellency that a disembarkation of 510 Bozal negroes had been reported by Consul-General Crawford as having taken place at San Cayetano, on or about the 5th of August, under circumstances of peculiar flagrancy.

In a note, translation of which was transmitted to your Lordship in Lord Howden's despatch dated November the 17th of last year, General Zavala stated that orders had been sent to the Captain-General of Cuba to furnish the Government of Her Catholic Majesty with a report on the subject.

As a sequel to the above communication, I have now the honour to transmit to your Lordship, in translation, a note I have received from Señor Pastor Diaz, General Zavala's successor as Spanish Minister for Foreign Affairs, in which his Excellency, authorized by a report from Cuba, entirely denies that any such disembarkation ever took place. As this unqualified denial appears strange, in the face of the minute circumstances detailed by Mr. Crawford as attending the landing and subsequent concealment of these negroes, I await with impatience the document confirmatory of his assertion, announced to me by his Excellency, which I shall lose no time in forwarding to your Lordship.

Your Lordship will see that, in the inclosure of my first despatch of this date, Señor Diaz makes a further allusion to this supposed landing; and, assuming that it was contemplated, considers it to have been rendered impossible by the extraordinary activity and vigilance of the Spanish officer to whom the seizure of the cargo was entrusted.

Sir,

Madrid, August 27, 1856.

ON the 2nd and 15th of November last, my predecessor in office, entertaining some doubts as to the truth of the intelligence reported to Her Britannic Majesty's Government respecting a supposed disembarkation of 510 Bozal negroes at San Cayetano's harbour, which was denounced by Lord Howden in his note of the 27th of October last, stated to the British Legation that he had requested the proper information upon the subject from the Colonial Office, and that the latter had done so, in its turn, from the Captain-General of the Island of Cuba, as this apparent negligence was in striking contrast with the great vigilance, and extreme activity and energy, of which the superior authority of the aforesaid Antille was, and is still, affording repeated proofs.

General Zavala's doubts were not unfounded, since it appears, from a communication which I have just received from the Colonial Office, that the disembarkation above alluded to has never taken place, as is irrefutably proved by a detailed extract of the judicial proceedings which were instituted upon the matter, which has been sent by the Captain-General, and which will very soon be transmitted to me by the aforesaid Office.

Being anxious of losing no time in the elucidation of truth, I hasten to communicate to you the above statement, and so soon as I receive the aforesaid extract, I will transmit it to you.

Mr. Otway to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received October 16.)

My Lord,

Madrid, October 10, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to inform your Lordship that the official Gazette of to-day contains a circular to Spanish Consuls, as well as its introductory statement, a long document which is not without its interest, as it involves a slight change in the regulations at present in force to prevent a vessel from engaging in the Slave Trade.

By Article X of the Treaty between Great Britain and Spain for the abolition of the Traffic in Negroes, it is determined that the finding on board a vessel certain utensils, and among them water-casks or empty barrels in great number, shall be considered prima facie evidence that the vessel is engaged in the Slave Trade, unless the captain can show a certificate from the custom-house of the port whence he sailed, by which it appears that the owners have given the proper security that these casks are destined for the transport of the palm-oil which is produced on the African coast, or of other objects of lawful commerce.

These certificates have, up to the present time, been alone obtainable from the Government custom-houses, but it having been proved by a Report made on the subject, that much unnecessary expense and inconvenience is occasioned to the Spanish vessels which, after having loaded these empty casks at a foreign port, have then to proceed to a Spanish one in order to obtain this document, Her Catholic Majesty's Government, desirous of avoiding this delay, have determined that Spanish Consuls in foreign ports shall be authorized to issue to captains of vessels proceeding to the west coast of Africa the above-mentioned certificate, requiring at the same time from them, or from the consignees of the vessel under his command, a legal bond to three times the value of the empty casks there may be on board, which bond will be cancelled on the production by the interested party of a document, signed by the Spanish Consul of the port for which the vessel was destined, certifying that the legal use announced for them by the captain was made of these objects.

I greatly regret that the length of this circular, appearing as it does on the day fixed for a levée, added to the unusually early departure of the French courier, renders it impossible for me to transmit it to your Lordship otherwise than in copy and duplicate.

Extract from the Official Gazette of Madrid of October 10, 1856.

(Translation.)

IN consideration of what has been stated by Don José Vidal y Rivas, merchant of Barcelona, relative to the expediency of authorizing the Consuls of Her Majesty abroad to issue to the captains of Spanish ships bound for the western coast of Africa, the certificate which is required by Article X of the Treaty with England for the suppression of the Slave Trade in case of their having on board empty casks for containing palm oil, which they load on that coast, such having hitherto been issued only by the Custom-house authorities of the kingdom, and considering that, as alleged by the aforesaid, unnecessary delays and expenses are occasioned to such Spanish ships as, after having taken the said empty casks on board in a foreign port, have to go to a Spanish port in order to obtain the above-mentioned document, without which they would be detained as suspected of engaging in the Slave Trade, because that such empty casks are, by the terms of the Treaty, a prima facie indication of their being intended for the said unlawful trade, and being desirous of preventing these losses, as well as the impropriety that vessels engaged in the said trade in palm-oil and other produce of Africa should navigate without the above-mentioned certificate, with the risk occasioned thereby, that they might be detained by any occurrence between the foreign port where they may take in the empty casks, and the Spanish port where they would have to procure it, the Queen (whom God preserve!) has been pleased to direct that Spanish Consuls in foreign ports be authorized to act as above stated, under the conditions pointed out in the Royal Circular Order which has been sent to the aforesaid functionaries, and which is hereinafter published for the information of the trade.

Circular.

It being determined by Article X of the Treaty between Spain and England for the abolition of the Slave Trade, that the finding on board of a ship any of the articles mentioned in the aforesaid Article shall be considered as prima facie evidence that she is intended for the said unlawful commerce, the vessel being, according thereto, subject to the decision of the Mixed Court of Judicature referred to in the Treaty; and barrels of water or other casks to contain liquids, in great number, being reckoned as among such articles, in case the captain does not exhibit to the Commander of the cruiser who detains him a certificate from the custom-house of the place from whence he sailed, showing that the owners have given the due securities that the barrels and casks taken on board are intended to contain palm oil, which is produced on the coast of Africa, or other objects of lawful trade, the Queen (whom God preserve!) has been pleased to direct that, in order to prevent the losses which might be occasioned to honest commerce by the impossibility of furnishing the above-mentioned certificate to the captains of Spanish ships bound to the ports of the said coast of Africa from other foreign ports where they may have taken in the required empty barrels and casks, the Consuls of Her Majesty resident in such foreign ports, or in others near to that from which the ship sails, be authorized to issue the above-mentioned document, requiring of the captains or consignees of the ships under their command, a security in the proper legal form, amounting to three times the value of the empty casks taken on board, which shall become void and be cancelled so soon as the interested party shall present a certificate issued by the Consul of Her Majesty in the port to which the ship is bound, and in his default by the local authority of the same, to the effect that the empty casks have been employed for the lawful purpose to which the captain of the ship had engaged to apply them.

By Royal command I transmit this to you for your information and guidance.

My Lord,

WITH reference to my despatch of the 10th instant, I now have the honour to inclose a translation of a note, dated the 7th instant, just received from Señor Pastor Diaz, requesting that Her Majesty's Government, in consideration of the causes which have moved that of Spain to empower her Consuls to give certificates to the captains of Spanish vessels trading in palm oil on the western coast of Africa, will be pleased to give the necessary orders in consequence to the British Colonial authorities and establishments on the western coast of Africa.

Sir,

Madrid, October 7, 1856.

SEVERAL Spanish commercial firms have recently established mercantile relations with different ports of the western coast of Africa, where their vessels, in exchange for other produce, take cargoes of palm oil, for the conveyance whereof they require to carry on board a certain number of empty casks, which, as you are aware, might be considered as a prima facie suspicion of the vessel which carries them being engaged in the Slave Trade, if the captain does not exhibit the certificate alluded to in Article X of the Treaty of 1835, between Spain and England; and one of the aforesaid commercial firms having represented that in case of the empty casks in question being taken on board at a foreign port, it was necessary that the Spanish Consul at that port should be authorized to issue the above-mentioned certificate, which is an indispensable document to guarantee the transactions of the Spanish vessels engaged in a lawful trade on the western coast of Africa, Her Majesty's Government has thought it could not leave a petition so well-founded and just as the one in question unattended to, considering it to be its duty to afford every proper facility to the development of the trade in question.

Consequently, a circular Royal Order, of which I inclose a copy, has been addressed to Her Catholic Majesty's Consular Agents abroad, whereby they are authorized to issue to the captains of Spanish vessels who may require it, the certificate above referred to, requiring from such captains, or from their consignees, a bail for the amount of three times the value of the empty casks they may take on board, as a security for their being intended for the legitimate use of the conveyance of palm oil, and not for any other prohibited object of those mentioned in the Treaty.

I lose no time in communicating the above to you, expecting that you will have the goodness to make it known to your Government with the least possible delay, in order that the proper instructions may be sent, with reference to the case in question, to the English authorities of the colonies and establishments of Great Britain on the western coast of Africa.

IN doing myself the honour of acknowledging the receipt, last night, of your Excellency's esteemed note, dated the 7th instant, requesting me "as soon as possible" to communicate to Her Britannic Majesty's Government a circular addressed to Her Catholic Majesty's Consuls, authorizing those functionaries to deliver certificates to the captains of Spanish vessels trading on the west coast of Africa, having on board a large number of empty water-casks, intended to be filled with palm oil; I hasten to inform your Excellency that this document having been published in the Madrid "Gazette" of the 10th instant, I, on that day, as was my duty, forwarded it to my Government. I think it right, however, in justice, to myself, to mention to your Excellency that, by some unaccountable oversight, your Excellency's communication has taken the exact time in travelling from your Excellency's Department to this Legation that a letter would, from Paris to Madrid, viz., four days; and that the circular your Excellency alludes to as inclosed in it, has been omitted altogether.

As I am sure that nothing can be further from your Excellency's wishes or intention than that the blame of any apparent irregularity or negligence should be imputed to me in not having at once forwarded to my Government an important communication from your Excellency, I state the facts, by no manner of means in the light of a complaint, but as a justification, and placing on record, as regards my conduct, as showing the real cause of four days having been lost in making known to Her Britannic Majesty's Government the desires of the Government of Her Catholic Majesty with respect to the instructions it so anxiously wishes to be issued to the British Colonial authorities and establishments on the western coast of Africa.

IT being determined by Article X of the Treaty between Spain and England for the abolition of the Slave Trade, that it shall be considered prima facie evidence that a vessel is intended for the said unlawful Traffic if any of the things mentioned in the said Article be found on board, the vessel being thereby subject to the judgment of the Mixed Court of Justice referred to in the Treaty; an extraordinary number of water-casks, or other vessels for holding liquid, being reckoned among the said things, unless the master shall show to the commander of the detaining cruizer a certificate from the custom-house of the place from which he cleared outwards, showing that the owners have given sufficient securities that the casks and vessels conveyed on board are intended to contain palm oil, which is produced on the coast of Africa, or other objects of lawful commerce; the Queen (whom God preserve!) has been pleased to direct, that with a view to obviate the damages which might be caused to bond fide trade by the impossibility of furnishing the requisite certificate to the masters of Spanish vessels departing for the ports of the African coast, from other foreign ports where they take on board the empty casks and vessels alluded to, Her Majesty's Consuls residing at the said foreign ports, or at any other adjoining that of the departure of the vessel, are authorized to issue the said document, requiring of the master, or of the consignees of the vessel under his command, a security in the proper legal form, amounting to three times the value of the empty vessels taken on board, which shall be rescinded and cancelled so soon as the interested party shall produce an attestation given by Her Majesty's Consul in the port to which the vessel was bound, and in his absence by the local authority at the same place, to the effect that the empty vessels have been used for the lawful purpose which the master of the ship had engaged to put them to.

The Earl of Clarendon to Lord Howden.

My Lord,

Foreign Office, November 1, 1856.

I HAVE received from Mr. Otway three despatches dated the 29th of August last, inclosing copies of three notes from Señor Pastor Diaz, referring to the Return of the number of African slaves imported into Cuba during the year 1855, which document accompanied Mr. Crawford's annual report on the Slave Trade for that year dated the 4th of January, 1856.

Señor Diaz states that out of the twelve landings enumerated in that Return only four were really effected, namely, those which took place at Bahia Honda, Cabañas (May 26, 1855), Santa Cruz del Sur, and El Granadillo; and he observes that the whole number of negroes thus imported was under 2,000, instead of being 4,806, according to Mr. Crawford's list.

I have to instruct your Lordship to state to the Spanish Minister for Foreign Affairs that I have carefully examined Mr. Crawford's several despatches in which the circumstances of all the landings in question were reported soon after they came to his knowledge, and that the result of this examination has been that although the information communicated to the Captain-General by Mr. Crawford as to the landings at Sancti Spiritus, Manzanillo, and the Rio Dominica, has not been fully confirmed, yet with regard to the other landings denied by the Spanish Government, it appears that they were confirmed by the testimony of eye-witnesses and by circumstantial evidence which has not been refuted by the Spanish authorities. You will remark at the same time that it cannot be expected in these cases that Mr. Crawford should expose his informants to the private vengeance of the slave-dealers by bringing forward their names upon every occasion.

With regard to the statement of Señor Diaz, that according to the Returns furnished by Her Majesty's Government of the importation of slaves into Cuba in the years 1854 and 1855 respectively, it has been shown that whereas 10,236 Africans were imported in 1854, only 4,806 were imported in 1855; your Lordship will point out to the Spanish Minister for Foreign Affairs that it will be seen on reference to the two Returns in question, that Señor Diaz should have stated the respective numbers either as 10,230 for 1854, and 6,408 for 1855 (which are the total numbers with the addition of one-third for unreported landings), or as 7,673 for 1854, and 4,806 for 1855, which are the numbers of the landings without the additional third. And you will say that it should be borne in mind that the number of Africans reported to have been landed in Cuba in 1854 was unusually large, and exceeded the average of importations during the previous fifteen years by 4,034.

WITH reference to Mr. Otway's despatch of the 23rd of August, inclosing a copy of a letter which he had received from Señor Pastor Diaz, stating that he had caused inquiries to be set on foot with regard to the representation made by Her Majesty's Government as to the reported intention of some persons in Cuba to introduce free African labourers into that island; I transmit herewith a copy of a despatch which I have received from Her Majesty's Commissioners at Havana,* stating that they consider this scheme to be nothing else than a cover for the introduction of slaves, and that they have reason to believe that a similar project has been agitated at Puerto Rico; and I have to instruct your Lordship to inquire how this matter stands at present.

HER Majesty's Government have had under their consideration Mr. Otway's despatches dated the 10th and 12th of October last: the former of those despatches inclosed a circular issued by the Spanish Government to Her Catholic Majesty's Consuls in foreign ports, authorizing them to grant to Spanish vessels proceeding to the coast of Africa, certificates similar to the custom-house certificates which Article X of the Treaty of June 1835, between Great Britain and Spain for the suppression of the Slave Trade, requires to be exhibited by masters of ships carrying an unusual number of casks or other vessels capable of holding water; the latter despatch from Mr. Otway inclosed a copy of a note from Señor Pastor Diaz, the Spanish Minister for Foreign Affairs, requesting that the commanders of British cruizers might be instructed to recognize the proposed Consular certificate as a sufficient substitute for the certificate mentioned in Article X of the Slave Trade Treaty between Great Britain and Spain.

I have to instruct your Lordship to point out to the Spanish Minister for Foreign Affairs that the Article referred to in Señor Diaz's note to Mr. Otway is of great importance, as it affords to the naval commanders of the two nations the only effectual means of preventing slave-vessels from eluding their vigilance, and that Her Majesty's Government consider that the alteration of that Article which has been proposed by the Spanish Government would materially impair its stringency, because the custom-house authorities at the port of departure, and not the Consuls of each nation, are the only responsible authorities who can properly exact and enforce the securities to be given by the owners of vessels carrying extra casks; and you will say that Her Majesty's Government therefore regret that they cannot concur in the proposal of Señor Pastor Diaz, that a Consular certificate shall be substituted for the custom-house certificate mentioned in Article X of the Treaty.

WITH reference to former correspondence respecting the case of the Spanish vessel "Arrogante Emilio," detained in December 1852, by Her Majesty's ship "Vestal" on a charge of being engaged in the Slave Trade, I now inclose, for your Lordship's information, a copy of a note which I received in June last from the Spanish Minister at this Court, requesting that Her Majesty's Government would repay to the Government of Her Catholic Majesty the sum of 6,000 dollars, which was paid by the Spanish authorities in Cuba, as compensation to the owners of the "Arrogante Emilio," in pursuance of a decision of the Mixed British and Spanish Tribunal at Havana; and I also inclose a copy of the answer which I have returned to the Spanish Minister's application.

(Signed) CLARENDON.

Inclosure 1 in No. 489.

Señor Gonzalez to the Earl of Clarendon.

(Translation.)

My Lord,

Spanish Legation, June 11, 1856.

FROM the adjudication made, and sentence pronounced, by the Mixed Tribunal of the Havana, in the case of the detention of the brig "Emilio," which was captured by a ship of Her Britannic Majesty's navy, it appeared that the vessel detained was declared acquitted of every charge; in consequence, the owners of the brig demanded the due indemnification for the losses accruing to them from the capture and detention during the whole time that the trial lasted.

The Mixed Tribunal of the Havana admitted the justice of the demand, and, in consequence, resolved that the owners of the "Emilio" should be indemnified for the losses and damages suffered, in accordance with the provisions of Articles VI and IX of the Treaty of June 28, 1835.

By the seventh Article of the Instructions of the same period, which accompanied the above-mentioned Treaty, the powers of Mixed Tribunals are stated, and by them they are authorised to decree a just indemnification to owners of captured ships demanding the same, to whom such is due.

CLASS B.

With this legal authorisation the Mixed Tribunal of the Havana decreed an indemnification in favour of the owners of the "Arrogante Emilio," which was liquidated by command of Her Catholic Majesty's Government, because there was no prize fund existing for the indemnification.

As the responsibility and payment of such indemnifications appertains to the Government to which the capturing vessel belongs, as determined in the aforesaid VIth and IXth Articles of the Treaty, it is indubitable that this indemnification is to be made by the Government of Her Britannic Majesty, on whose account and charge the payment of the indemnification was advanced by the Government of Her Catholic Majesty.

Your Excellency will understand that the Government of Her Catholic Majesty in disbursing the sum of 6,000 dollars ("duros") for liquidating the indemnification decreed by the Mixed Tribunal of the Havana, rendered a service to Her Britannic Majesty's Government, which is responsible for the total payment of that sum.

For these considerations, and in the persuasion that your Excellency, in your well-known judgment, will admit the justice of this claim, I hope that the sum of 6,000 dollars, paid as indemnification to the owners of the "Arrogante Emilio," may be liquidated.

The Earl of Clarendon to Señor Pacheco.

Sir,

Foreign Office, November 26, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to acquaint you that Her Majesty's Government have had under their consideration the letter which was addressed to me on the 11th of June last, by your predecessor Don Antonio Gonzalez, requesting that Her Majesty's Government would repay to the Government of Her Catholic Majesty the sum of 6,000 dollars, which was paid by the Spanish authorities at Havana, as compensation to the owners of the Spanish brig "Arrogante Emilio," in pursuance of a decision of the Mixed British and Spanish Tribunal at Havana.

Señor Gonzalez stated, in the above-mentioned letter, that it appeared from the decision in question, that the "Arrogante Emilio" was acquitted of every charge, and that, consequently, her owners demanded compensation for the losses accruing to them from the capture of their vessel, and from her detention during the time that the trial lasted, the justice of which demand was admitted by the members of the Mixed Tribunal, in conformity with the provisions of Articles VI and IX of the Treaty between Great Britain and Spain, of the 28th of June, 1835, and with reference to the seventh Article of the Instructions thereto annexed. And Señor Gonzalez stated that this compensation, amounting to 6,000 dollars, having been advanced to the owners of the "Arrogante Emilio" by order of Her Catholic Majesty's Government, in consequence of there being no prize fund, as provided by the Treaty, he hoped that this advance, which had been made on account of Her Majesty's Government, who were bound to indemnify the owners of the vessel, would be repaid by them to the Spanish Government.

I have the honour to inform you that Lord Howden, Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid, addressed to Her Catholic Majesty's Minister for Foreign Affairs, on the 11th of January, and on the 1st of May, 1856, two notes, explaining fully the case of the "Arrogante Emilio," and the difficulties which had arisen in consequence of the Mixed Commission at Havana having directed that compensation should be paid to her owner out of a fund which, though mentioned in the Treaty of 1835, did not in fact exist.

I have also to state, that Lord Howden, in his note to General Zavala of the 1st of May last, explained the mode in which it appeared to Her Majesty's Government that the two Governments might settle amicably the disputed affair of the "Arrogante Emilio," and likewise the accounts relating to the proceeds of the Spanish vessels which were condemned in 1853 by the Mixed Commission Court at Havana. And General Zavala, in answer to that note, informed Lord Howden, on the 27th of June, 1856, that his proposals as to the adjustment of those matters appeared to be in substance conformable with what Her Catholic Majesty's Government required and thought just; and that the proposals in question would accordingly be referred to the Captain-General of Cuba for his opinion thereupon.

I have to inform you that Her Majesty's Government have not since received any further communication from the Government of Her Catholic Majesty with regard to the said proposals.

I beg leave, at the same time, to refer to a letter which I addressed to Señor Gonzalez on the 10th of June last, in answer to certain objections made by the Spanish Government as to one of the items of the account of the Mixed Commission at Sierra Leone, which was presented by Lord Howden to Her Catholic Majesty's Government on the 14th of August, 1854; I believe that those objections were fully and satisfactorily answered, but Her Majesty's Government have not yet received from the British Legation at Madrid any report stating what may have been the final decision of the Spanish Government upon that account.

(Translation.)

My Lord,

Spanish Legation, August 5, 1856.

THE sacred duty which Governments contract, to protect the properties and persons of their subjects, cannot be set aside for any consideration opposed to the incontrovertible principles of justice and the public law of nations.

When International Laws and Treaties establish rights protective of the property and persons of subjects, Governments cannot, and ought not, to neglect their well-founded claims, nor cease to protect the property, liberty of commerce, and industry of the claimants.

Actuated by these just feelings, Her Majesty's Government commands me to claim of the Government of Her Britannic Majesty the losses and damages, the costs and expenses sustained by the Spanish corvette "Fernando Po," the property of Don José Vidal y Rivas, a shipowner belonging to Barcelona, which was captured by English cruizers on the coast of Africa, near the Fort of St. James, in the roads of Accra, on the 2nd August, 1855, and, after a slow and tardy trial, was acquitted by the Mixed Court of Sierra Leone, as your Excellency will see by the accompanying documents in proof which I have the honour to transmit, to be returned to me.

The detail of the facts, methodically and simply stated, will satisfy your Excellency of the justice of this claim, and will convince you of the abuse of power and of the right of search committed by the Commanders of the English cruizers "Dolphin" and "Minx," Lieutenants Edmund Webber and Richard

Henry Roe, stationed on the coast of Africa for the purpose of putting down the cruel and inhuman Trade in Slaves.

The corvette "Fernando Po" and the schooner "Mariana" left the harbour of Barcelona on the 16th June, 1855, for the purpose of trading in palm oil at the Spanish Islands of Fernando Po and Annabon. These vessels, provided with the necessary barrels to be filled with palm oil, and furnished with the requisite documents and papers by the maritime authorities of Barcelona, certified by Her Britannic Majesty's Consul in that city, departed for the place to which they were bound under the command of Captain Torrens, who sailed in the corvette.

These ships, under the security of their right, and with the confidence of being duly authorized, sailed for their destination, and had no difficulty in reaching the Fort of St. James and Accra roads, where they were captured on the 2nd August, 1855, by the Commanders of the "Dolphin" and "Minx," notwithstanding that they had their papers duly authorized by the competent authorities, and in spite of the legal protection granted by existing Treaties to vessels engaged in licit trade.

Notwithstanding the remonstrances of Captain Torrens, the vessels "Fernando Po" and "Mariana" were carried to Sierra Leone, making a passage of more than 500 leagues, to the great damage of the trading adventure.

So soon as these vessels arrived at that place, they were delivered up to the care and custody of the English functionaries, and subjected to the adjudication brought against them by Edmund Webber and Richard Henry Roe, who had captured them.

When the case was tried, and the evidence brought forward, the innocence of the captured vessels was admitted, as well as the injustice and guilt of the capturers, who, by an abuse of power, had given rise to such procedure.

The sentence of the Mixed Court of the 3rd November, 1855, completely acquits the said vessels, and, admitting that an indemnification for the losses and damages caused to the said vessels was just, ordered 25*l.* to be given to Captain Torrens; but, unfortunately, it was observed that, during the entire time of nearly four months which the trial lasted, the vessels had been injured, and the greater part of their provisions lost by damage, and by the culpable neglect of the English guards, who did not avert such serious losses.

In these circumstances, and with reference to the tenour of the sentence pronounced on the 3rd November, 1855, Captain Torrens asked for a survey of the corvette "Fernando Po," of 250 tons burthen, and of the provisions and goods contained in that vessel and in the schooner "Mariana," and the result of this survey being that the vessels had suffered damage, and required much repair that they might not be liable to shipwreck, which the corvette "Fernando Po" suffered subsequently, the Mixed Court resolved that these claims should be brought before the Governments of Her Catholic Majesty and Her Britannic Majesty, that justice might be done to the claimant.

All these facts are established in the documents which I have the honour to inclose, and particularly in No. 16, which contains the aforesaid Judgments and the resolution of the Court.

Your Excellency, with your judgment, will understand that, by the resolutions of the Mixed Court of Sierra Leone, the right is admitted of an indemnity to the said vessels for the losses, damages, costs, and expenses which the capture caused to them; and this explicit admission of the Mixed Court of Sierra Leone is in conformity with the letter and spirit of the Treaty and Regulations on the repression of the Slave Trade.

The object of the Treaty and of the Regulations, which prohibit, under severe penalties, this inhuman and cruel Traffic, has respected the liberty of trade, and the right of the subjects of all nations to carry on that lawful trade which is suitable to their interests; and for this reason penalties are established, and responsibility for those who infringe the Treaty of the 28th June, 1835, and the Regulations annexed thereto, and at the same time the indemnification is specified which is due to acquitted vessels for each day of their detention, and for the losses occasioned, after proof of these is shown.

Unfortunately, the summary trial carried on by the Mixed Court of Sierra Leone not only lasted more than twenty days, but even more than two months, which is the longest period contemplated in Article III of the annexed Regulation B, and therefore the said Court furnishes grounds for raising the losses, damages, and demurrage to a considerable sum.

By Article VII of the said annexed Regulation B, it is established that acquitted ships shall be justly and wholly indemnified for all the costs of suit, for all the losses and damages which the owner may have suffered in consequence of the capture and detention of the ships; and in case the loss be total, as in the present instance of the corvette "Fernando Po," the claimant is to be indemnified according to Regulations A, B, C, for the loss of the vessel, her tackle, supplies, and provisions, for all freight due and payable, or for demurrage, and for the value of the cargo of merchandize.

From the facts stated, your Excellency will understand that, in accordance with the letter and the spirit of the sentence of November 3, 1855, and the resolution of the 12th December of the same year, an indemnification is just and irrecusable; and the same is prescribed, with justice, in the Treaties and Regulations respecting the Slave Trade mentioned before.

I therefore hope that the Government of Her Britannic Majesty, taking into its serious consideration this claim, founded in the principles of justice, will resolve that the sum of 75,844 hard dollars, 3 reals, and 14 maravedies (equivalent, at the exchange of  $49\frac{7}{8}d.$  per dollar, to 15,623*l.* 2*s.* 2*d.* sterling), be paid to the house of Señor Vidal y Rivas, of Barcelona, which sum is proved by the documents accompanying this; of which sum that which legally appertains will be applied to the Prize Fund.

In order to obviate further losses to shipowners and merchants who carry on the trade in palm oil, or any other lawful commerce, and having respect to the freedom of commerce, by which the responsibility may be avoided such as has been incurred by the cruizers of Her Britannic Majesty on the African coast, as well as the just claims caused by the abuse of force, I request your Excellency to be pleased to issue the necessary orders to the effect that the said cruizers do confine themselves to the strict observance of the Treaty and Regulations, and do not molest or disturb the freedom of trade of Her Catholic Majesty's subjects in those seas or in other seas.

I take, &c.

Inclosure 2 in No. 490.

The Earl of Clarendon to Señor Comyn.

Sir,

Foreign Office, December 4, 1856.

ON the 9th of August last I had the honour to inform Don Antonio Gonzalez that I had referred to the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury the note which he addressed to me on the 5th of that month, claiming compensation for the owners of the Spanish barque "Fernando Po," which was detained on the coast of Africa in August 1855 by a British cruizer, on a charge of being equipped for the Slave Trade.

The grounds upon which Señor Gonzalez stated that he made this claim were, that when the case of the "Fernando Po" was tried by the Mixed British and Spanish Court of Justice at Sierra Leone, it was proved that the captured vessel was innocent, and that the captors were guilty of an abuse of power in detaining her; and Señor Gonzalez stated that the sentence of the Mixed Court having admitted that the owners were entitled to receive compensation for the damages and expenses which the capture caused to them, the Spanish Government demanded, on their behalf, that they should be compensated in conformity with the stipulations of Article VII of Annex B to the Treaty between Great Britain and Spain, of the 28th June, 1835, which points out the several heads under which indemnification is to be awarded to such vessels as shall have been detained under the provisions of the Treaty, but shall not have been condemned as a legal prize by the Mixed Court of Justice; and Señor Gonzalez has accordingly claimed for the owners of the "Fernando Po" the sum of 15,623*l.* 2*s.* 3*d.*

I have the honour to observe that the above-mentioned Article of Annex B does not apply to the case of the "Fernando Po," because in that case the Judges both pronounced that the captors were justified in seizing and sending her to Sierra Leone to be adjudicated in the Mixed British and Spanish Commission Court.

The ground upon which this vessel was seized was, that she had on board a large quantity of water-casks in direct violation of the 6th clause of Article X of the Treaty with Spain of 1835, which stipulates that if a vessel should have on board an extraordinary number of water-casks, and if the master should not produce a certificate from the custom-house of the place from which she cleared outwards, stating that a sufficient security had been given by the owners of such vessel that such extra quantity of casks should only be used to hold palm oil, or for other purposes of lawful commerce, the vessel shall be condemned and declared lawful prize, unless satisfactory evidence upon the part of the owners shall establish that such vessel was, at the time of her detention, employed in some legal pursuit; and Article XI of the same Treaty stipulates, that if any of the things specified in Article X shall be found in any merchant-vessel, neither the master nor the owner, nor any person whatever interested in her equipment or cargo, shall be entitled to compensation for losses or damages, even though the Mixed Court of Justice should not pronounce any sentence of condemnation.

As it was proved upon the trial that there was an extra quantity of water-casks on board the "Fernando Po," and as the master of that vessel was not provided with the above-mentioned certificate, the Court pronounced that there was sufficient ground for the detention of the vessel; but at the same time the Judges being satisfied with the evidence produced on the part of the master, showing that the excessive number of casks which he had on board were intended to hold palm oil, the Court decided that there was not sufficient ground for her condemnation, and they decreed that the "Fernando Po" should be restored to her owners, but without costs, damages, or expenses consequent upon her seizure and detention.

Señor Gonzalez appears to have supposed that the sum of 25*l.* mentioned in his letter, was awarded by the Court to Captain Torrens, the master of the captured vessel, as compensation for the losses and damages sustained by him and by the owners, and that the Court intended that the British and Spanish Governments should afterwards settle what further compensation the owners should receive; but it will be seen on reference to the proceedings, that the award in question of 25*l.* was not made with that view, but that it was made upon the report of the practical men who were employed to survey the vessel in conformity with an order which is to be found at the conclusion of the sentence, and which directed that the expense of refitting the vessel for sea was to be borne by the captors; and according the moiety of that award payable by the British Government was paid at Sierra Leone to the agent of the Spanish owners.

The question which was left by the Judges for the decision of the two Governments related to the circumstance of the "Fernando Po" having been beached by her crew in a place where she grounded upon a rock, and received so much injury that she was condemned as unseaworthy, with regard to which occurrence the following minute was signed by the British and Spanish Judges:—

"With reference to that part of the Decree of the Court in the case of the restored Spanish barque "Fernando Po," stating that the expense of refitting her for sea as she was at the time of detention, should be divided between the captors and claimant, which refitment was ascertained by an authorized Surveyor of the Court to amount to the sum of 25*l.*, it is now determined by the Judges of the said Court, that as the "Fernando Po" has subsequently become a wreck, and cannot therefore be refitted, this matter should be left for the decision of the two Governments of England and Spain."

I observe that Señor Gonzalez further states that the owners of the "Fernando Po" are entitled to claim damages and demurrage on account of the proceedings of the Court having extended beyond twenty days, and having occupied more than two months.

With regard to this claim, I have referred to the minutes of the trial, and I find that the case of the "Fernando Po" was admitted into Court on the 11th of September, and that the final sentence was pronounced on the 30th October; and although the proceedings in this case were unusually lengthy, and the adjudication of the vessel was delayed for some days owing to the illness of the Proctors on both sides, nevertheless the decision on the case was pronounced before the expiration of the period specified in the Treaty.

Under the circumstances above stated, it appears clearly that the captors of the "Fernando Po" were fully justified in seizing and sending that vessel to Sierra Leone, and in proceeding against her before the Mixed British and Spanish Court there established, and that the captors would have been guilty of a neglect of duty if they had not so acted.

It appears also, that the Court was entirely borne out by the facts proved in evidence, and by the terms of the Treaty, in deciding, as they did, that the owners of the vessel were not entitled to receive costs or damages consequent upon her seizure and detention.

And as, under the said Treaty, that Court is the only tribunal competent to decide between the British captors and the owners of this ship or cargo, Her Majesty's Government must decline to entertain the claim for compensation made by the Spanish Government on behalf of Messrs. Vidal and Rivas.

You will observe that in the foregoing remarks there is no mention made of the Spanish vessel called the "Mariana," which is represented in Señor Gonzalez' letter to have been seized at the same time as the "Fernando Po," and to have been taken to Sierra Leone by the same captors. But as Her Majesty's Government are not aware that the "Mariana" was so seized or conveyed to Sierra Leone, as no proceedings were taken against her in the Mixed Commission Court at Sierra Leone, and as no demand for compensation has been made in that case, I have not thought it necessary to address to you any observations with regard to that vessel, although an affidavit was made before the Court in the course of the trial of the "Fernando Po," showing that the "Mariana" was the consort of the former vessel, and that her proceedings on the coast of Africa led to a suspicion that she was intended to be employed in the Slave Trade.

Lord Howden to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received December 19.)

My Lord,

Madrid, December 14, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to your Lordship a translation of a note I have received from the Marquis of Pidal, in answer to one I framed on your Lordship's despatch of the 25th ultimo, concerning certain authorisation which the Spanish Government is desirous should be transferred to the Consuls of Her Catholic Majesty on the western coast of Africa.

I have, &c.
(Signed) HOWDEN.

Inclosure in No. 491.

The Marquis de Pidal to Lord Howden.

(Translation.)

Most Excellent Sir,

I HAVE had the honour of receiving your Excellency's note, dated the 3rd instant, in which you are pleased to state to me that the British Government cannot accede to the wishes expressed in the note from my predecessor in office, Señor Pastor Diaz, respecting the transmission to the authorities of the British possessions on the western coast of Africa, and to the commanders of cruizers, of the proper instructions, in consequence of the orders sent to Spanish Consuls, directing them to furnish the masters of vessels bound for the aforesaid coast of Africa, with the certificate mentioned in Article X of the Treaty for the suppression of the Slave Trade.

Her Majesty's Government entertains the belief that this refusal is to be exclusively attributed to an erroneous interpretation of the spirit and real object of the aforesaid instructions to Spanish Consuls, and therefore indulges in the hope that, so soon as the efficiency of the argument on which the opposition of the British Government to the measure in question is founded will have been destroyed, the Government of Her Britannic Majesty will take, on its part, the necessary steps in order that the instructions in question may be carried into effect. But before entering into the examination of the arguments contained in your Excellency's note, it is expedient, for the purpose I have in view, that I should state to your Excellency that Her Majesty's Government, faithful to its determination of persevering in the work of repression of the Slave Trade, has only granted the authorisation for Spanish Consuls to issue the certificates in question after a minute and attentive examination of the matter, which has produced in its mind the conviction that such a measure can by no means obstruct the means of persecution against the above-mentioned Traffic, its object being, as it really is, only to afford protection to a branch of bond fide commerce, the interests of which considerably engross, at this moment, the attention of all Governments, and most particularly that of the British Government. It was under this point of view that the Spanish Cabinet thought the measure alluded to would have been appreciated, and therefore omitted the explanations which I now hasten to submit to your Excellency's upright judgment, in answer to your aforesaid note.

Your Excellency pretends, that by the measure in question an alteration is introduced into the above-mentioned Article X, which does away with the only means which the commanders of cruizers have for preventing the Slave Trade, and counteracts the provisions of that Article, since the custom-house authorities, and not the Consuls, are the only responsible functionaries who can require from the masters of vessels, carrying on board a large number of empty casks, the proper securities with regard to the use for which they are intended.

In order to reply to the two points constituting the foregoing argument, it will suffice to make one single observation which naturally flows from the analysis of the aforesaid Article X, and from the study of its spirit and principal object.

In that Article are specified, in the first place, the objects which are to be considered as prima facie evidence of a vessel being destined to the Slave Trade; but in the paragraph No. 6, on mentioning, amongst the aforesaid objects, empty casks in great number, as such casks may be used, and are even indispensable, for certain operations of lawful trade, it was stipulated that the exhibition, on the part of the masters of vessels carrying such casks on board, of a certificate, attesting the legitimate destination thereof, issued by the custom-house authority of the place of their departure, should be sufficient to guarantee them against the action of cruizers. It was likewise necessary to obtain a security, that under the shade of pretended operations of lawful trade, the persecution of cruizers should not be eluded; and it was for this purpose that the pecuniary deposit, referred to in the aforesaid Article X, was established, as a security that the empty casks on board a vessel bound for the coast of Africa will be employed in the conveyance of palm oil or of any other sort of oil, and not in being filled up with water for the necessities of a cargo of negroes.

Here appears, therefore, in the first place, and in an indubitable manner, the intention of guaranteeing the bond fide commerce, and of leaving open to it the intercourse with the African ports; and it likewise appears clearly and decidedly proved, that the true security as to the destination of vessels carrying the aforesaid empty casks on board, is the pecuniary deposit, and not the class or category of the functionary who exacts that security, in conformity with Article X of the Treaty. Consequently, no alteration nor modification whatsoever is introduced in the essence of the Treaty, and still less is any obstruction caused to the object of the same by the circumstance of the person before whom the aforesaid deposit is made being a custom-house officer or a Consul, provided that he be a formally constituted authority, since it is the deposit which essentially and principally constitutes the desired security respecting the destination of vessels which carry empty casks in their expeditions to Africa.

With regard to the moral authority of the functionary who issues the certificate after the aforesaid security has been deposited, it seems to be greater in a Consul than in a custom-house officer, since the former exercises functions of a higher character than the latter; he also performs acts which are peculiar to the depositaries of public faith, in everything relative to the voluntary jurisdiction between subjects of his own nation; and his assertions are officially relied on in matters of such great transcendancy as the public health, as, for instance, bills of health, certified by a Consul, are the principal guarantee for preventing the propagation of contagious diseases. Moreover, the two above-mentioned functionaries are equally liable to condign punishment if they betray the confidence deposited in them; and they are responsible, with their personal property, for the abuses they may commit in the exercise of their respective functions, being both subordinate officers of the same Government, which cannot establish any difference between them. It would, therefore, be illogical to consider the certificate alluded to in Article X of the Treaty, as being of minor force and value for the cruizers, when granted by a Consul, than if issued by a custom-house functionary, whose moral authority and responsibility are not superior to that of the former agent.

Your Excellency therefore will, I have no doubt, acknowledge that there is no well-founded motive whatever for supposing, as the British Government does, that by a Consul granting the certificate in question in the same form, and under identical circumstances, as that issued by a custom-house functionary, the cruizers are deprived of the most efficient means of persecuting the Traffic in Slaves.

On the other hand, the adoption of a measure such as that taken by the Spanish Government, and which is not inconsistent with the aforesaid Article X, since this Article acknowledges the necessity of protecting lawful trade with the ports of Africa, was so absolutely indispensable that it could no longer be deferred without inflicting serious injury on the commercial interests of Spain. It is not always convenient for the expeditions intended for the African continent to sail directly from the Peninsula, carrying already on board the casks wanted for the palm oil; and there may be some cases in which it is preferable for them to take goods destined for some port in Europe, in which they take on board the casks in question, and thence sail for the coast of Africa. In such cases if the Spanish Consul resident at the port in which they perform that operation does not furnish them with the certificate required by Article X of the Treaty, and cannot, therefore, take there on board the casks they want, they are obliged to proceed to a port in Spain, with great pecuniary sacrifices and loss of time, for the sole purpose of obtaining the aforesaid document, and taking there the casks; and should they, in consequence of the better quality or cheapness of such casks, take them at the foreign port and sail with them for Spain, in order to obtain from a custom-house authority the required certificate, they are exposed to be detained on the way by some cruizer, and subjected to a criminal prosecution of the most ruinous consequences.

The object of the measure in question has been to prevent so serious and transcendental injury to Spanish commerce, and Her Majesty's Government is confident that when it shall have been justly appreciated, in its spirit and tendency, by the upright judgment of the British Government, it will deserve its conformity and approbation, without it being necessary to resort to new arguments in order to prove the imperious duty, on the part of the Spanish Government, to contribute to the success of Spanish expeditions trading with the ports of Africa, in the same manner as is done with English expeditions and those of other nations, which have the free power of trading with the natives of that part of the world.

In conclusion, I request your Excellency will have the goodness to communicate this note to your Government, which, I entertain the hope, will issue, in consequence of the foregoing statements, the instructions alluded to in the above-mentioned note from my predecessor in office.

WITH reference to my despatch of the 7th of May last, transmitting the answer of General Zavala respecting the circumstances attending the landing of 525 Bozal negroes at Sierra Morena, in Cuba, on the 14th of February last, I have now the honour to transmit to your Lordship translation of a note I have received from Her Catholic Majesty's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, stating that although all the efforts of his Excellency the Captain-General of Cuba to carry out the orders of his Government for the suppression of the Slave Trade did not suffice to prevent the landing of Africans referred to—the number of them being, however, much smaller than that stated by Mr. Consul-General Crawford to Her Majesty's Government—the Lieutenant-Governor of Sagua caused the Captain in command of the district to be not only suspended, but to be committed to prison, there to await the issue of the legal proceedings instituted against him; whilst various other persons have been also arrested on suspicion of being concerned in the transaction in question, and two of them, natives of Portugal, have been expelled from the island.

ON the 3rd of May last, General Zavala stated to your Excellency, in reply to the note from the British Legation of the 1st of the same month, in which it was denounced that a disembarkation of Bozal negroes had taken place at Sierra Morena, in the Island of Cuba, that the necessary instructions had been sent to the Captain-General of the Island of Cuba, directing his Excellency to report what he might know upon the subject, and to adopt the proper measures for the purpose of preventing, in future, the repetition of acts so contrary to the Laws and Treaties as that which was supposed to have been perpetrated at Sierra Morena.

General Concha has, consequently, transmitted to the Government his report upon the subject, from which it appears that his Excellency, having received trustworthy information that the disembarkation denounced by your Excellency was going to take place, immediately issued peremptory orders, not only to the Lieutenant-Governor of Sagua, but also to the other Governors of the neighbouring districts, enjoining them, on their strictest responsibility, to take all necessary precautions for the seizure of the expedition in question. The Lieutenant-Governors of Remedios and Cardenas displayed the utmost possible zeal, and by their active measures prevented the landing from being effected in their respective jurisdictions. The Lieutenant-Governor of Sagua, although he acted with the same activity, and notwithstanding his having resorted to stronger means of persecution since the 8th of February, when he received General Concha's instructions to that effect, yet he could not prevent the landing in question, which took place at a place called Sierra Morena, in the district of Rancho Velon, although the number of landed slaves was considerably smaller than that mentioned by Mr. Crawford to the English Government.

The Lieutenant-Governor, however, suspended from his functions the Captain commanding the aforesaid district, so soon as he heard of the event; and General Concha, in his turn, not only ordered his definitive dismissal from his post, but also sent him in confinement to the Castle of Fernandina de Jagua, in the jurisdiction of Cienfuegos; whilst the Alcalde Mayor of Jagua proceeded, on his part, with the greatest activity to the formation of the proper judicial proceedings, which are at present under the examination of the Royal Pretorial Audiencia (Court of Justice) of the island.

The Alcalde Mayor caused several individuals, who were found out to be implicated in the landing in question, to be arrested, two of whom, named Joaquim Albar Pinto and José Maria Andido, Portuguese subjects, were expelled from the island. The process, being finished, must already have been transmitted to the above-mentioned Royal Audiencia, in order that this Court of Justice may pronounce the definitive sentence according to justice.

Your Excellency will be pleased to observe, from the foregoing statement, that the authorities of Cuba, obeying, on this as on every other occasion, the orders they receive from Her Majesty's Government, have spared, on their part, no means nor effort whatsoever for the purpose of preventing the disembarkation denounced by your Excellency, which took place on a minor scale than that which had been supposed; whilst they have made every possible exertion to the effect of bringing under the action of the Courts of Justice all those persons who may have been implicated in the disembarkation in question.

No. 501.

The Earl of Clarendon to Lord Howden.

My Lord,

Foreign Office, February 7, 1857.

WITH reference to your Lordship's despatch of the 14th December last, I have to instruct you to inform the Marquis de Pidal that Her Majesty's Government have attentively considered the observations contained in his Excellency's letter to you of the 12th December, explaining the motives which led Señor Pastor Diaz to authorize Spanish Consuls to issue the certificates which are required by the 6th clause of Article X of the Treaty between Great Britain and Spain of the 28th June, 1835.

It appears that the authority in question was given by a circular of the 28th September, 1856, which was published in the official Gazette of Madrid, stating that it was not convenient, upon all occasions, for Spanish merchant-vessels trading to the coast of Africa for palm oil to comply with the provisions of Article X of the said Treaty, one of the clauses of which Article obliges the master of a vessel carrying an extra number of casks to provide himself with a certificate from the custom-house of the port from whence he clears out, showing that a sufficient security has been given by the owners of such vessels that such extra quantity of casks should only be used to hold palm oil, or for other purposes of lawful commerce.

And in order to prevent this alleged inconvenience, the Spanish Consuls at foreign ports have been authorized to issue the certificate in question, and to take security from the masters or from the consignees of Spanish vessels wanting to take in casks at a foreign port.

The Spanish Government have thus made, without consulting Her Majesty's Government, the other Contracting Party to the Treaty of the 28th June, 1835, three material alterations in a very important Article of that Treaty. The first alteration consists in conceding to Spanish vessels liberty to take in extra casks, and to obtain certificates accordingly, at foreign ports, and not at the port of clearance only, as stipulated in the Treaty; the second alteration substitutes Consular for custom-house certificates; and the third fixes the amount of security at three times the value of the empty casks, and allows that security to be given by the master of the vessel, or by her consignee, instead of by the owner, as provided in the Treaty.

With regard to the permission given to the masters of Spanish vessels bound to Africa to provide themselves with casks in foreign ports, you will observe that this course of proceeding is not permitted by the Treaty, and could not be granted to British vessels by Her Majesty's Government without a violation of the British Law which was passed in 1836, embodying all the provisions of the Treaty of 1835.

† No. 553.

Moreover, the Marquis of Pidal must be aware that all the maritime Powers of Europe have entered into Treaties with Great Britain similar to the said Treaty of June 1835, between Great Britain and Spain, and, consequently, that Spanish vessels trading to the coast of Africa are only subject to the same restrictions in regard to the shipment of extra casks as the vessels of Great Britain and those of other European Powers.

With regard to the employment of Consuls instead of the custom-house authorities in the duty of issuing certificates and taking bail, it appears to Her Majesty's Government that it might become easy for the slave-dealers to evade the Treaty if the authority given thereby to the Department of the Customs in both countries were to be superseded, and if that authority were to be transferred to the British and Spanish Consuls, because Consuls are, generally speaking, mercantile or commercial men, and may have an interest in conniving at the illicit transactions which the certificates are intended to prevent.

The new arrangement made by the Spanish Government, whereby the masters or consignees of vessels are designated as the parties who are to give bail for the legal employment of the casks, instead of the owners of the vessels, as provided by the Treaty, also appears to Her Majesty's Government to be open to serious objection.

The 6th clause of Article X of the Treaty specifically directs that the bail is to be given by the owner, and in British ports it is invariably given in the sum of 500*l.*, whilst it is now proposed by the Spanish Government that this security should only be to the amount of three times the value of the casks, which is a mere trifle, and can be no guarantee to guard against a breach of the Treaty being committed.

In communicating the above remarks to the Spanish Minister for Foreign Affairs, your Lordship will state to his Excellency that Her Majesty's Government are convinced that they would be throwing open a door to an extensive revival of the African Slave Trade, if they were to consent to alter the stipulations of the Treaty of 1835 between Great Britain and Spain, either by devolving upon Consuls the responsible duty of issuing certificates and taking bail, or by adopting any of the other alterations of that Treaty which are contained in the Spanish circular of the 28th September, 1856; because, as Great Britain has concluded, with fifteen other Powers, Anti-Slave Trade Treaties, containing the same Equipment Article as that now under consideration, Her Majesty's Government must be prepared to grant to those Powers, as well as to British subjects, the same relaxation of that Article which it is now proposed that they should concede to Spain.

And you will, in conclusion, state that Her Majesty's Government still consider the relaxation in question to be entirely at variance with the spirit and intentions of the Treaty between Great Britain and Spain of June 28, 1835, and Her Majesty's Government are therefore unable to comply with the proposal of Spanish Government.

this place) a Spanish barque, named the "Conchita," twenty-two days out from Barcelona and Gibraltar. She has on board a very suspicious cargo, consisting of leaguers, plank, rum, and tobacco; but the master produces a certificate signed by Mr. James Baker, Her Majesty's Consul at Barcelona, stating that the owners, Messrs. Vidal and Riba, of that city, had entered into the usual securities that the vessel was engaged in legal trade, and that the unusual number of leaguers and the plank were intended for the palm-oil trade. Under such circumstances, of course I could not detain her; but I nevertheless entertain a very strong surmise that, if not watched and prevented, she would ship a cargo of slaves; or, failing that, take on board a legal cargo. I shall, consequently, give directions to the cruizers under my orders to watch her narrowly.

2. I seize this occasion to suggest the expediency of the Commanders of the different cruizers on this station being supplied with fac-similes of the signatures of the Consular officers at those foreign places at which the certificates alluded to are in the habit of being granted; or, if this should be deemed inconvenient, that such certificates should be given under the Consular seal or stamp, in order to provide against any collusion or forgery.

Inclosure 2 in No. 505.

The Earl of Shelburne to the Secretary to the Admiralty.

Sir,

Foreign Office, March 21, 1857.

I HAVE laid before the Earl of Clarendon your letter of the 14th instant, inclosing a copy of one from Commodore Adams, reporting his having boarded the Spanish barque "Conchita," off Accra, and stating his suspicions that she was intended to be employed in the Slave Trade; but the Commodore adds that as the master produced a certificate signed by Mr. Baker, Her Majesty's Consul at Barcelona, stating that the owners of the "Conchita" had entered into the usual securities that the vessel was engaged in lawful trade, he could not, of course, detain her; and he suggests, with the view to prevent the commanders of Her Majesty's cruizers on the coast of Africa from being imposed upon by fictitious certificates, that they should be furnished with fac-similes of the signatures of such of Her Majesty's Consuls as are in the habit of granting certificates similar to the one produced by the master of the "Conchita."

In reply, I am to request that you will state to the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, that the provisions of the Anti-Slave Trade Treaty with Spain do not require British Consuls to issue certificates similar to that furnished by Mr. Baker in the case of the "Conchita;" but the Treaty does require that the master of a vessel having on board any of the articles prohibited by the Treaty, among which are planks and leaguers, which formed part of the cargo of the "Conchita," shall produce a certificate from the Customs authorities at the place from whence she cleared, stating that a sufficient security had been given by the owners of the vessel that such articles are intended to be used for purposes of lawful commerce, and unless the master of the "Conchita" was furnished with the certificate required by Treaty, that vessel was liable to seizure and might have been detained by Commodore Adams.

I am to add that Lord Clarendon is not aware that any other of Her Majesty's Consular Officers are in the habit of issuing certificates of the nature of the one furnished by Mr. Baker to the master of the "Conchita;" and I am to state that instructions will be sent to Mr. Baker directing him to abstain from issuing similar certificates for the future.

I HAVE received from the Board of Admiralty a copy of a letter addressed to that Board by Commodore Adams, the Commander-in-chief of Her Majesty's Naval Forces on the west coast of Africa, reporting his having boarded the Spanish barque "Conchita" off Accra, and stating that he suspected that she was intended to be employed in the Slave Trade, but he adds that as the master of the "Conchita" produced a certificate signed by you, stating that the owners of the vessel had entered into the usual security that she was engaged in lawful commerce, he could not of course detain her.

I have to state to you that the provisions of the Anti-Slave Trade Treaty between this country and Spain do not require British Consuls to furnish the masters of Spanish vessels with certificates similar to the one supplied by you to the master of the "Conchita," but the Treaty does require that the master of a vessel having on board any of the articles prohibited by Treaty, amongst which are leaguers and planks, which formed part of the cargo of the "Conchita," shall produce a certificate from the Customs authorities at the place from whence she cleared, stating that a sufficient security has been given by the owners of the vessel that such articles are intended to be used for purposes of lawful commerce, and unless the master of the "Conchita" was furnished with the certificate required by Treaty, the document supplied by you ought not to have prevented her being detained.

I have therefore to desire that you will abstain for the future from issuing certificates similar to the one supplied by you in the case of the "Conchita."

Consul-General Crawford to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received April 1.)

My Lord.

Havana, February 26, 1856.

I HAVE the honour of acknowledging the receipt of your Lordship's despatch dated the 19th ultimo,* in which, with reference to my despatch of the 1st of June last, your Lordship transmits, for my information, a copy of a despatch which you had received from Lord Howden, inclosing a copy of the answer returned by the Spanish Minister for Foreign Affairs, to the representation which Lord Howden addressed to him upon the subject of my said despatch.

I have considered M. de Zavala's note of the 4th of last month, and I certainly so far agree with his Excellency as to admit the great difficulty there was in watching the fate of so many emancipados; and that consequently there must have been, not only some, but many, abuses. But there is undoubtedly great blame attached to the authorities for not having adopted such measures as would have effectually hindered such abuses as, notoriously and to a very great extent, were practised from the year 1825 to the calling in of all the emancipados, and placing them under their present footing. It is from the various "expedientes" which have been formed by General Concha's direction, for the purpose of discovering the truth respecting those unfortunate people, that it became known to what an iniquitous extent the abuses had been carried on, and their result, as reported to your Lordship in my despatch of June last, was arrived at, by a prudent calculation, for there is great uncertainty upon the subject; and all that has been done by these laudable investigations under the present Captain-General's orders only confirms the fact of there being so many of the emancipados who were consigned to various masters respecting whom there are no certain accounts, who have not appeared, and who, there is but too much reason to believe, are filling the places of so many of the slaves deceased upon the plantations, and so cunningly have such substitutions of the living emancipados for the dead slaves been made that it would be useless for the authorities to interfere, and I am very much afraid that nothing would be gained by further inquiry: the laxity of the Government for a period from 1825 to 1853 cannot now be remedied.

his Lordship in answer to the representation which he addressed to the Spanish Government by your Lordship's instruction upon the subject of my said despatch.

M. de Zavala in his note now under my consideration, has recourse to the argument, comparing Bozal negroes to any other species of contraband, which has so often been availed of by those who are disposed to exculpate the authorities of this island with regard to their connivance with the slave-traders; but it will not have escaped the superior penetration of your Lordship, that the passage from place to place of numbers of Bozal negroes and their guards or custodiers, differs materially from that of any other contraband, since preparation must be made, rations provided, and passes be obtained for the Bozals, which would not be absolutely required for any other species of smuggled goods. Moreover, goods and merchandize clandestinely introduced are easily hidden; they may lie concealed until a fitting opportunity offers for their disposal, and all this without the knowledge of so many persons as must be engaged in the illicit operations of slave-trading: a bale of goods may be seen by any one without their detecting it as having been smuggled; but no one, having the experience of the people of this island, can see a Bozal negro, much less numbers of them together, without at once recognizing them as such, so that without connivance it is impossible for them to pass from place to place as they do. And with regard to M. de Zavala's observation, that if white persons took the same precautions for escaping discovery as are probably made use of with respect to the negroes, no doubt they would not be found out, this says but little for the vigilance of the authorities; but the whites who take precautions, I am disposed to think, do not escape detection because of those precautions, but because they are furnished improperly with passes which protect them, which is too often the case also with the newly and illegally imported negroes from Africa, who are no sooner landed (in most instances) than they are furnished with their certificates of baptism, without their ever having been seen by a priest, and with their cedulas, as slaves belonging to plantations they have never seen.

I HAVE the honour of inclosing herewith to your Lordship, the copy of a correspondence which I have had with General Manzano, the Segundo Cabo of this island, in absence of the Captain-General, respecting the disembarkation of 524 Bozal negroes, which took place at Sierra Morena on the 14th instant.

The master and supercargo of this slaver (the brig "Pierre Soulé") came to Havana, and embarked for New York by the mail steamer "Empire City," on the 23rd instant; the supercargo's name, I learn, is Piedras, that he, the master and most of the crew (twelve in number, who went off from Sierra Morena) are Portuguese, and the rest were Americans. The vessel was formerly a trader between New Orleans and this port, nearly worn out, and had been therefore sold; consequently she was of but little value.

The slaves were sold at 750 to 800 dollars each, and no doubt Señor Piedras is gone to New York to proceed to the coast of Africa upon another expedition.

It is said, and I believe truly, that some of the Government spies have been assassinated in the country, in consequence of their interfering to detect the Bozals of this cargo, and that the perpetrators of these murders have not been discovered, such are the demoralizing effects of this most detestable Traffic.

I HAVE received information of a landing which was effected some days ago at Sierra Morena consisting of 524 Bozal negroes, which were taken to an estate near the place of disembarkation, and were soon afterwards distributed to the purchasers.

The vessel is said to have been sunk as soon as the slaves were put on shore.

The master, a Portuguese, and twelve men of the crew of this slaver (being chiefly foreigners and Americans), have come on to this city, and I understand that the master sailed again for the United States on board the American steamer "Empire City" a few days ago.

I have also been informed that this flagrant breach of the law and of the existing Treaties for the suppression of the Slave Trade has been denounced to the Lieutenant-Governor of Sagua, and I shall be much obliged by being favoured by your Excellency with any particulars which may have come to the knowledge of this Government, as well as the result of the exertions of the local authorities in this matter.

Since then that authority, as well as the Lieutenant-Governor, set out from the place of their residence, and have not rested, day or night, in their efforts for the investigation of the fact and of its authors. Havana, March 2, 1856.

THE Slave Trade is being carried on with great vigour, and there can be no doubt but that the good intentions of the Captain-General are constantly frustrated by those whose duty it should be, by faithfully executing his Excellency's orders, to put it down.

On the 18th ultimo, a Spanish sailor came to my residence, at a late hour of the night, and stated that two slavers, a brigantine and a schooner, had that afternoon passed this harbour, had made their private signal, and proceeded on to Cayo Blanco, beyond Bahia Honda, where all the necessary arrangements had been made for running their cargoes. He was consistent in his story; said that he himself had seen the vessels as they passed the port; that he had had previous information of their coming; and that he could not be mistaken as to one them, the schooner "Segunda Josefa," for that he knew her well as having already landed two cargoes of slaves at Punta de Cartas, which is a place on the south side of the island inside the Isle of Pines, in the district of Pinar del Rio.

Finding the man so positive, I did not hesitate, even at that hour, in dispatching him to the Captain-General, who at once caused the Spanish

Admiral to send off a war steamer, with the same sailor on board, in search of the reported slavers.

Two days afterwards the steamer returned to this port, and it appears, by the correspondence, a copy of which I have now the honour of inclosing herewith to your Lordship, that her cruize was without success. It is remarkable, however, that the inquiries which the Spanish Commander states, in his report, that he made of the masters of the coasting vessels he fell in with, and of the Alcalde de Mar, at the Morillo, were addressed to those who would most certainly mislead him, or withhold any information respecting slavers they might chance to have seen, since it is positively true that preparations are made on that coast to land no less than three cargoes of slaves expected to arrive to Don José Frezneda, of this city, by means of coasting schooners, and that one of them has been for some time lying at the Morillo for that special purpose.

I have also learnt that a cargo, consisting of upwards of 350 Bozals, was landed in the district of Pinar del Rio, in the month of January last, which also belonged to Don José Frezneda, and that the arrangements respecting them were made with the captain of the port of Batabano. There is no doubt as to the fact of the landing of the cargo of slaves just mentioned, and with regard to the connivance of the officers at Batabano, I shall make further inquiry, as I am told that he is ready and anxious to do business upon a great scale, taking no part in, but denouncing to the Government all small adventures.

"Most Excellent Sir,

"The Commander of the steamer 'Guadalquivir' arrived last evening and reported to me the following:

"Most Excellent Sir,—Apprized of the object of my mission by the information given to the Captain-General by the British Consul on the 18th, which your Excellency was pleased to transmit to me, I left this port as soon as steam was up, and I went to the Colorado Reefs, inside which I reconnoitred carefully that part of the coast comprised between the landing-place of the Mulata and El Morillo, without meeting with other vessels than coasting schooners, from whose masters I made inquiry of any vessel which might have touched there from Africa; all of them assuring me that they had not seen any, nor did they know of any being expected.

"I also communicated with Domingo Fabrega, Coast Inspector of El Morillo, without gaining better information from that person, in consequence of which, and the sailor who originated the denouncement being convinced that there was none of the vessels he supposed on that coast, I made for this port, where I have just entered, without any particular occurrence in the navigation. This is all that I can report to your Excellency as resulting from the commission confided to me.'

"I have the honour of reporting it to your Excellency for your knowledge."

And I transmit it to your Excellency, for your information, and in answer to the letter which you addressed me on the 18th instant, at 8 P.M.

Consul-General Crawford to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received April 1.)

My Lord,

Havana, March 2, 1856.

WITH reference to my despatch of the 29th January,* and my previous advices relative to the negro Cuaco and the mulatto Jem, belonging to Nassau, I regret to state that I have not received an answer from the Captain-General to my claim for their being given up to me as free subjects of Her Majesty, upon the plea of their having been forfeited to the Crown by the violation of the Act 46 Geo. III, cap. 52, of 1807; but I understand that they will be refused and be held in slavery, the opinion of the Council of the Real Acuerdo being opposed to the claim which I have preferred, and that a British Act of Parliament cannot be recognized here.

I am prepared to urge this claim on behalf of Her Majesty's Government with regard to these persons, upon the principle that they had become, by the operation of the law referred to, property of the Crown; they for that reason were not Dr. Anderson's slaves when they were sold by him here, and consequently he could not give legal titles with them to their purchaser, therefore they must and can be considered only as stolen, and as such should be restored, like any other chattels under similar circumstances, to the proper owner.

Their case is in every respect like that of Mary Ann Bethel, whose freedom was obtained with so much difficulty some years ago, and with regard to whom Her Catholic Majesty was pleased to pay a price to indemnify her owner, Madame Rossi, an act which it was said at that time would not be repeated by the Spanish Government, and I have reason to believe also, that that rule will be attempted to be made absolute with respect to the two men whose freedom we are at present asking for upon equally well-founded principles of right.

It is probable, then, that this matter will be referred to the Government at Madrid, and I anticipate that result of my efforts here, in thus reporting the case to your Lordship, in case it should be deemed expedient to make a representation upon the subject to the Government of Her Catholic Majesty.

I have, &c.

I HAVE the honour of reporting to your Lordship that there have been two arrivals here with Chinese labourers this year—

The British ship "Australia," 580 tons, from Swatao, brought 349 men, 7 women.

The British ship "Sam Enderby," 395 tons, from Macao, brought 196 men.

On board the former vessel there were twelve deaths, and four suicides by jumping overboard.

On board the latter there were four deaths from natural causes.

The master of the "Australia" informs me that the seven females are girls from about twelve to fifteen years of age, very miserable-looking creatures; that they were kept entirely apart from the male passengers on board his ship, and that, so far as he knows, they came willingly.

I feel myself much indebted to Her Majesty's Minister at Madrid for having availed himself of that opportunity to show the Spanish Government that the information which I receive and act upon in denouncing slave-trading is not always incorrect; and Lord Howden may safely assert, on any occasion, that my information is to be depended upon, however the truth may be disguised at Madrid, or the Captain-General may have been deceived here.

WITH reference to my despatches upon the subject of the disembarkation of slaves at the Sierra Morena, from on board of a brig which was a regular trader between this port and New Orleans for many years, called the "Pierre Soulé," I have to state to your Lordship that the efforts of this Government have been entirely fruitless; none of the Africans have been captured, and no one connected with the adventure has been detected.

Nor is this by any means so very extraordinary when it is considered to what a pitch of demoralisation the Slave Trade has operated in this country.

I have been informed that there are other cargoes expected by the slave-traders at that part of the coast, which have been contracted for with a Portuguese called Da Cunha, and this is most probably correct, for he alludes to one vessel specially as being part of that contract, viz., the "Midas," which has successfully landed her cargo.

The whole north coast of Cuba, from Maternillos to Cardenas, is covered by shoals and cays, having passages between them at several places, fit only for vessels of light draught of water, having experienced pilots, but which cannot be attempted by our cruisers, and if, as I have shown in the relation just given, the efforts of the Captain-General are frustrated by the connivance of his own officers, as is constantly the case, I fear the Slave Trade is an evil so rooted that it is very difficult to destroy, and General Concha's disappointments would be intolerable to his authority, were it not that such demoralisation may be reconcilable upon the principle that the introduction of labouring hands is adding to the productiveness of the island, and that it would be impolitic, or even dangerous, to proceed in an exceedingly rigorous manner against such offences.

I HAVE the honour of laying before your Lordship a copy of correspondence which I have had with the Captain-General respecting a landing of Bozal negroes recently effected at Granadillo, between Sagua and San Juan de los Remedios.

The number landed is variously stated from 350 to 610—the truth, probably, lays between these figures; and the part which is alluded to in General Concha's letter as having been captured consisted of 5 only.

I expressed surprise at this miserable result of the efforts of the Government officers, and have been told that the practice of the slave-traders now is, to divide the negroes, as soon as landed, into such minute lots, dispatching them in all directions so as to divide the attention of the Government officers, which I think exceedingly improbable, because of the number of auxiliaries which such an operation would require; and besides that, the spreading of the Bozals would, it is natural to suppose, increase the risk of their being caught. I therefore look upon this case as another proof of the inadequacy of the law, as it is administered, to put down the Slave Trade, which must and will continue to be carried on unless the Captain-General adopts the remedy of following all newly-introduced negroes, and capturing them wherever they may be found.

Consul-General Crawford to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received June 5.)

My Lord,

Havana, May 7, 1856.

WITH reference to my despatch dated the 24th ultimo, I have to state to your Lordship that I have not been able to obtain any further information respecting the disembarkation of slaves which is therein alluded to. Upon the other hand I have seen the most positive assurances written from that part of the coast, and have seen persons from Cabañas who declare there has been no such landing as that which I denounced to the Captain-General on the 21st ultimo, upon information which was received from an Englishman, who stated that he had seen the slaves, and that a great proportion of them were young lads and even children; but the denials are so strongly repeated that I cannot insist upon the correctness of my informant's statements.

I have learnt that about ten days ago a slaver tried to land her cargo near Batabano, but was chased off the coast by the authorities at that place. She will, doubtless, endeavour to effect her purpose elsewhere.

I have also learnt that another slaver, which appeared on the south coast in the district of Puerto Principe, had been obliged to put off, the slavers having been unable to obtain the connivance of the local authorities.

Such instances show that General Concha has found, at Batabano, and on the south coast of Puerto Principe, officers who will co-operate in suppressing the detestable Traffic; but it has been his Excellency's misfortune in too many instances, that his orders have been disregarded altogether, because of the superior influence of golden persuasion: I am therefore apprehensive that, by that means, both the slavers I have mentioned will have landed their cargoes at other places in the island.

Stronger measures than any hitherto adopted by General Concha are indispensably necessary to stop the Slave Trade; and his Excellency, apprehensive of alarming the inhabitants, has never had the nerve to authorise his officers to follow recently-landed negroes on to the estates, but has acted up to the letter of the provisions of the penal law, so that Bozals, once upon a property, are safe.

In other respects the Captain-General, I confidently believe, does his best, by the issuing of the most stringent orders, to put a stop to the Traffic; but, as I have said in another part of this despatch, those orders are not obeyed, and bribery is carried on in such a manner as that proofs of subornation cannot be obtained, and so the Traffic continues to be carried on.

The enemies of General Concha now and then propagate stories as to his Excellency being accessible, and that he receives large sums from the slavers. I have never for one moment believed such statements, and am satisfied that Don José de la Concha, although he has not succeeded in putting down the Slave Trade, has never lent himself to anything like dishonour in conniving at its being carried on.

Havana, June 28, 1856.

ON the 12th instant I addressed a communication to the Captain-General respecting a disembarkation of slaves which took place near Cabañas on the 8th.

The circumstances are correctly stated in my letter to his Excellency, a copy of which, as well as a copy of General Concha's answer, I have now the honour of laying before your Lordship.

General Concha's answer, as your Lordship will observe, does not throw much light upon the subject, but I am enabled to state to your Lordship that an "Oidor" of the Royal Audiencia was sent to Guanajay (the seat of the local Government of the district in which the landing was effected), to investigate the matter, and form the processes against those concerned.

Numerous arrests were ordered, several of the Government officials included. Don Juan Aguirre was taken up, but M. Ascarrate escaped.

I may be mistaken in my anticipation of the result of the labours of the Commission at Guanajay, but as I understand Don Juan Aguirre, whose agency in this affair is notorious, has been put at liberty, I presume that the whole guilt of the transaction will be imputed to Ascarrate, who, as I before stated, has escaped, or is not to be found, and so this commission will be just as unproductive as all the rest have hitherto been in such like cases.

The "Oidor," M. de Rosales, to whom the commission has been confided, is a magistrate of the most upright character, and will do justice according to the proofs before him; but in this country proofs of slave-trading it has been found impossible to obtain, and false testimony for almost any purpose is found to abound; so that a Judge of M. de Rosales' reputation, or any who will not give way to the allurements to which they are exposed when detached from the Royal Audiencia upon such services, have to be deceived by a chain of false testimony, the getting up of which is nowhere better understood than here in the Island of Cuba.

The 40 (odd) Bozals of this last expedition, when captured at the Yngenio Santiago, were provided with their cedulas; another proof, if such were needed, of the corruption which pervades all branches of the public administration here.

Havana, June 12, 1856.

IT has come to my knowledge that a cargo consisting of about 300 Bozal negroes was landed near Cabañas on or about the 8th instant.

I understand that some 40 of them have been captured by your Excellency's officers, but that the remainder of these Bozals have been sent off to various places in the interior, under the direction of a person who offered to take charge of them, and who supplied the captain of the slave-vessel with money to pay his crew, and that said vessel, after having landed the negroes, proceeded on to the westward, supposed for New Orleans.

I have also heard that the person who received these Bozals and advanced the money to the slaver-captain, was not the owner of the expedition, and that another person to whom they belong, or were consigned, has since presented himself, and asked for the negroes, but that they have been refused by the person who received them until payment has been made of the demands he makes for his commission and the money he has advanced.

IN answer to your Honour's letter of the 12th instant, in which you communicated to me the information which you had obtained respecting a landing of Bozals recently effected near Cabañas, I can merely say to your Honour, that by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bahia Honda 49 Bozals have been captured, who are already in this city, not being able to give your Honour further particulars regarding the parties concerned in the expedition, which data can only be derived from the result which may be shown by the trial which is being instituted; and adding to your Honour that I have adopted all the measures best calculated to effect the capture of the rest of the Bozals which may have been landed.

Havana, July 10, 1856.

I TRANSMIT herewith, under flying seal, a letter which I have addressed to the Earl of Chichester, containing some particulars of the case of John Baptist Dasalu, the emancipated African, who, I did myself the honour of reporting to your Lordship in my despatch of the 28th ultimo, had been discovered and redeemed, and who would be sent to England by the present mail steamer.

I consider that I have been most successful in the cause of humanity in the tracing of this African, the information I had to proceed upon being so scanty, but it has been a matter which has not been lost sight of since I had the honour of receiving your Lordship's instruction.

WITH reference to your despatch of the 10th ultimo, I inclose for your information, a copy of a letter I have received from Lord Chichester, conveying the thanks of the Church Missionary Society for the successful efforts which have been made to trace, and to send to this country, the emancipated, African John Baptist Dasalu.

My dear Lord,

Stanmer, August 14, 1856.

I AM desired by the Committee of the Church Missionary Society to convey to you their best thanks for the efficient measures by which, under your orders, the African J. B. Dasalu has been recovered, and sent back to this country.

The Committee are also much indebted to Mr. Crawford for his successful efforts in carrying out your Lordship's instructions.

The African, who arrived in good health, is most grateful for the kindness shown him by the Consul and other friends, and will be sent to Africa in the course of next month, by the Society.

I am, &c.

Consul-General Crawford to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received September 15.)

My Lord,

Havana, August 18, 1856.

I HAVE the honour of laying before your Lordship a copy of a correspondence which was given rise to by a letter dated the 18th of June last, which I received from Don Pedro de Regil y Peon, the British Vice-Consul at Merida de Yucatan, respecting some 80 Indians, who, according to the information which he had received, were collected at the Island of Cozumel, and were intended from thence to be embarked on board the fishing-smacks of Don Francisco Marty, to be disposed of here in Cuba.

I lost no time in addressing M. Torrescano, the Mexican Consul, upon this subject, transmitting to him a copy of the Vice-Consul's letter; and I addressed a despatch to Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Mexico upon this important subject.

I have since received from the Mexican Consul an official letter, stating the result of an investigation which the Government of Yucatan inform M. Torrescano had been gone into, and which I conceived it to be my duty to forward to Mr. Lettsom, at Mexico, so as to enable him, by communicating with Don Pedro de Regil y Peon, to ascertain the truth of this matter, as I cannot but consider it very suspicious that Don Juan Bautista Anduse should be mentioned, knowing his connection with Don Francisco Marty y Torrens' schemes for kidnapping Indians on a former occasion.

Sir,

Merida, June 18, 1856.

I HAVE to acquaint you that I have this day received information that, at the Island of Cozumel, there are 80 Indians, who, without having been legally contracted, are intended to be shipped on the fishing-vessels of Mr. Marty without passports, and in contravention of the orders of the State Government, to be sold in the Island of Cuba.

I have reason to believe that this information is true, therefore I place it before you, that you may proceed according to the instructions you may have received from Her Majesty's Government, who, you know, are so much interested in putting down so odious and criminal a Traffic.

I have, &c.

Inclosure 2 in No. 535.

Consul-General Crawford to Mr. Lettsom.

Sir,

Havana, July 11, 1856.

I BEG leave to draw your attention to the inclosed copy of a letter which I have received from Don Pedro de Regil y Peon, the British Vice-Consul at Merida, acquainting me that a number of Yucatan Indians (some 80) were at the Island of Cozumel, without having been legally contracted, and that they were intended to be embarked, without passports, on board the fishing-vessels of Don Francisco Marty, contrary to the orders of the Yucatan Government, to be sold in this island.

This Don Francisco-Marty y Torrens has been extensively engaged in this infamous Traffic before now; and although he received a check upon one occasion, and had the survivors of one of his expeditions taken from him and sent back to Yucatan, it seems that the profits arising from such villainy are so great that he has again engaged in it.

I learn from a good source here that the privilege granted to this man by the Government of Yucatan (which never was authorized by the Superior Government of Mexico), having some time ago been annulled by an order which was issued upon the representation of Mr. Doyle, of the abuses practised under that concession, Don Francisco Marty y Torrens has, nevertheless, been able to negotiate with the authorities of Yucatan, and has, for a consideration or bribe of 200 dollars a-month, which he pays again secretly, and without the authority of the Superior Government of Mexico, obtained a renewal of his privilege.

I lost no time in addressing M. Torrescano, the Mexican Consul here, upon that important subject, and I transmit herewith a copy of that correspondence; but it lays with the Government of Mexico to crush this Traffic in human flesh by inflicting an exemplary punishment upon the authority in Yucatan, which would have the effect of deterring others from its repetition.

I have, &amp;c.

The Mexican Consul at Havana to Consul-General Crawford.

Translation.)

My dear Sir and Esteemed Colleague,

BESIDES the other steps which the Consulate considered necessary to take, in consequence of the note which you addressed to me on the 9th of last month, I thought it opportune to address myself to the Government of the State of Yucatan, and of date of the 18th of the same I have been answered as follows:

“As soon as I took charge of the government of this State, I used all my zeal and vigilance that the natives should not be carried abroad: satisfying thus my private feelings, and very especially the duty I have to comply with the supreme dispositions directed to counteract the abuses which probably would be committed with the utmost impunity.

“Consequently the moment that, in the month of June last, I had information that, on board a schooner called the “Ramona,” belonging to the foreigner Don Juan Bautista Anduse, it was proposed to embark 82 Indians to convey them to the Island of Cuba, I dictated the most efficacious measures to prevent that embarkation, even to the extreme of directing that an armed force should go to the Island of Cozumel, at the expense of the State Treasury, to investigate this matter because it was said that at that island the natives were whom it was intended to embark.

“The result of that investigation, which was conducted with legal formality, and of which I shall give an account to the Supreme Government of the nation, was, that neither on the said Island of Cozumel, nor on board Anduse's schooner, did they find a single Indian.

“Which I state to you in answer to your attentive official letter of the 11th current; but notwithstanding I shall be obliged to you if you have notice of Indians being brought to your island, you will let me know, so as, without loss of time, to proceed to the investigations, in order to discover the guilty persons.”

And in transcribing this to your Honour, I have to state that the Supreme Government of the Mexican Republic, according to what his Excellency the Secretary of State informs me, is occupied with this matter, with the view of preventing the clandestine extraction of the Indians.

Please, Mr. Consul, to accept, &c.

Consul-General Crawford to the Mexican Consul at Havana.

My dear Sir and Colleague,

Havana, August 12, 1856.

I HAVE had the pleasure of receiving your letter of yesterday's date, acquainting me of the steps you have taken in consequence of my communication of the 9th ultimo, upon the subject of the abduction of Indians from the Province of Yucatan, and transmitting to me a report from the Government of that province, to the effect that, in consequence of the reports that had reached them in the month of June last, respecting the schooner “Ramona,” belonging to the foreigner Don Juan Bautista Anduse, on board which it was proposed to embark 82 Indians, for the purpose of transporting them to this island from Cozumel, an investigation was ordered, and which was gone into with all legal formality; when it resulted there were no Indians found at said Island of Cozumel, or on board the schooner of the said Don Juan Bautista Anduse.

I observe with great satisfaction that the Superior Government of Mexico is occupied in devising the means of preventing the clandestine extraction of the Indians from that territory.

I beg, &c.

Sir,

WITH reference to my despatch of the 11th ultimo, I have now the honour of transmitting herewith a copy of a letter which I have received from M. Torrescano, the Mexican Consul at this place, by which it would appear that the information which was given to Don Pedro de Regil y Peon, the British Vice-Consul at Merida, and which he communicated to me, was without foundation.

It would, therefore, be advisable to communicate with Don Pedro de Regil y Peon upon this subject, so as that he may be made aware of what is stated to have been the result of the investigation of the rumour by the authorities of Yucatan.

In the meantime, I have so high an opinion of Don Pedro de Regil y Peon's accuracy, that his explanation cannot, I think, be otherwise than interesting in elucidation of the truth.

My Lord,

Havana, October 7, 1856.

I BEG leave to lay before your Lordship a copy of correspondence which I have had with the Captain-General respecting a disembarkation of Bozal negroes, which I had heard was effected at Las Posas, a place situated a few leagues to the westward of Bahia Honda, but which his Excellency states it is his belief did not take place, as no sort of information respecting such an occurrence had reached this Government.

It is, however, certain that Her Majesty's steam-sloop "Falcon" chased a suspicious brigantine off Bahia Honda, and lost sight of her in a heavy squall during the night, in the direction of Las Posas, just about the date when the landing of the slaves was said to have taken place, and Commander Campion informs me that he is at a loss to conjecture what became of the chase, but it is quite possible, in my opinion, that she may have run through an opening of the Colorado reef, inside of which Las Posas is situated, whereas the "Falcon" had to keep clear of said reefs by altering her course to the northward.

In answer I must state to your Honour that I do not believe the fact of the landing to be correct, still less that of the capture of the Bozals, especially as I have no official nor confidential report of such an event, which assuredly, were it true, the authorities of the district in which it had taken place would have given me, unless the communication they may have addressed to me has been delayed by the present weather.

It is very satisfactory that the result of the investigation of that matter by the authorities of Yucatan, which our interference gave rise to, should have been that the Indians referred to were enabled probably to return to their homes, as I am assured they have not been brought over here, and I have been informed by M. Torrescano, the Mexican Consul, that Anduz, the man who had been so long connected with Don Francisco Marty y Torrens, of this place, in the kidnapping of Indians, and the same who was convicted of that offence some time ago at Belize, British Honduras, has been captured and imprisoned in Yucatan.

My Lord,

I BEG leave to lay before your Lordship the copy of a correspondence which I have just had with the Captain-General respecting a cargo of slaves consisting of upwards of 600, which arrived at Sierra Morena, on Saturday the 18th ultimo, on board a vessel, barque-rigged, seemingly Spanish, from which they were transferred to two or more schooners and carried away to be landed, the slaver having sailed again the next day.

These slaves are, as I am credibly informed, part of those contracted for about seven months ago by Menendez y Valdevieso with the Portuguese Da Cunha, and for whose reception they had provided themselves with the requisite number of cédulas, so that, as the schooners were no doubt furnished with passes, as if for slaves going from one part of the island to another, there would be no difficulty about landing them wherever they took them, and I understand they were all sold previously at from 700 to 800 dollars each for young, strong, and healthy hands.

I HAVE received information, upon which I can rely, that a cargo, consisting, it is said, of upwards of 600 slaves, has been landed from a vessel, barque-rigged, painted black, and, apparently, Spanish, which arrived at Sierra Morena on Saturday, the 18th instant, from whence she sailed again the day following; the Bozals having, in the meantime, been transferred to two or more schooners, which carried them to the places where they were landed, probably provided with passes and cédulas for the purpose. I have no doubt that this cargo was one of several others which were contracted for with the Portuguese Da Cunha, some time ago, by parties here who have long been notorious slave-traders, and who have an estate in the district beyond Cardenas.

I have also received information that several other cargoes of Bozal negroes are very soon expected by them; and it is even said, that there are advices in town of the vessels having arrived on the coast of this island, at the place where they were ordered to call for orders, so that the interested parties are in hourly expectation of hearing that they have safely landed their cargoes, they having provided themselves with cédulas for a very large number of Bozal negroes in anticipation.

ALTHOUGH I had no information respecting the disembarkation of Bozals which your Honour denounced to me in your communication of the 30th of this month as having been effected on Saturday, the 18th, at Sierra Morena, and notwithstanding that, owing to the time which elapsed without any official or extra-official information having reached this Government, I deemed such rumours unfounded, I immediately gave telegraphic orders to the authorities of the island that they should inform me whether, in their respective districts, such had taken place. All, nevertheless, have answered me, assuring me, on their honour, that the disembarkation has not been effected in their districts; and these statements, added to the absolute want of information before me of the occurrence, which is very improbable after the lapse of so many days, in case it had taken place, enables me to assure your Honour that such a disembarkation has not been effected.

Notwithstanding this, I have again charged those under my orders with the most strict vigilance, and wait for the results of the measures which they shall adopt in the matter.

WITH reference to my despatch of the 1st instant, I have it in my power to assure your Lordship that there is no doubt whatever as to the fact of the disembarkation of slaves in the manner described in that despatch. The British Vice-Consul at Cardenas informs me that they were landed from the schooners completely provided with cédulas, certificates of baptism, passes, as from another part of the island, &c., so that your Lordship can form an estimate of the amount of corruption by means of which this infraction of the law and of the Treaty has been effected.

I have not discovered where the whole of this cargo was put on shore, but one lot of 114 were landed at Sierra Morena.

The Governor of Cardenas, in whose district the Sierra Morena is, reported that he had not been able to discover anything whatever of the transaction.

My Lord,

I HAVE the honour of laying before your Lordship a copy of a written memorandum which I personally delivered to the Captain-General on the 19th instant, denouncing an intended landing of slaves at the Granadillo and the Sierra Morena, from on board the Spanish brigantine "Paquete de Trinidad." As I had my information from an undoubted source, and have not heard anything about the matter since its denouncement, the slaves have most probably been safely disembarked, and as they were one of the cargoes contracted for by Don Gregorio Menendez with the Portuguese Da Cunha, which I reported to your Lordship in my despatches dated the 12th and 14th of April last, for whom cédulas were at that time provided, it is also probable that all the other arrangements were then completed for their being safely disposed on shore upon their arrival, in a way similar to the recent slaver's cargo at Sierra Morena, subject of my despatches of the 1st and 29th instant; my observations in the last-mentioned being applicable to this new case, which I regret to state is not the last of a similar nature which it will be my duty to bring under your Lordship's notice.

Memorandum.

THE Spanish brig-schooner "Paquete de Trinidad" is expected every moment to arrive at the Granadillo; there, in the first place, to deliver about half her cargo of slaves, who are to be taken to an estate belonging to the Messrs. Abreu of Villa Clara, near to that landing, and afterwards the vessel will proceed to the Canal de los Barcos, in order to land the remainder of the slaves, who are to be taken to the estate of Don Gregorio Menendez in the Sierra Morena.

Don Gregorio Tejador left this city the day before yesterday, for the purpose of receiving these negroes, and attending to this business.

Havana, December 4, 1856.

IT is my disagreeable duty to report to your Lordship another infraction of the Treaty for the suppression of the Slave Trade which took place at a place called Las Charcas, in the district of Sancti Spiritu, in October last, where (about) 500 Bozal negroes were landed from a vessel, barque-rigged, and were purchased by the notorious, but most wealthy and influential, Don Mariano Borrel and Don Pedro Chopereno, from the Portuguese Botelho, who has made his appearance here under the assumed name of Olivia.

Mr. Vice-Consul Smith reports that 24 of these Bozals were resold by Chopereno to the estate called the Luiza, and that very great secrecy and caution were observed by Borrel and Chopereno so as not to compromise the Governor of Trinidad, the Brigadier Serrano.

Her Majesty's brig sloop "Arab" had arrived at Trinidad from Jamaica, having called at the Grand Cayman, where Commander Pearse learnt that a barque had been, about the end of October, and that the people there had been unable to ascertain what she was, but her crew, consisting of Spaniards and Portuguese, had plenty of money, and were heard to say that they had just landed a cargo of slaves on the Island of Cuba. Most of said barque's crew were transferred at the Cayman to a schooner which was to carry them to this island, and the barque herself sailed, it was said, for New York.

As Commander Pearse has returned to the Caymans he was to endeavour to obtain further information, and, if possible, some depositions as to the facts of the suspicious vessel's visit; there can be little doubt but she was the slaver which landed her cargo at the Charcas.

I have the honour of laying before your Lordship a copy of a communication which I yesterday addressed to General Concha upon this subject.

Don Mariano Borrel and Don Pedro Chopereno were both arrested and placed under trial by the late Captain-General, the Marquis de la Pezuela, for their slave-trading practices; but after General Concha's arrival the proceedings were discontinued, and the parties set free.

Mr. Smith informs me that it is rumoured at Trinidad that two more slavers are expected on that coast, which information he had communicated to the Commander of the "Arab," and would impart to the Commander of Her Majesty's sloop "Mariner," which vessel was soon expected to touch at Trinidad, and both brigs had orders to cruize off the south side of the island for prevention of the Slave Trade.

Her Majesty's sloop "Atalanta" arrived here from Jamaica on the 24th ultimo, with orders to cruize for the like purpose on the northern coast from Matanzas to Cape Antonio. I communicated to Commander Pasley all the intelligence which I had, and he sailed again on the 26th.

Consul-General Crawford to the Captain-General of Cuba.Havana, December 3, 1856.

INTELLIGENCE reached me, some time ago, that there had been a cargo of Bozal negroes landed in the district of Sancti Spiritu, in the month of October last. I have now ascertained that they were brought to a place near Las Charcas, by the notorious slave-trader M. Botelho, who, as I am informed, sold them to Don Mariano Borrel and Don Pedro Chopereno, of Trinidad, and they consisted of upwards of 500 slaves, of whom 24 were resold by Chopereno to a person who took them to an estate called La Luisa.

The slaver was a barque, and the crew, consisting chiefly of Spaniards and Portuguese, were landed afterwards by a schooner employed for that purpose, which brought them from the Gran Cayman. Botelho, passing by the name of Olivia, was within a few days past (about the 20th ultimo) in this city, at a boarding-house, No. 30, Calle de Compostela.

I request that your Excellency will be pleased to let me know, for the information of Her Majesty's Government, such particulars as may have been discovered respecting this matter, which I am informed has occupied your Excellency's attention.

MR. VICE-CONSUL SMITH, of date the 1st instant, has reported to me that another cargo, consisting of about 400 Bozal negroes, had been landed at a place a short distance to the windward (eastward) of Zarza, and that the Governor of Trinidad had gone out accompanied by troops in pursuit of the expedition by land, the Commander of the Coast Guard having proceeded in the Government launch for the same purpose. But Mr. Smith adds that, as the parties engaged in the transaction were said to have provided themselves with cedula, &c., in anticipation, and have taken the slaves into the neighbouring mountains to remain hidden until they can be disposed of, he doubts much that the Government officers will effect the capture of any of them.

Your Lordship will see in this new infraction another proof of the impulse recently given to the Slave Trade, that it can now be carried on with almost perfect safety owing to the connivance of these authorities, and the combined arrangements for having the cedula, certificates of baptism, and passes, are ready in anticipation; our cruisers not being able, because of their size and excessive draught of water, to go inside the cays, reefs, and shoals, where the slavers pass to land, or transship their cargoes.

I BEG leave to lay before your Lordship translation of the official answer which I have received from the Captain-General to the letter which I addressed to his Excellency on the 3rd instant, and which is referred to in my despatch dated the 4th, respecting a disembarkation of Bozal negroes which took place at Las Charcas in the month of October last.

General Concha states that the Lieutenant-Governor of the district where the disembarkation took place, had used every effort to discover the slaves and the parties implicated, being morally satisfied that the landing did really take place, notwithstanding all the precautionary measures put in practice.

But his Excellency expresses his belief that the number introduced was very much under 500, which I denounced; the class of vessel, in which it appears the expedition was conveyed, a barque, as stated in my letter, not being calculated to hold so many—a conclusion which my knowledge of maritime affairs entitles me to consider as totally erroneous.

The Captain-General of Cuba to Consul-General Crawford.

(Translation.)

Havana, December 15, 1856.

BEFORE receiving your Honour's communication of the 3rd instant, respecting the landing of Bozal negroes, which you denounce to me as having taken place two months ago in the jurisdiction of Sancti Spiritu, to the number of more than 500, who were sold to parties in Trinidad; already this Government had had advices of said landing having been effected, and had already adopted, in consequence thereof, the dispositions it considered best calculated, not only to ascertain the fact of the matter itself, but also to discover the whereabouts of the negroes and to punish the guilty parties. From the investigation ordered to be made by the Lieutenant-Governor of Trinidad, in whose jurisdiction the landing took place (and not in that of Sancti Spiritu, as your Honour states), it results that the said functionary acquired the moral conviction that the landing did actually take place, and that he could not frustrate it with all the precautions and measures he put in practice. I believe, however, that the number of negroes was very much under 500, which your Honour has denounced, as may be deduced from the class of vessel in which it appears the expedition was conveyed, which was a barque, as your Honour says in your letter. The Lieutenant-Governor continues his endeavours to discover the guilty parties, and although up to the present time not one has appeared, I have already ordered the dismissal from office of the captain of the district in which it seems the negroes were landed, for his want of zeal and vigilance in the fulfilment of his duties. I consider it opportune to place it also in your Honour's knowledge, that in virtue of the circumstances which you communicated to me respecting the slave-trader called Botelho, I have given the requisite orders for his arrest, and if from his declarations, after his apprehension, and from whatever further steps may be taken in this affair, the whereabouts of the Bozals may be inferred, and who were the accomplices in their disembarkation, I will proceed according to the laws and treaties which treat upon such matters, and I will acquaint your Honour of the result in due course.

My Lord,

Havana, December 19, 1856.

WITH reference to my despatches of the 1st and of the 28th ultimo, I have the honour of laying before your Lordship translation of a letter, of yesterday's date, which I have received from the Captain-General, stating that, notwithstanding the investigations gone into by the various authorities of Villa Clara, Sagua, and Cardenas, absolutely nothing could be discovered of the landing of Bozal negroes from a vessel which brought them to the coast near Sierra Morena, and his Excellency is therefore of opinion that no such landing took place.

It is not surprising that such should have been the result of these investigations, since the way was so paved for the introduction of those slaves as almost to defy detection at the places they were put on shore, provided as they were, on board the coasting craft which received them from the original slaver, with all the requisite papers as if coming from some other place in the island.

My information is so complete and circumstantial from undoubted sources, that I am quite satisfied of the fact, as well as of the combination which I have described, by which means the disembarkation was effected as I have reported it to your Lordship.

AFTER what I stated to your Honour in my letter of 31st October last, I received several communications from the Lieutenant-Governors of Villa Clara, Sagua, and Cardenas, in addition to the steps taken by the Chief Justice of the latter place, in order to ascertain the fact of the landing of 600 Bozal negroes; which, under date of the 30th of said month, your Honour denounced to me as having taken place at Sierra Morena, a district within the jurisdiction of Sagua.

From all the investigations made by all the authorities mentioned, with a zeal and scrupulosity highly commendable, it results that absolutely nothing could be proved with regard to the verification of such a disembarkation, I being also for my part convinced that it did not take place.

Which I say to your Honour, as a continuation of my aforesaid letter, and as a final answer to your said denouncement upon this subject.

IT appears by the result of the investigation practised by the Governor of Trinidad with regard to the disembarkation of 400 Bozal negroes, reported to have taken place a short distance to the eastward of Zarza, subject of my despatch dated the 10th instant, that no such landing took place there at that time; and Mr. Vice-Consul Smith has written to inform me that it is exceedingly doubtful whether there was such breach of the law or of the treaty.

I have learnt, however, from another source, that there was a cargo consisting of the same number of slaves landed about that time near Santa Cruz, a port situated considerably to the eastward of the other; but as my information has not been confirmed as yet from other quarters, I have not denounced either that reported by Vice-Consul Smith to the Captain-General, nor that which is said to have been effected near Santa Cruz; the latter I think very likely to be true, as I have been told there were several slavers expected by the traders of Trinidad and Sancti Spiritus, on that part of the coast.

I understand that these infractions have been committed with the most complete success and impunity by the parties concerned, notwithstanding that the coming of the "Paquete de Trinidad" was reported by me to the Captain-General so long ago as the 19th of November last, subject of my despatch dated the 29th of that month.

Your Lordship will observe that Mr. Vice-Consul Smith's denouncement has been contradicted by Brigadier Serrano, the Lieutenant-Governor of Trinidad, to General Concha, and that his Excellency has given implicit credit to his own officer's statement; but Mr. Smith informs me that there is no doubt of the fact as reported by him.

THE British Vice-Consul at Trinidad, under date the 5th instant, has reported to me that a cargo consisting of 300 Bozal negroes has been landed in the River Manati, a few days previously, that they were immediately provided with cedulas, and distributed amongst the estates in the neighbourhood.

Under date the 6th instant, the Vice-Consul confirms this intelligence, and states that the consignee of these slaves was Don Joaquim Eschania, and that some of them had been purchased for an estate called Buena Vista.

I would respectfully request your Excellency's attention to the frequency of disembarkations of Bozals at that part of the south coast, and the fact that Slave Trade, which under the Government of Colonel Riquelme was checked, appears to have taken quite an impetus, and seems to be carried on with impunity in that quarter.

I REGRET to be obliged to report to your Lordship that I have received intelligence from Mr. Vice-Consul Smith, dated at Trinidad the 30th ultimo, by which it appears that another cargo of Bozal negroes, consisting of upwards of 400, had been landed at Jibaro, in the jurisdiction of Sancti Spiritu.

I understand that there have been several Portuguese visiting the Districts of Trinidad and Sancti Spiritu, all of them slave-traders, and, most probably, connected with the expeditions which have, within the last few months, been successfully landed on that coast, their business having been with parties well known as slave-dealers in Trinidad, and Mr. Smith having denounced one of the said Portuguese, named Diaz, to Brigadier Serrano, he was arrested and sent here in charge, to be dealt with by the Captain-General, who informed me that he had retained him in prison to be sent out of the island, the circumstances of his connection with Salvador de Castro and other notorious slave-traders being undoubted.

I considered it my duty, under these circumstances, to suggest to General Concha the expediency of dealing in a similar manner with De Castro, and his Excellency assures me that he and others are under surveillance, and will be subjected to such "gubernative" measures as may be rendered necessary, should their conduct lead to the moral conviction that they continue to be engaged in the detestable Traffic.

Sir,

Havana, January 26, 1857.

I AVAIL of the opportunity of Her Majesty's sloop "Atalanta" to acquaint you that the Slave Trade continues to be carried on to very considerable extent, and that the result of the information which has reached me during the past year, 1856, is that that detestable Traffic is not diminished. It appears to be carried on by Portuguese agents in connection with parties in this island. The vessels being obtained, and dispatched from ports in the United States, either retain their American registers or have no papers of any kind on board, but would, if chased, show the American flag. They come to a certain place or places, either one of the cays which lay off the coast of Cuba, or are met at sea by a coaster with instructions where they are to go to run their cargoes, which, lately, have been taken out by the schooners and other craft belonging to the island, who go on that service provided with papers which protect the negroes when landed, and which papers are fraudulently obtained by the bribery and connivance of the Government authorities; or else they are taken to be run at points where the connivance of the local authorities has been previously secured.

But often the slavers from the African port are of such construction, that they can run in between and inside the innumerable cays and reefs which surround this island, where our cruisers cannot follow them if they saw them, and where they cannot be seen by the officers from on board of our men-of-war, and it is for that reason, and no other, that they escape the vigilance of our naval Commanders.

I am, therefore, of opinion that a class of vessels of lighter draft of water than any which are at present employed upon that service would, probably, be more efficient, not passing 6 to 10 feet draught, and in sufficient numbers to watch the coast well, would, I submit to your superior judgment and experience, be more likely to check and put an end to this horrible Trade in human flesh, and, if you should be of the same opinion, perhaps you may think it advisable to suggest such an alteration in the proper quarter.

Inclosure 2 in No. 559.

Consul-General Crawford to Rear-Admiral Fanshawe.

(Extract.)

Havana, February 2, 1857.

I HAVE the honour of transmitting herewith a copy of a letter which, on the 26th ultimo, I addressed to the Commodore at Jamaica upon the subject of the Slave Trade, which continues to be carried on in this island, and with reference to the opinion which I have therein expressed with regard to the class of vessels which are employed cruising to prevent that horrible Traffic, I think it necessary to state that that opinion is founded upon the experience of many years' residence, and the result of the efforts of Her Majesty's cruisers during that period, and for some time previous, enabling me to report that not one slaver with slaves on board has been brought into this port for sixteen years, and the captures by the "Vestal" the only ones which, with two or three exceptions, have come under the jurisdiction of the Mixed Court. Previous to that time the captures of slavers with slaves on board were numerous, but never in proportion to what might have been the case had the cruisers been vessels of a description better adapted for the arduous service in which they were engaged, experience having shown the danger to which our officers and men exposed themselves by boating expeditions inside the cays and islands, as in the case of Lieutenant Murray, of the "Rover," and others, where the cruisers, being unable to follow the slavers, their fleetier craft, of lighter draught, were followed by the cruiser's boats, and disappointment and loss of men was the consequence of the untiring zeal which characterizes our naval Commanders, who have done all that skill and energy could effect in the execution of their duty.

It is that untiring execution of their duties by our officers which has rendered it necessary for the slavers to devise the means of avoiding our cruisers, and so the trader (if not calculated to run inside the cays and reefs) is met at some given point by craft of lighter draught of water, and by these last the slaves are brought in and landed in the way I have described in my letter to Commodore Kellett, and I think I may safely assert that, unless the prevention of the Slave Trade is carried out by cruisers such as I have described, and in sufficient numbers effectually to guard the whole coast of the island, the Slave Trade will continue to be carried on as it is, and has been ever, since the celebration of the Treaty for its suppression.

I HAVE the honour to inform you that information having reached me on the 27th ultimo, to the effect that 900 slaves are in irons in a barracoon at a town called Balandogoo, in the Rio Pongas, said to be the property of a Spaniard named Calantovah, I at once communicated the same to the Senior Naval Officer of the Northern Division.

Mr. Calantovah, the owner of those slaves, is supposed to have gone to the Havana for the purpose of making his arrangements respecting the disposal of them, and he is expected to return about a month from this date, with two schooners to ship the slaves for transportation to Cuba.

I have made the Senior Naval Officer acquainted with the proceedings and intentions of this slave-dealer, including the manner proposed for eluding the scrutiny of any searching officer, which is to stow the slaves in the bottom of the vessel, covering them with a light deck, on which a load of ground-nuts are shipped, thus making the vessel appear in the character of an honest trader, with the usual cargo on board.

I beg leave to add, that this information satisfies me that I am correct in believing the great number of slaves which are passed in canoes from the south to the northward of this Colony are intended for transportation, and not for domestic labour, as some persons are pleased to suppose.

The other landing was effected near to and in the district of Bahia Honda, from the Spanish schooner "Pajaro Verde," and consisted of between 400 and 500, not one of either cargo having been captured by the authorities, who, your Lordship will observe by General Concha's note, have denied all knowledge of such disembarkations.

Mr. Smith, the Vice-Consul at Trinidad, and my informant on the north side, with regard to the occurrence near Bahia Honda, have both confirmed their first communications, so that I have no doubt of the facts which I have reported to his Excellency, and the inducements, now stronger than ever they have been are such, that I am apprehensive the Slave Trade will be carried on with renewed activity.

Foreign Office, April 28, 1856.

THE Brazilian Minister for Foreign Affairs has informed Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Rio de Janeiro that the Brazilian Legations and Consulates are made acquainted with the information which from time to time reaches the Imperial Government with regard to the designs of the slave-traders in the United States, Havana, and on the coast of Africa; and the Brazilian Minister further states, that if the Diplomatic and Consular Agents of Her Majesty will communicate with the Legations and Consulates of Brazil, they will always meet with the greatest willingness on the part of Brazilian Agents to co-operate with them for the suppression of the Slave Trade.

I have accordingly to instruct you to communicate freely on Slave Trade matters with your Brazilian colleague on all occasions on which you may be of opinion that such a course would be useful in frustrating the designs of the slave-traders.

Acting Consul Lindegren to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received June 14.)

My Lord,

Porto Rico, May 26, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge receipt of your Lordship's despatch of the 28th April last, stating that the Brazilian Minister for Foreign Affairs had informed Her Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Rio Janeiro, that the Brazilian Legations and Consulates are made acquainted with the information which, from time to time, reaches the Imperial Government with regard to the designs of the slave-traders in the United States, Havana, and on the coast of Africa, and that the Brazilian Government further states that, if the Diplomatic and Consular Agents of Her Majesty will communicate with the Legations and Consulates of Brazil, they will always meet with the greatest willingness on the part of Brazilian Agents to co-operate with them for the suppression of the Slave Trade.

As long as the present Governor remains here I see no chance of any attempt being made to renew the Slave Trade in this island; and although I know from undoubted authority that, owing to the recent mortality among the working classes occasioned by the cholera, several persons were desirous of applying to the General for permission to undertake an expedition, they desisted doing so, on account of his well-known animosity to the Traffic, and his Excellency, with the view of obviating the want of labour as much as possible, has lately granted a privilege to a commercial house here to bring in 3,000 Coolies by way of trial, to be followed up by others in case of its proving successful. I shall not, however, hesitate to communicate with my Brazilian colleague whenever I am of opinion that such a course would be useful in frustrating the designs of slave-traders.

I have, &c.

Acting Consul Lindegren to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received June 14.)

My Lord,

Porto Rico, May 27, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to inform your Lordship, that on the 23rd of March last, a negro girl named Celinda presented herself at this Consulate with a letter, copy of which I have the honour to annex, stating at the same time, that although born a slave in the Dutch Island of Curazoa, she had been emancipated in the Danish Island of St. Thomas, where she had been residing with her mistress some years, when that event took place in 1848. Some time subsequently she accompanied her original mistress to this place, where it would appear that person, doubtless instigated by a second party, threatened to again reduce her to slavery, and as there were neither Dutch nor Danish Consuls in this island, she had applied to me for protection.

I readily granted her an asylum, telling her she could remain in my house until her case could be investigated, finding which her pretended mistress instantly drew up, and presented personally a petition to the Governor, claiming her as her slave, which petition his Excellency forwarded me in a letter dated 28th of March, copy of which, with translation and my answer thereto, I have the honour to inclose. General Lemery subsequently informed me verbally that he had referred the case to the Governor of St. Thomas, asking him information upon the subject.

In this state the affair rested until yesterday, when I received a despatch from the Governor of St. Thomas, copy of which I have also the honour to inclose, returning me thanks for the steps I had taken in the girl's behalf, and fully confirming her claims to freedom.

Trusting your Lordship will approve of my proceedings in this matter, I have, &c.

Mr. Bithorn to Acting Consul Lindegren.

Sir,

St. John's, Porto Rico, March 23, 1856.

THE bearer Celinda, native of Curazoa, has begged me to apply to you as Her Britannic Majesty's Consul in her behalf, stating that she has been illtreated yesterday by Mr. E. Gimenez, brother of Don Eleuterio, and although being emancipated in St. Thomas in 1848, has been threatened by him to be tied, and sent to the country, where he is living, in case he could not sell her here in town.

It seems Mr. Gimenez is a frequent visitor of Señora Cohen's house, to whom this girl belonged until the emancipation in St. Thomas, and having followed her former mistress by her own free will to this place four years after the emancipation, Mr. Gimenez wishes to make her believe, that she is still a slave, as she cannot show any paper concerning her freedom. To my knowledge the bearer is an honest, industrious person, and I have therefore not hesitated in recommending her to your kind protection, hoping you will be able to see justice done her without having much trouble.

I remain, &c.

MRS. SARAMI COHEN, an inhabitant of this city, has made her appearance before me with the accompanying petition soliciting from me the necessary orders so that the slave Celinda, belonging to her, be forced to return to her house, from which she has been absent for some days, and is, it would appear, in that of your Honour; in consequence of which you will please inform me of what you know in the matter, so that I may be enabled to come to a decision upon the subject.

Inclosure 3 in No. 568.

Acting Consul Lindegren to the Governor of Porto Rico.

Sir,

Porto Rico, March 31, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge receipt of your Excellency's note of the 28th instant, inclosing me a petition made by Donna Sarami Cohen, relative to a negro girl that she affirms belongs to her, but who had run away from her house, and had taken refuge in mine, and asking me for information upon the subject.

In reply, I beg to state to your Excellency that, on Sunday the 23rd instant, the girl Celinda came to me with a letter, copy of which I inclose, and by which your Excellency will see that she had been ill-treated by Don Euclides Gimenez, who it appears cohabits with, and has two children by, Sarami Cohen. The girl also states, and there are persons here who know it to be the fact, that at the time of the emancipation of the slaves in the Danish islands, she had been for some time living with her mistress, domiciliated in that of St. Thomas, and that she continued there for four years afterwards; the girl, therefore, is unquestionably free: and in addition to this I am told, from very reliable authority, that Sarami Cohen received, through her sister, who still lives at St. Thomas, an indemnification for her from the Danish Government.

The unjustifiable attempt, therefore, of Sarami Cohen and Don Euclides Gimenez to reduce her to slavery in this island is highly censurable, and I have no doubt your Excellency will consider it and dispose of it as such. I told the girl that although I pitied her it was a case in which I could not officially interfere, and recommended her to present herself personally to your Excellency, which she intended doing on Wednesday last, Monday and Tuesday being holidays.

On Tuesday, however, Don Francisco Sigel, Head of the Police here, called at this Consulate, and left a verbal order that she was to present herself to the Secretary immediately, a circumstance that, had it not been on account of the day, would not have surprised me, as I am told M. Garcia received several "empeños" on the mistress' behalf. I however desired her to go immediately, and sent my clerk with her to explain matters. M. Garcia told her she could return here, and that he would speak to your Excellency upon the subject.

The matter remained in this state until I received your Excellency's note, to which I should have replied before had my time not been taken up with other matters consequent upon the arrival of the steamer.

I have spoken with persons who knew the girl in St. Thomas, and they all declare her free, and the would-be mistress has repeatedly said so before the people residing in her neighbourhood. A person who read the letter relative to the money paid by the Danish Government is also, I am told, in the island, and would, no doubt, substantiate the fact if called upon to do so.

I beg to return to your Excellency the petition referred to, and have, &c.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's despatch dated the 21st ultimo, transmitting to me a copy of a despatch dated the 14th of last October, addressed to your Lordship by Her Majesty's Minister at Rio de Janeiro, stating he has been informed that slave-vessels are furnished with supplies from these islands, and that a Portuguese, named Lima, is said to be the person who furnishes them.

I beg to assure your Lordship that I am not aware of any such transaction taking place within my jurisdiction; and from the manner in which affairs of this nature become known, I should deem it almost impossible that they could take place without coming to my knowledge. My Vice-Consuls—copies of whose despatches I have the honour to inclose—express themselves of the same opinion with myself, and are unaware that any person bearing the name of Lima is residing in these islands. I should therefore be inclined to believe that Mr. Scarlett's informant was in error when alluding to the Canary Islands, and that some other group was intended.

My Lord,

ON the 16th instant his Excellency the Captain-General Don José de la Concha arrived at this city, and remained till the evening of the 19th. During his stay every demonstration of respect was shown to him by all classes of the people, who held a sort of jubilee in honour of his arrival.

A fitting opportunity having presented itself, I expressed to his Excellency the satisfaction which it must have afforded Her Majesty's Government to learn that, owing to the vigilance and zeal of his Excellency's officers in command during the past year, so many slavers had been unable to effect a landing of their miserable victims on the coasts of this jurisdiction, and that to be able to report a continuance of such praiseworthy conduct on the part of those officers would always be for me a source of the highest satisfaction.

General Concha in reply was pleased to say, that his orders upon that subject were most peremptory, and that although the extent and nature of these coasts afforded great facilities for carrying on the Slave Trade, he nevertheless felt confident that the measures he had taken for the purpose would speedily result in its total annihilation in this island.

Previous to the Brigadier setting out for his new destination, he was invited by General Concha to visit the capital to receive his instructions, which were, I learn from himself, principally with regard to the African Slave Trade, which he was to prevent by every means in his power.

Since his arrival here two or three suspicious vessels have appeared on this coast, but owing to the prompt and well-combined measures taken by the Brigadier, any attempts which the slave-traders may have made have been thwarted, thus again affording me the lively satisfaction of being able to report to your Lordship that there have not been any slaves from Africa landed in the jurisdiction of this Vice-Consulate at any time during the three months ended this day.

I have to instruct you to use your utmost efforts in order to prevail upon the Pasha of Tripoli to take effectual measures for the purpose of securing the observance within his Regency of the Vizirial letter of the Porte of the 18th March, 1855, prohibiting the exportation of slaves from the Regency of Tripoli to Crete.

Consul-General Herman to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received June 30.)

My Lord,

Tripoli, June 20, 1856.

IN my despatch of the 28th April I had the honour to report to your Lordship that the exportation of negro slaves had been prohibited from all the ports of this Regency.

* No. 638.

Some days after the promulgation of this order, I discovered that 95 slaves had been embarked by the principal municipal authority of the town during the night, and dispatched at daybreak to the Levant.

I immediately informed the Governor-General that I should be compelled to report to your Lordship and to Her Majesty's Ambassador at the Porte, this flagrant infraction of the order in question by a public authority, and that too at a time when it is particularly incumbent on all persons of rank and station in the land to set an example of devotion to their country by actively co-operating in the application of those measures of reform which it is the enlightened solicitude of the Government to introduce into the Ottoman Empire.

This morning I received a reply to my communication, the substance of which I can only to-day convey to your Lordship, as there is no time for a translation.

His Excellency states that at the period when he received orders from the Porte to prohibit the further exportation of slaves, from the recent arrivals of several large caravans from different parts of the interior, there were upwards of 6,000 in the Regency; that from the difficulty of subsisting these unfortunates, exhausted as the country is by the triple calamity of civil war, pestilence, and famine, he had, by the advice of the Municipal Council, taken upon himself to extend the period of exportation to the 15th of the Ramadan (19th May), during which interval he admits that, in addition to the 95 mentioned by me, 40 or 50 more were embarked in two other ships; and concludes by assuring me that henceforward the prohibition will be rigorously enforced.

But so closely interwoven into all the habits and traditions of Turkish life is domestic slavery, and so powerfully arrayed is the whole body of the ancient prejudice with all the inert resistance of ancient habits against the measure of prohibition, that for some time to come I fear it will be impossible to prevent a contraband trade in slaves from this Regency.

Excellency,

Tripoli, June 10, 1856.

I HAD the honour of receiving from your Excellency on the 26th April last, a despatch conveying the gratifying intelligence that by an Imperial firman the exportation of negro slaves from all ports of this Regency was henceforward prohibited, and, moreover, that the most precise instructions had been issued to all the public employés to rigorously enforce the execution of the measure.

It is with the most poignant regret that I have now to report to your Excellency that on the 13th night of the month of Ramadan, only twenty-three days after the promulgation of the order in question, the Sheik El Bled, by a base prostitution of the power and authority with which he is invested, under cover of the darkness, embarked 95 slaves on board his own vessel the "Eftichia," Captain Rais Mohamed, and dispatched her at daybreak in the morning to Smyrna, by a flagrant evasion of the usual custom-house regulations of the port.

This grave and outrageous violation by a public authority of the enlightened measure of humanity so recently promulgated by His Highness the Sultan, it becomes my imperative duty to report to Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and to Her Majesty's Ambassador at the Porte.

To your Excellency I must unequivocally express the opinion that in the present instance the offence is intensely aggravated by the status of the delinquent, the highest municipal authority of the town, and committed as it was at a moment when it is particularly incumbent on all persons of rank and station in the land to set an example of devotion to their country, by actively co-operating in the application of those great and salutary measures of reform which it is the enlightened solicitude of the Government to introduce in the various branches of the administration of the Ottoman Empire.

WITH reference to my despatch of the 20th instant, I have now the honour to transmit to your Lordship a copy of the examination taken in my presence of Antonio Scotto, a British subject, and an employé in the Quarantine Department of this place. This document will demonstrate the extremely loose and unsatisfactory manner in which the service of the Department in question is carried on.

I am well aware the Director may urge, that by virtue of superior orders from Constantinople he may issue bills of health without reference to any authority here; but whether the fact of leaving blank bills of health already signed, to be filled up at the discretion of the "escrivanos," be equally a standing order of the Department, remains to be proved.

Inclosure in No. 581.

Deposition.Tripoli, June 27, 1856.

THE following examination was this day made by the Undersigned:—

Antonio Scotto, sworn.

Q. Your profession?—A. Clerk of the Quarantine.

Q. How long are you in the service?—A. Some sixteen years.

Q. You are then well acquainted with all its rules and regulations?—A.

I am.

Q. When a vessel is about leaving the port for the Levant, what are the formalities required by the Quarantine?—A. The captain of the ship presents a "teskere" or "permis de départ," signed by the captain of the port, and countersigned by the custom-house. The captain must then present the passports or "teskeres" of the passengers, upon which the bill of health is granted.

Q. In the patent, do you make a nominal return of the passengers?—A. No, the aggregate number alone is given.

Q. The bill of health, by whom is it signed?—A. By the Director and medical officer with their seals.

Q. Who at present is the Director of the Quarantine?—A. Dr. Dickson, in the absence of the Director.

Q. In the early part of the past month of Ramadan were not some 90 to 100 people embarked during the night on board a vessel belonging to the Sheik

El Bled, and which sailed at daybreak the following morning?—A. Some hundred were embarked; but whether by day or night I know not.

Q. On this occasion were the usual formalities required by the Quarantine rigorously observed and fulfilled?—A. They were, with the exception of the permit of the captain of the port.

Q. Was not this document absolutely required by the Quarantine before issuing the “teskere” or patent; or was the Quarantine, by its instructions, justified in allowing the vessel to depart without it?—A. On this occasion we departed from the rule, as the Sheik El Bled guaranteed us against all the consequences of the infraction.

Q. Was this informality communicated to Dr. Dickson, and was it done with his consent?—A. It was.

Q. On your oath, did you not know that the major part of the people embarked on this occasion were negro slaves?—A. I did not see them with my own eyes, but I was informed they were slaves.

Q. Are you ignorant that some time before the exportation of slaves had been prohibited?—A. I only heard that the trade was to be abolished.

Q. Are you ignorant that the Decree was read in the Medglis by the Governor-General and communicated officially to the foreign Consuls?—A. I am ignorant of all this.

Q. You said just now that you had been informed that slaves had been embarked. When you took the patent to Dr. Dickson for his signature, did you inform him of this fact?—A. I did not.

Q. At what hour was the patent signed?—A. I cannot say, as blank patents already signed are left with me, which I fill up as occasion requires.

Q. In that case the direction of the Quarantine is entirely left to the “escrivanos;” they may accordingly dispatch vessels without the slightest reference to the Director?—A. That is the case.

Q. On this occasion, besides the usual permit of the Captain of the Port which you stated was wanting, was the certificate of the custom-house equally wanting?—A. The custom-house certificate is always annexed to the permit of the Captain of the Port.

Q. What is your monthly pay?—A. 150 Turkish piastres a-month, about 17. 10s. sterling.

Q. Did the chief of your Department never make known to you that the exportation of slaves was strictly prohibited?—A. Never.

Q. Are the public orders of the Government affecting the trade of the port never made known to you by the Director?—A. Never.

Q. Are you also ignorant that the exportation of cattle is prohibited?—A. Officially I am.

My Lord,

Tripoli, June 28, 1856.

I REGRET to have to report to your Lordship another infraction of the recent law against the exportation of slaves.

Some eight days ago a small Tunisian xebeque cleared out for Gerbi. On leaving the port she stood to the westward, and, at a point on the coast about ten miles from the town, took off between 50 and 60 slaves, and bore up for the Levant.

When this circumstance became known to the Pasha, he immediately reported it to the authorities at Constantinople, Smyrna, and Alexandria, for the purpose of taking those ulterior measures which the case required.

Three individuals, who were supposed to be the owners of the slaves, were cited to appear before him, and explain their conduct in the affair. These people, however, produced documents showing that they had disposed of the slaves some time before to the individuals who had smuggled them off. Until this matter can be cleared up they have been compelled to enter into heavy securities for their appearance when required.

In the meantime, it has been reported that a vessel answering to the description of this xebeque has been wrecked in the Gulf of Syrtis. A party of Cavalry has been sent off to ascertain the fact. The result I will communicate to your Lordship so soon as it may reach me.

Consul-General Herman to the Earl of Clarendon.—(Received July 28,)

My Lord,

Tripoli, July 1, 1856.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Lordship's despatch of the 28th May last, transmitting a Return of fourteen vessels that had arrived at the Island of Candia with slaves from this Regency.

When the Vizirial letter of the 18th March, 1854, prohibiting the exportation of slaves to the Island of Crete was made public here, it was, from the first, foreseen that it would prove utterly inoperative, so far as the jurisdiction of the authorities here was involved, and from the obvious reason, that it might be evaded by simply clearing out vessels destined for Candia for some other part of the Empire. Such was, in fact, the case of the three vessels from this port mentioned in Mr. Ongley's Return.

By a reference to the archives of the Captain of the Port, I find that all cleared for the Levant.

As the firman prohibiting the exportation of slaves from this Regency at the period when these vessels sailed had not been promulgated, the local authorities here had no power or authority to prevent their conveying slaves to Smyrna or other ports of the Levant, but this objection cannot be urged in favour of the authorities in Candia. Vessels, in contravention of the law, had entered the ports of the island, and yet no steps, it appears, were taken to detain them.

Although, as I have already had the honour to observe to your Lordship, in this case no blame attaches to the authorities here, I nevertheless expressed to the Governor-General the feelings of Her Majesty's Government on the subject, and the steps they will be compelled to take, should not greater vigilance be displayed for the future.

It is, however, but justice to the Pasha to state to your Lordship that his efforts to arrest the evil are unceasing; but, unfortunately, he stands alone: the whole body of ancient and inveterate prejudice is arrayed against him on this question. In fact, to the Mussulman mind, domestic slavery comes down recommended with the accumulated weight of old tradition and religious precept; it constitutes almost the fundamental condition of their social system.

Again, it must be borne in mind that this Regency is encompassed on three sides by a boundless desert, and, on the fourth, by an almost uninhabited seaboard of 1,600 miles. To prevent smuggling, with the slender means at the disposition of the Pasha, along so extended a line of frontier, is utterly impossible; but were even the converse the case, unless a corresponding zeal and activity be displayed in other parts of the Empire, no results would be achieved. But such a consummation is, I fear, extremely remote, since it is notorious that slaves are not only landed almost daily in the Ottoman capital, but are actually passed through the custom-house as objects of legitimate merchandize—a fact I should certainly have questioned had I not derived it from the authority of the Governor-General and of the Director of Customs here.

Thus it would appear that, in its practical operation, the late Imperial firman on the question of slaves bears a striking affinity to a Spanish Royal order—it is “obedecido y no cumplido.”

For this anomalous state of things there would appear to be but one remedy, namely, the total abolition of slavery throughout the Empire; a measure which was, some years ago, adopted by the Bey of Tunis, and with such happy results.

But at a moment when a series of great organic changes are in process of operation in Turkey, some of which may affect the very existence of the Empire,
